BENNY LEONARD ENTERS ON CHAMPIONSHIP REIGN HERE IN BOUT TONIGHT WITH JOE WELSH

MEL COOGAN WAS SET FOR TITLE, BUT FRED WELSH FIGURED WRONG, LEONARD'S PUNCH UPSETTING DOPE

Briton Was to Have Made Brooklyn Boy a Present of Crown After Retiring on July 4

Great Reception to Be Given Mr. Benny Leonard

B. A. Van Maaren will escort Benny Leonard, new lightweight champion, his manager, Billy Gibson, and George Engel, trainer, in his machine from the Vendig to the Olympia Club at 8:30 p. m., headed by a fife and drum corps, with Jack Weinstein, the drum major. Following the machine will be a quadruple file of several thousand Philadelphia followers of the titleholder. Red lights will be all ablow and the bursting of fire crackers also will be a feature. Gibson and Engel, although they do not know it, are to be given presents for their success in working Leonard into the lightweight throne. Each will be given a diamond-studded gold penknife by "Drum Major" Weinstein.

By LOUIS H. JAFFE

SOME wise man many, many years ago said, "History repeats itself," and he said a whole mouthful. Ever since Napoleon met his Waterloo others have collided against a similar snag, and Fred Welsh's Waterloo was Benny Leonard. Had it not rained on the eve of June 17, 1815, the history of Europe would have been changed, was a statement made by the late Victor Hugo in telling of the battle of Waterloo. Had it not been for the hefty wallops of Benny Leonard, Mel Coogan, a Brooklyn lightweight, would have been the lightweight champion of the world.

Not that Coogan and Leonard have met in the squared circle for the title last week relinquished by Fred Welsh. The Brooklyn lad was to have annexed the crown in a far easier manner. Or at least such is the story handed us by a friend from the town across the bridge from the big burg. Harry Pollok's contract with Welsh was to finish in July, and on the Glorious Fourth of this year Handsome Har y had it all framed to make Mel Coogan the world's lightweight champion. Nobody knew better than Pollok that Welsh was on the well-known toboggan, and that his boxing "finis" was a mere matter of days. So to keep the old title in the family, as it were, Manager Harry and Boxer Freddy had it all cut and dried to make young Mr. Coogan a present of the crown—with Pollok as manager and Welsh as trainer.

Putting on the O. O.

Of course, the Messrs. Pollok and Welsh did not pick on the best boxer in the world on whom to force the lightweight laurels, but they did as well as could be expected. In giving the lightweight field the once over, all the regular boxers were tied up with managers from whom they couldn't very well—or cared—to break away. Johnny Dundee, Benny Leonard, Charley White and the balance of the top-notchers had their advisers. Therefore, Pollok had to find someone not in captivity, and, at the same time, fairly competent to be heralded as the lightweight champion of the world.

Our Brooklyn pal will finish telling the story of how Mel Coogan happened to be "robbed" of a championship:

In Brooklyn town there lived a boy who satisfactorily answered the bill. He was a hard-hitting, fairly clever youngster, who had more or less of a good reputation. Like the well-known prophet, he was better known out of town than near his own fireside. As he had never been managed by a member of the clique that controls the big circuit of boxing, Mel Coogan had never really broken into the limelight.

Began Boosting Coogan

Such was the boy that Pollok picked out to be the next lightweight champion of the world. He first took Coogan under his management and then sent out to the press flattering notices of his latest boxer. A few fell for the stuff and Pollok saw the way opening to still manage the lightweight champion when Welsh retired to become a country gentleman in New Jersey.

Welsh planned to retire in' July. At about that time his physical culture farm would be ready to receive paid guests. The former champion is a mighty shrewd business man and he was going to get "his bit" for coming out before the world and saying the Flatbush boy was the best lightweight in captivity and should be crowned king of them all.

Not that Welsh would have exactly believed the statement. Upon more than one occasion the country gentleman, of Summit, N. J., has said that Benny Leonard was the best boy in the country. Still what one says in private and what one says in business are two distinct things. If it comes to a showdown, Welsh probably would have been willing to turn the title over to Battling Keefe, who claims the bantam, light, welter, middle and heavyweight crowns.

Welsh Had a Precedent

According to precedent, Welsh had a perfect right to hand the title over to Coogan, Battling Keefe or anybody else if he felt so inclined. Jim Jeffries did exactly the same thing when he quit the ring temporarily. The big fellow decided that Marvin Hart was the best boxer in the world and handed over the heavyweight crown "to that piece of cheese," as he was fondly called by many followers of the manly art of self-defense. Hart held the title for only eleven months before he lost it to Tommy Burns.

Had Coogan been given the title he undoubtedly would have held it longer than Hart. Pollok would have seen to that. Coogan is a good enough boy to have gone around the country boxing lemons without much danger of losing the crown. Welsh could have developed his defense, and as he is not a particularly poor fighter he could have been as satisfactory a champion as the Welshman.

Unfortunately, Benny Leonard upset the plans of Pollok by knocking out Welsh before the latter had any chance to turn over his title to the Brooklyn boy.

Hail the New King!

