

CHORUS GIRL FOR WIFE?
YES; BUT NO GERMAN

Britain Much Concerned Over
Problem of Consort for Prince of Wales

MARKET IS DEPLETED

Clamor Grows That Future King Shall Choose From Among Englishwomen

LONDON, May 23.—English society has sidetracked most other activities for the serious business of picking a bride for the Prince of Wales. The Prince, himself, in France, is wooing the fortune of war, probably unaware of the concern he is giving English society.

Society's cause for concern is the fear that the Prince may follow the precedent of other heirs to the throne and marry a foreign princess—even a German one, for which the precedent is very recent. And society, spelled with either a small or a capital "S," isn't going to stand for anything like that. "A British queen for the British" is becoming society's motto, and it has passed from whispering tea-time circles to the bold publicity of the newspaper editorial page. Conservatives and radicals alike are declaring it.

"So far as Britain is concerned the German royal matrimonial emporium henceforth is a bankrupt and discredited concern, and the marriageable members of our royal family will be pleased to look for consorts nearer home." This is from Northcliffe's conservative Weekly Dispatch.

"We want no more foreigners in our royal family. It is not their fault, it is their misfortune, that they are pure German in blood, and that whenever and wherever a royal prince or princess is born it is pure German in blood. There is the British blood in our royal family. The remedy is obvious." That from the more radical Evening Star.

English opinion, at the present time, would rather see a British prince take his wife from the chorus or the gutter than from a German royal house. And that, of course, is not the alternative." So chimes in the Manchester Dispatch.

These newspapers and others are urging revision of the Royal Marriages Act, whereby princes of the royal line are almost compelled to marry foreign princesses. The law was passed in 1772 as the result of George III's anger at two brothers who married English ladies of far from royal rank. It has had many awkward consequences, since outside of Germany nearly all reigning houses are Roman Catholic, with whom an alliance would be impossible for the head of the Church of England.

This causes a correspondent of the London Time to say:

The Russian royal family are not barred on religious grounds, but after the recent revolution it would be a blazing indiscretion for our court to bring about an alliance with them. The royal families of Italy and Belgium are barred by Roman Catholicism and the French Bourbon and Orleans princesses or pretenders are equally ineligible for that reason or for the offense which would be given the French Republic.

As terrible examples of German alliances the ex-Czaritz and Queen Sophie of Greece are held up. The one is believed to have exerted great influence over the Czar and the other to have aided materially the Kaiser's control of King Constantine.

The German Queen Mother of Holland and the German Queen of Sweden likewise are held up to view as instances of the danger, while the Manchester paper brings the matter closer home, by saying:

"Even in England the position has not always been as clear as one would have liked to see it. We have seen a Royal mother opening bazaars in our midst of Polish descent and the brother of a royal prince who fought and died for England fighting for Germany and telling an American reporter that he hoped the fact of his defection had not caused him to be struck off the list of members of his London club."

The masses will not insist on the maintenance of the old system, the Dispatch says; "they always take the romantic view of affairs of the heart."

TIOGA CHORAL SOCIETY
EXCELS IN "ST. PAUL"

Mendelssohn's Oratorio Presented in Excellent Manner by Uptown Organization

The Tioga Choral Society has added to its laurels and given fresh proof of its enterprise by an admirable presentation of Felix Mendelssohn-Bartholdy's "St. Paul," one of the outstanding works of its class that the nineteenth century has added to the repertoire of great music. The presentation was given last night in St. Paul's Church, Broad and Venango streets. James B. Hartzell was the musical director of the entire evening, and had in addition to his vocal force a section of the Philadelphia Orchestra for the accompaniment.

Since its foundation the Tioga Choral has done much home missionary work in spreading the gospel of good music. Oratorios have been sung, artists introduced as soloists, and miscellaneous programs of artistic worth and educational value brought before an extensive residential section. The important work of the various neighborhood musical organizations can hardly be over-estimated. They have a social value in promoting community and civic spirit in their districts, they furnish first-hand knowledge of the technical phases of vocal and choral music to their members, they afford opportunity, incentive or inspiration for dwellers within their zone to come to concerts, and they inspire and develop interest in music which leads to support of the Philadelphia Orchestra, the capstone of local music.

It can be said at once that the members of Tioga Choral Society sing very well, with abundant volume and excellent quality of tone and with attention to details of vocal light and shade. Mr. Hartzell has drilled his forces well and they were able, under his capable conductors, to give proper effects to the broad, flowing choruses of Mendelssohn.

Mrs. Hot's crystalline tones, allight with multi-colored hues, were a delight in the hearing again, and Bessie Leonard, the contralto, added a rich, suave voice to the solo quartet. This was completed by Henry Merrick, tenor, and Donald Redding, baritone, two efficient singers, more familiar here in concert and recital programs, but with real talents for oratorio, the talents of reverent rendition, clean-cut diction and co-operation with the chorus. FLOURISHED PISTOL; ARRESTED

Cigar Manufacturer Held for Alleged Intimidation of Strikers

The flourish of a revolver when strikers stopped a detachment of strike-breakers he was escorting to his factory resulted in arrest for Giuseppe Genzame, proprietor of a cigar factory at 538 Washington avenue. Cigar rollers have been on strike at his factory for a week.

Genzame was walking with fifteen men toward the factory today when Mrs. Joseph Martelli, 818 Percy street, a striker, approached him, leading a group of strikers. Policeman Pearl, of the Seventh and Carpenter streets station, saw Genzame draw a revolver and arrested him. Magistrate Coward held Genzame under $1000 for carrying a revolver without having a license.

The Cadillac "Sports" Phaeton

Many motorists have evinced a preference for the style of car which has come to be designated as the "Sports" type. But they have not been disposed to content themselves with a mechanism deficient in those qualities which make for real snap and zest in motoring.

In the new Cadillac four-passenger Phaeton there is combined a car of low sides, inclined wind shield, speedy lines and a chassis of surpassing mechanical excellence.

In striking contrast with the usual car of comparable body type, it affords the acme of luxurious riding qualities, lending itself admirably to the requirements of the small family.

The Cadillac's Newest Creation

That the mechanism of the Cadillac V-type "Eight" represents the most advanced development in motor-driven vehicles, has passed beyond the stage which admits of discussion.

You may set greatest store upon quietness, or steadiness, or smoothness, or speed, or comfort, or all 'round road-ability, or upon body lines that are smart and racy, and at the same time pleasing and beautiful.

But it is when you see and feel how, in the Cadillac, all of these qualities are so successfully blended that you awaken to the realization of how immensely fascinating your motoring can be.
