Military Forces Greece May Turn to the Allies

ARMY—Estimated on paper at 450,000 men, war strength, of which probably only 250,000 can take the field after reorganization. NAVY—Two old battleships, sold to Greece by the United States; three more battleships, built some twenty-seven years ago; one modern armored cruiser; fourteen destroyers, seventeen torpedo boats, two submarines and a few auxiliary ships. Some of the best units of the Greek navy were, however, taken over by the Allies more than a year ago and were attached to their Aegean Sea forces.

Out of the turmoil resulting from a radical shift in the Government of Greece—the deposition of Constantine and the accession to the throne of Prince Alexander, second son, rather than the Crown Prince—the trend of events in that distressed country indicates strongly a powerful coup for the Allies and the probable acquisition of actual military assistance.

The future, however, depends largely upon Venizelos, the powerful ex-premier, whose opposition, coupled with Allied diplomacy, really brought about the downfall of Constantine. The situation is this: The new King, Alexander, is liberal, pro-Ally and a strong admirer of Venizelos.

Obviously he has the backing of the Allies. Venizelos has been the friend of the Allies in Greek diplomacy. The overthrow of pro-Germanism in Greek rule, which has been Venizelos' chief aim, has been accomplished and a friend of the Allies has been seated. Hence, the question today is, "Will Venizelos join his forces, which are powerful among the people, with those of Alexander and not only restore peace and order and banish hunger in Greece, but also lend active aid to the Allied cause?" All indications are that Allied efforts have or will gain that end.

KAISERISM HIT AGAIN IN CONSTANTINE'S DOOM

LONDON, June 13.—One more King has paid forfeit with his crown for his support of the divine right of monarchs to do as they please. Constantine I, King of Greece, was forced to abdicate because he had lost the support of his people and brought his nation almost to ruin through insistence that Greece join with German intrigues. His successor, the second son of the monarch, Prince Alexander, is liberal-minded and not subject to the intense pro-Germanism of his royal father, and is acceptable to the Allies.

KROONLAND REVERSES ENGINE, RUNS DOWN ONE OF 2 U-BOATS

Vessel Safe in Port After Afternoon Battle in Smooth Sea Off Irish Coast

AN AMERICAN PORT, June 13.

The American liner Kroonland, arriving in port today, reported she was attacked off the Irish coast by two submarines, one of which she rammed and sank.

The propeller of the liner was damaged in the fight. The vessel was eastbound from America to England, but no word of the encounter reached this country until the big liner returned to her home port.

By a quick change in her course she bore down upon one of the submarines before it could submerge or dodge the blow.

According to stories told by the ship's officers, the vessel was attacked apparently by two submarines, which fired two torpedoes at her.

One actually struck the liner, but it was a glancing blow and the war head did not explode.

The liner had started steering a zigzag course as soon as the wake of a torpedo was seen.

The naval guns aboard the Kroonland were manned and shots fired at points where it was thought the submarines might be.

Finally the lookout on the stern reported a German submarine immediately aft. The ship was quickly reversed and crashed into the underwater craft. The U-boat was plainly seen to sink, it was asserted. The American liner's port propeller was damaged by the collision.

The battle occurred at a point about 200 miles off the Irish coast late in the afternoon. A smooth sea was running.

BODIE'S DOUBLE TIES SCORE AGAINST TIGERS

"Ping" Plays First Base—He Sends Over Two A Men With Blow to Fence

By ROBERT W. MAXWELL

SHIBE PARK, June 13.—Ping Bodie celebrated "thirteenth" by coming through with a double in the third and chasing home a pair of Mackmen and tying the count at two all with Hughes Jennings's Tigers here this afternoon. There were two down at the time, with Strunk and Witt on the bases. Pink picked out a spot on the right-field wall, hit it, and before Tyrus Raymond could get the sphere back into the diamond, Witt and Strunk had counted.