Philadelphians will get the first glimpse of the new lightweight king in action. When Benny Leonard endeavors to take a fall out of Joe Welsh in the wind-up at the Olympia tonight, it will be the New York boxer's first contest as lightweight champ. That Benny doesn't need a shoehorn to adjust his cap is brought out by the fact that he is going through with his bout with Welsh, even though he grabbed off the title. The match was clinched two weeks before Leonard walloped Welsh into pugilistic oblivion, and he is keeping the agreement of a man.

Morris Lux, a sparring pard of the man who returned the lightweight crown to the States United, is to appear in the semi. His opponent will be Buck Fleming, and if Lux has the class of a Leonard he will have an opportunity to prove it, as Fleming usually makes the other fellow step fast. Mike Howell vs. Young Joe Borrell, Loole Stinger vs. Charley Dalley and Patsy Wallace vs. Battling Murray are other bouts.

Morris vs. Moran

Carlos Morris vs. Francois Moran will be the big commotion in New York tonight. Not since the days when James J. Corbett and Roby Bob Fitzsimmons were chased all over the Southwest by officials determined to prevent them from boxing has a match been booted and kicked about so promiscuously. Six times have Moran and Morris been set for battles, and on five of the occasions something or other came up to cause postponement. From Oklahoma to Boston, to Kansas City, and finally to New York has the bout been shunted.

The last postponement was due to an injured wrist suffered by Morris while training.

The New Champion

Darcy's Body Off

All that is mortal of the unfortunate John Leslie Darcy will be carried today through the streets of Frisco, in a public funeral, to the ship that will bear his body back to his former home in Australia. Darcy's intended bride, who arrived in this country a few days ago from the Antipodes, will go back on the same ship, and pathetic indeed will be that journey to the land that repudiated its one-time idol.

Darcy was to have married his fiancee in America on Friday, and young Mr. and Mrs. Darcy were to have returned to Australia shortly after.

Scraps About Scrappers

Kid McPartland, whose good judgment in stopping the Leonard-Welsh bout gave the former the title, will referee tonight's Morris-Moran bout in New York.

Battling Koplin's debut in a Philadelphia ring, in combat with Billy Kramer at the National Saturday night, was a great disappointment. He was disqualified in the fourth round for using foul tactics. However, Koplin apparently must have a lot of good stuff, else he never would have been able to give Jack Britton, K. O. Loughlin and Jimmy Duffy the close battles for which he is credited.

Danny Foy, of Ireland, gave one of the greatest demonstrations of gameness this season in his bout with Frankie McManus. They put on a great even-up battle for five rounds, and it was only a great rally in the sixth that gave McManus the victory. He knocked down Foy, who was up in a jiffy and came back strong. The Irishman's face was badly battered.

Young Lawrence, the coming Camden boxer, pleased the crowd with his usual clownish antics, but was shaded by Billy Wolfe. Joe Dorsey stopped Bobby Shannon in the sixth, after the latter had the better of the first five rounds. Chief Bender was beaten in three rounds by Tommy Manning.

New York decisions of Saturday night's bouts: Gunboat Smith won from Jack Clifford. Ray West shaded Eddie Shannon. Patsy Cline defeated Eddie Wallace. Johnny Leffe outpointed J. Weber. Soldier Bartfield stopped Harry Gatlie, ninth, and Pepper Martin lost to Joe Garry.

Smoky Hollow is all het up about the Neil McCue-Mucker Ruley match at the Broadway Thursday night. Some one said that the best of feeling did not exist between the little battlers. Other bouts are: Andy McMahon vs. Bob Beebe, Al Moore vs. Battling Leonard, Frankie McFadden vs. Frankie Marto and Pussy Malone vs. Young Ritchie.

Muggsy Taylor will stage his Broadway shows on Monday nights for the remainder of the summer, starting with June 11. The fans will have the pick of two shows on that evening after the Olympia closes tonight, as Jack McGuigan has decided to run Monday night bouts, too.

Johnny Coulon can't be convinced that he should retire. The three-round knockout scored by Pete Herman recently has not affected Coulon, it appears, for he has announced that he will be in the boxing game for at least another year.

Dick Curley is anxious to bring Young Brown, the New York lightweight, here for a bout. Curley says that Brown scored a knockout over the champion, Leonard, and has beaten such men as Freddy Welsh, Walter Mohr, Willie Moore, Sam Robideau, Stanley Yoakum, Matt Wells, Jack Britton, Johnny Dundee and Willie Beecher.

MILLER HUGGINS SEEKS HEINE GROH IN TRADE

CINCINNATI, O., June 4.—That Heinie Groh is the Redleg Huggins is sweet on and is anxious to get is the assertion of one in close touch with the baseball situation here. Huggins admitted tonight that a deal is on with the Reds, and probably will be closed tomorrow.

The same authority said that Huggins offered three pitchers for Groh and Schneider Tuesday, but that the offer was turned down today, though Huggins offered some cash in addition. Huggins then made the new proposition, which is being considered.

