Two-Cent Increase in Price of Milk Now in Sight-Other City News-Court Orders Bergner to Explain Daughter's Detention

11-CENT MILK IS PROSPECT HERE

Brumbaugh Board Foresees Further Advance in Retail Price

COWS ARE SOLD FOR BEEF

An increase in the retail price of milk to eleven cents a quart is what Philadelphia faces because of the growth of the condensed milk industry and because dairymen are selling their milch cows as beef.

This was announced today by members of Governor Brumbaugh's tristate milk commission in an unofficial report after an extensive investigation that began when the price of milk was boosted to nine cents, the present price. Two causes were given:

First. The encroachment of condensed milk manufacturers, with long-time army and other contracts, on the source of milk

Second. The sale of dairymen's cattle for beef production because of lack of profit in the dairy business. Eleven-cent milk would tide over the situation, according to Dr. Clyde L. King. of the University of Pennsylvania and chairman of the commission, and C. Henderson Supplee, a member of the commission and head of the Supplee Alderney

"There is great danger of a shortage of milk," said Doctor King. "The farmers are not asking for greater profit. If they did the matter could be adjusted. But the danger lies in the fact that they are quietly selling their cattle. To prevent a shortage in milch cows it would be better for the public to pay a reasonable increase now than to face prohibitive prices later on than to face prohibitive prices later on. Reports from individual farmers thus far received show that cows are being sold industry was growing rapidly and was com-peting with the milk dealers in the field of production, offering New York prices, which are from one cent to one and one half cents higher than the prices which the dealers can pay the farmers, considering the present retail prices.

"The growing condensed milk trade is not only encouraged by the prospects of a large army, but it encroaches on the city trade of the dealers," he said. "Dealers are unable to compete with the condensed milk people with the present prices."

Mr. Supplee also saw grave danger in the sale of milch cows, for, he said, it re-quires two or three years to build up milkproducing stock.

Doctor King said that a list of questions was in the hands of the other members of the commission today and that he expected commission today and that he expected replies by tomorrow. It was intimated that there may be a second investigation in an attempt to find a "way out" of the situation caused by the sale of mijch cows to butchers for meat production. The general impresaion of the commission, it was said, was that an eleven-cent price would enable the farmer to produce milk at a profit that yould curtail the sale of dairy animals for

The situation has become especially acute in southern New Jersey. Last year a daily average of 55,000 quarts of milk arrived at Cooper's Point, Camden. A great part of this suppply was consumed in Philadelphia. This supply has now been very much re
