MAN INDICTED FOR REGISTRY LAW DEFIANCE

Frederick J. Becker Accused by Grand Jury

DISTRICT ATTORNEY PLANS EARLY TRIAL

Ostendorf Oyster Opener Wanted to Be Martyr for Germany

PROCLAIMED POSITION

Registrars May Be Accused in True Bill of Giving Away Receipts

The first indictment in this city for failure to register for military service June 5 was returned by the Federal Grand Jury late this afternoon. The man indicted was Frederick J. Becker, twenty-nine years old, of Chestnut street near Fifty-fourth. Becker, who was employed as an oyster opener at Ostendorf's, Thirteenth and Market streets, went to his division polling place on Tuesday and there declared that he was ready and willing to be a martyr for Germany. On the following day he repeated his defiance of the Government in the restaurant where he was employed. It is alleged. After a hearing before United States Commissioner Long he was held under $7500 bail. Francis Fisher Kane, United States District Attorney, today said Becker's case would take precedence over all other criminal cases when the June term of the United States District Court opens next week. Indictments by a new Federal Grand Jury, which will be convened next Monday, are expected by United States officials as a result of the registration receipt card scandal. Six witnesses were quizzed today by the Grand Jury. Frank Garbarino, chief of the Department of Justice investigators here, said the witnesses were prepared to prove that receipt cards were given away illegally or were sold in connection with last Tuesday's registration for draft. Garbarino added he had in his desk warrants for registrars who worked in various parts of the city on registration day. He said he was prepared to serve them as soon as indictments were returned by the jury. Later in the afternoon the May term jury ended its work and reported seventy-two bills to United States Judge Dickinson. No indictment for registration fraud was among the number. It was said at the Postoffice Building that indictments on receipt cards frauds might have been covered up by the jury or the judge until Garbarino had a chance to serve warrants. Garbarino and United States Attorney Kane refused to say what the Grand Jury had done in reference to registration charges. But after the jury session ended both Kane and Garbarino declared emphatically: "There will be indictments as a result of the registration litigation." Hampton Thomas, clerk of the city registration commission, declared that giving away of registration cards by registrars is not an indictable offense. "Even if it is proved that the registrars acted as the Federal authorities say they did, they are not guilty of breaking any law," he asserted. Albert H. Ludner, Jr., a member of the registration commission, said he discredited stories that cards were given away in great quantities. Evidence said to prove that division registration officers either gave away or sold receipt cards has been collected by secret service men in a quiet investigation that has been under way for the last five days. When intimations of fraud in prominent distribution of receipt cards were first heard, Garbarino and his secret service men remained silent. They would not admit that they believed the scandal story to be true. But they worked on the case, and.