BROWN MAKES FALL PLANS

Will Continue Athletics When College Reopens in Autumn

PROVIDENCE, R. I., June 4.—Brown University will continue with all forms of athletics when college reopens in the fall, it is announced. Brown apparently is well satisfied with the course pursued this spring of continuing with both baseball and track, and although varsity teams have been sadly weakened by the loss of numerous stars, schedules have been carried out and the baseball team will fill its dates up to the close of college.

WHITE-DISSTON WIN IN TENNIS

Baltimore and Local Players Capture Women's Doubles in Tourney at Merion

OUTCLASSED RIVALS

HAVERFORD, Pa., June 4.—Miss Susanne White, of Baltimroe, and Miss Dorothy Disston, of the Philadelphia Cricket Club, won the women's doubles division of the Patriotic Tennis Tournament at the Merion Cricket Club by defeating Miss Phyllis Walsh and Mrs. Isaac H. Schlichter, Jr., of the Country Club, 3-6, 10-8, 6-1.

The first two sets were played on Friday afternoon, but all four contestants were so tired at the finish that the completion of the match was put off until today.

Miss Whit and Miss Disston swept all before them in the final set and won in surprisingly easy fashion. Mrs. Slichter and Miss Walsh could not get together and were very erratic in their lobbing and net play, which had been exceedingly good on Friday. They won the second game on Mrs. Schlichter's and carried two other games to deuce, but lost three straight games, from third to fifth, inclusive, without scoring a point.

Mrs. Schlichter and Miss Walsh played fine tennis in the first set on Friday and during half of the second set. Then Miss Disston and Miss White rallied, shifted their system of attack and eventually won these. Today they maintained their swift pace and Mrs. Schlichter and Miss Walsh never had a chance.

BROOKLYN WANTS WASHINGTON CLUB

American League Franchise May Be Transferred, Big Baseball Rumor

OFFICIALS TO DECIDE

WASHINGTON, June 4.—Despite emphatic denials from local club officials, it was declared on reliable authority here today that American and National League club officials shortly will confer on the matter of transferring the Washington American League Club franchise to some other city.

Baltimore was much talked of in this connection a week ago, but, it is said, Brooklyn may get Washington's franchise.

Before this change could be made, however, consent of all National League clubs would have to be secured, therefore the coming conference of National and American officials.

Charlie Ebbets, the Dodger owner, it is believed, might consent, provided some arrangement could be made whereby he would get a big fat rental for his Brooklyn grounds while his Robins are on parade.

The Washingtons have drawn even more poorly than usual this year. The average daily attendance is known to have been very low. Last year it was far from gratifying. Even the once-great Walter Johnson fails to pull the crowds he used to here.

Local club officials insist they know nothing of any movement to send the team away from here, but it is said that, after all, Ban Johnson is the one who will make the decision, once he becomes convinced he could strengthen the league by putting the franchise somewhere else.

Some here point out that one line of strength the league would get in putting the Washington club in Brooklyn would be the returns from a possible post-season series between the Yanks and a Brooklyn American club.

By virtue of receiving nine points through the default of the Plymouth Country Club on Saturday, while the Cynwyd team lost one of the nine points in their match with the Belfield "B" team, the Germantown team gained one point on the league leaders. The Cynwyd team still enjoys a somewhat comfortable lead of five full points, however.

Howard Baker, of the Belfield team, deserves the thanks of the Manheim aggregation, for it was due to his fine play in defeating T. C. Leonards, the Cynwyd star, that Germantown was enabled to pull up on the leaders. Ability to handle Leonard's high-breaking service, in the doing of which he converted many of the returns into perfect passing shots, was the dominant feature of the Belfield player's win. A. L. Reed, of the Wister team, put up a fine contest in which his Cynwyd opponent had only a shade of advantage at the end of a long three-set match.

Belfield Players Show Well

Styles and Rhoades also made a brilliant showing for Belfield in the first doubles, coming within a fraction of defeating Leonards and Eliason, from whom they won the first set and, the they lost the second after a close struggle, they held on gamely in the third set, at one time leading at 5-4. The Cynwyd pair bored in at this stage and overcame the opposition by winning three sequence games for the set and match.

The match between Wilmington and Springhaven on the courts of the former was nip and tuck throughout, Springhaven finally emerging with one point advantage, the match score being 5-4. DeCazenove, Thomas and Coy, for Wilmington, scored victories over Lloyd Irving, James Irving and Keaher, respectively, and Wilcox, Copeland and Taney by winning from Harris, Lawton and Johnson evened the singles results at three each. When DeCazenove and Lee won the first doubles for Wilmington, it put their team one point to the good, but Springhaven came through with a strong finish by winning the remaining two doubles matches and thereby earned the odd point.

Greenpoint Suburban Stars

In the Suburban League the Greenpoint Grenadiers took another line of trenches, the U. of P. team being forced to yield all along their nine point front. As the Belfield team dropped an unexpected point to the P. and R. team, the Wisterites lost ground in their efforts to close up on the leaders. Dr. Bready was the stumbling block to Belfield's attempt to clean up, his victim being Caleb Cope.

The American Bridge team allowed Ardmore only one of the nine points in their match, and as a result moved up into fourth place in the club standing. H. Hoffman was the Main Line team's sole winner.