The Tigers did all their damage in the first and Ty played an important part in the local disturbance. With one gone Pep Young planted one safely in center, and before the boy could get settled Ty drove a two-bagger. When the ball was relayed to the plate in an attempt to nail Young, Cobb scooted to third. Veach sent Witt on to Strunk and Ty scored.

This was all the Tigers made in the first seven frames, for Noyes proceeded to mow them down for six innings. Stuffy McInnis adorned the bench this afternoon. Ping Bodie was seen down on the nose. Ping Bodie was seen down on the nose. Ping Bodie was seen down on the nose.

$3,340,000,000 WAR BILL GOES TO PRESIDENT

Senate Finally Passes Biggest Budget in History Without Dissenting Vote

WASHINGTON, June 13.

The Senate this afternoon agreed to the conference report on the $3,340,000,000 army navy war budget without a roll-call or dissenting vote. The measure now goes to the President for his signature.

The agreement of the House to the $1,200,000 appropriation for the Hampton Roads naval operating base removed the last bone of contention on the measure.

The bill appropriates approximately $2,600,000,000 for the army, now being raised to fight Germany, exclusive of the amounts provided in the regular army appropriation bill. The appropriation for navy is about $900,000,000. The bill appropriates $405,000,000 for immediate use in the construction of a merchant shipping fleet to overcome the submarine menace and authorize an additional expenditure of $550,000,000 for the same purpose.

Included in the army and navy appropriations is a provision for $54,000,000 for aviation.

During the discussion over the measure, Senator Lodge revealed a propaganda aimed to dislodge General Goethals as manager of the Government shipping board. "I know there is an effort on foot to try to drive General Goethals from office," Senator Lodge charged. "Letters were to have been sent to every member of the House and Senate, and the object was to have Congress investigate General Goethals. These letters asked why more hadn't been done by the shipping board and why we weren't building wooden ships."

"I need not say that General Goethals is a very great administrator, and that it would be disastrous if he were removed."

POLICE BEGIN SLACKER HUNT

House-to-House Canvass Started to Disclose Men Who Dodged

GUARDING AGAINST FRAUD

Action took the place of talk in the round-up of registration shirkers this afternoon. At 2 o'clock the police of the city were turned loose on a house-to-house canvass, in which it is proposed to uncover every man of draft age who has not signed up for his Uncle Samuel.

Plans were mapped out at a conference held by Superintendent Robinson, with all police captains and lieutenants.

"No stone will be left unturned to bring the slacker to light," Robinson said.

Police will work until 10 o'clock every night until their house-to-house tours are completed and every house in Philadelphia has been covered.

Mayor Smith today received orders, transmitted from Washington through Governor Brumbaugh, directing that the city be divided into fifty-one districts, for conscription purposes. This is the first step toward drafting the new army. The Governor's orders did not, however, tell how the division is to be made. The Mayor wired for enlightenment.

Official cognizance of alleged irregularities in distribution of registration cards here was taken by the Government this afternoon. Assistant United States Attorney J. H. Hall and T. Henry Walnut, special assistant, were directed to probe the scandal. They conferred with Frederick J. Shoyer, chairman of the Registration Commission.

Preliminary estimates indicate, Shoyer said, that from 100 to 500 cards are missing. He decried the importance of this shortage, asserting that if three or four cards had been destroyed, because of errors, in each of the 134 voting divisions of the city, the number would aggregate from 4000 to 7000 cards.

Four registration districts have not yet made returns. When they come in, Shoyer said, the shortage will be computed definitely.

Hall and Walnut have orders to probe and prosecute.

Gangs were placed at railroad stations, ferries and trolley terminals to quit men of conscription age who leave the city. Men the police are suspicious of will be stopped and forced to show registration cards.

United States Attorney Kane made a call for citizens to report instances in which men have dodged registration. "You will not get publicity if you help us," he said. "Those citizens have been afraid to tell what they know for fear of getting into the limelight. We will protect them and run down their tips."

Superintendent Robinson added his request to Kane's.

