HIS LUCK IS CHANGING

A. K. Macomber, owner of perhaps the most extensive string of horses in training, is patriotic, to say the least. In addition to purchasing Liberty Bonds, as all millionaires should. Mr. Macomber has had the name of his recent $29,000 purchase, the three-year-old Al M. Dick, changed to that symbol of patriotism, Liberty Bond. As such the coll will start as favorite in the rich Latonia Derby Saturday. What horse shouldn't win with such a hame?

MOOTED DEFAULT AFFECTS PLAY IN PATRIOTIC TENNIS TOURNEY

Large Entry List Expected to Attest Local Appreciation of Holding Woman's National Racket Meet Set Here for Next Week

By PAUL W. GIBBONS

THE Pennsylvania State Patriotic Tournament, which began on Tuesday with the scant entry jist of twenty-nine players, is nearing the final rounds. At this writing it looks an though the Star Spansled title will go to Dr. P. B. Hawk, with C. S. Rodgers and Everitt Monder jurking within the shadow of possibility.

Even with the meager number who signified their intention of playing through the fournament the always unsatisfactory default had to thrust its obnoxious presence into the affair and greatly detract from the interest from the standpoint of both players and gallery. Among these were some of the best players in the tournament including William T. Tilden, 24: Norman W. Swayne and C. N. Beard. Swayne's entry was only a conditional one, it being understood that he could play only in case there was rain on the first two days. It was impossible for him to get out until Wednesday, and for him to get out until Wednesday, and Beard was forced to default through pressure of business.

mittee on or before tomorrow. Saturday, June 18, at 5 p. m.

It should be a matter of gratification that our city has been honored by the award of the National Tournament, and for this reason alone, if for no other, every woman a player should help make Philadelphia seem worthy of holding the tournament by making the entry list as large as possible. Then there is another and better reason for every one to enter. The profits go to the land they are helping the Red Cross.

In addition to the pleasure of playing in the event and enjoying the satisfaction of knowing that they are helping the Red Cross. they will have the opportunity of watching Miss Bjurstedt, the greatest woman tenis player in the world, play cash day. More can be learned by watching the play of skilled performers of the caliber of Miss Bjurstedt than could possibly be almorted in the same time in any other manner.

pressure of business.

There does not, however, seem to be any satisfactory reason for Tilden's defaulting to Rother Beck. This default was given with the scare at 6.5 in the third set. Beck had played beaultifely throughout, and aided by the fact that Tilden did not expect the opposition to be as formidable as it proved to be, and the further fact that he proved to be, and the further fact that was anticipated by the fact with the first time that this event proved to be, and the further fact that he proved to be, and the further fact that he proved outside of the Bost to show that the was not going at all well, what was antici-pated to be a one-sided match was con-verted into one of the closest variety.

With the score at $ to $ in the third set, the excuse was given that Tihden injured his ankle, and inasmuch as it was conceded that he would win the tournament the sympathy of the gallery went out to him. When he engaged in a doubles match within ten minutes later, and followed this by playing a practice match of singles, it was palpable that the default was not due to the reason given. Beck thus moved forward with shallow honors, his fine performance being stripped of its glory by the default. The tournament was, as a consequence, reblied of that very considerable portion of its interest which would have attended Tilden's playing through to the finals.

We would be a considered to the close a partner and enter this tournament. It will not be necessary to get out to the club each day before $5 p. m.

The doubles game has not been developed to the same degree of proficiency in America as it has been abroad. It admittedly calls for more skill than does the single for the reason that the court is so completely covered by the two players on each slick that the opening must be made. This brings rare skill into play when good players meet, and during the late of the club each day before $5 p. m.
