

LEONARD'S ONLY SWEETHEART ADMITS SHE HAS MANY RIVALRY FOR HAMP'S SMILES

Figured One Punch Couldn't Stop Welsh, So He Planned Wearing-Down Battle; Succeeding With Hook-to-Body Uppercut Blow

By JOHN REED
Up to two years ago," said Benny Leonard to me earnestly, "I was so light that I couldn't knock a guy out if he leaned against my fist with his chin."

It was at that time suddenly he began to take on power and heaviness. He was not to know how, after fighting Tommy Garrison on February 15, 1915, he woke up the next morning "feeling like a king," with his muscles harder than they had been before, and every fight he felt himself becoming heavier and stronger.

It was about this time that his father, who was taking care of himself as no other man of his time was doing, got into bad habits and was making more money than any of his brothers or even old man Leiner himself.

Henry Stakes Dad
Mr. Leiner was at that time elating out a living as a foreman in a cloak and suit factory on the East Side, and was making his health into a get rich money machine. He took his whole family and set them up with him, providing for his father and mother and younger brothers and nearly forbidding his father ever to work for any more.

Up to the present, Benny Leonard has won $72,000 and $100,000 in the prize money. Most of this he has spent on his family. He allows himself the luxury of an automobile, a diamond pin and a diamond watch. It is all the ostentation he practices. He is not to be "money hungry."

He is probably the only champion in our time who didn't go to the Chautauque platform for twenty-four hours of winning the title.

Freddie Welsh
The reason he keeps on, he says, is because he wants to have enough money to live in his family comfortably for life. Then he may get himself enough money to support another family. He has never palled out with girls and hasn't any sweethearts but his mother.

Used Combination Blow
The "combination" consisted in a double movement, a right hook to the intestines and an uppercut at the same moment. A good boxer nowadays must know anatomy. Benny Leonard knows it under the iron control of his intelligence.

Anybody who has seen Benny Leonard can tell you that his affection for the sport is not only his only game, but his life. He knows the "business life," the corruption, the evil that goes on in the world, but he says it is the same everywhere, and that ordinary business life is full of the same thing. "It is that way," he says, "because of the same reason. 'Well, why do you condemn boxing, then?'"

SUNDAY SPORTS FOR HARVARD MEN

College Paper Issues Broadside Against Rigors of Time-Honored Blue Laws

ARMY DEMANDS ARE CITED
CAMBRIDGE, Mass., June 9.—Sunday sports at Harvard are advocated in this morning's Crimson under the caption, "Blue Laws." An editorial declares in part:

"Yet even at the certain doom of the reformer, again we raise our voices to query not definitely nor hotly, but humbly, why Sunday sports are still barred at the University?"

"From that dim age when the gray college boys observed the day of rest in a three-hour sermon, a longer dinner, and the remainder of the time in reading Numbers, recreation on Sunday has been, in the moral eyes of the righteous, the next thing to uncleanliness and far worse than frivolidy."