Clerks in the Public Safety Department started a long task today of checking the registration commission's lists of registered voters. Names of men of draft age will be checked against the district registrars' lists of men that have registered, and discrepancies will be investigated by police.

Robinson's plans take into account the possibility that some shirkers are trying to save themselves by means of fraudulent receipt cards. Forged cards will be detected by reference to the district registrars' lists of registrants.

WOULD WED ONLY SOLDIER, SO ARDENT SWAIN ENLISTS

WASHINGTON, Pa., June 13.—"I will marry no one but a soldier. When you show your enlistment papers it will be time to talk about a marriage license." This is what Miss Ada Crow, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Crow, well-known girl of Avella, this county, told Lawrence Andrews when he asked her to marry him a few days ago. This morning Andrews presented himself at the Crow home, gave evidence that he had enlisted yesterday in the United States army and claimed his sweetheart.

DEATH LIST INCOMPLETE

LONDON, June 13.

At the same time that Lord French gave out his estimate of 41 killed and 121 injured in today's air raid, Lord Derby, Minister of War, announced his belief in the House of Lords that the total was already 49 killed and 200 injured and that "the final figures probably would be much larger."

No military damage was done in the raid, Lord Derby announced.

Germany's fourth aeroplane raid over England in recent weeks today claimed a death toll of forty-one and injured 121 in the city of London alone. Fifteen aeroplanes formed the bombing squadron. Chancellor of the Exchequer Bonar Law announced in the House of Commons this afternoon that one of these had been brought down.

In issuing the statement of casualties this afternoon Lord French declared that these figures were yet incomplete.

The German raiders appeared over the Essex coast in the vicinity of Epsom shortly before noon and in broad daylight reached the East End of London. One bomb dropped by the air pirates struck an elementary school, killing ten children and injuring fifty.

The German machines flew at an elevation of at least 18,000 feet and were almost entirely hidden in the haze over the city. About all the spectators saw were the bursts of smoke marking the explosions of shells hurled into the air by the "redies" (anti-aircraft guns) seeking out the Germans. All the city was vastly excited over the raid and it was not the execution of alarm. Alarms were rung all over the city and in various buildings, supposedly to warn every one to take to cellars, but in a great many instances the crowds, instead, disgorged on the streets or hurried to convenient roofs.

The royal flying corps airmen instantly took the air on the first report of the aerial invasion and undoubtedly prevented further damage by driving off the Germans in a thrilling fight. Over British airmen unhesitatingly chased three Boche planes, endeavoring to bring them into a fight.

King George and Minister of War Derby went to that part of London which had been struck almost immediately after the raid, inspecting the wrecked buildings and offering their sympathy to the relatives and friends of victims.

Seven persons were killed and seventeen injured when one bomb fell on a railway station, hitting an incoming train, Lord French reported.

London was intensely excited by the raid. Rafts in the city were jammed with spectators of the pursuit in the clouds by the British airmen. Miss Lloyd George, daughter of the Premier, with her fiancé, Captain Evans, watched the raid from the street.

On June 3 German aircraft raided the Thames estuary, dropping many bombs. Twelve persons were killed and thirty-six injured. The deadliest raid of the war was on May 25 over Folkestone and Dover, when seventy-six persons were killed and 174 injured.

The Nore is a part of the estuary of the River Thames, east of Sheerness. The Nore light floats on a sandbank, four miles northeast of Sheerness.

DU PONT DECLARES EXTRA RED CROSS DIVIDEND

WILMINGTON, June 13.—E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. today declared a special dividend of 1 per cent to help the Red Cross War Council's $100,000,000 fund. Today's special dividend will give the du Pont stockholders an opportunity to contribute $600,000 to the cause. This action followed the lead of the United States Steel Corporation, which yesterday declared a similar dividend. The thought, originated in the mind of John G. Raabok, treasurer of the du Pont Company, and the suggestion was made in Washington, D. C., several weeks ago with other financial leaders, including Henry P. Davison, chairman of the Red Cross War Council. The idea met with general approval.
