Affairs for Various War Works Interest Society. Red Cross Headquarters Scene of Lively Industries—Other Matters

MRS. GEORGE HUNTER tells me there will be a fruit and vegetable sale on the grounds of her country place at Villanova tomorrow afternoon for the benefit of the Main Line branch of Queen Mary's Guild.

This same branch of the Guild has done quite wonderful work. It meets weekly and sometimes oftener, and has sent numerous boxes to the front containing bandages, comfort kits, sweaters, socks, wristlets, leggings, shirts, sheets, linens and all sorts of gauzes, cottons, sponges and anesthetics.

Besides the vegetables and fruit there will be "Eats" ready to be eaten; in other words, ice cream and cakes, and can't you hear the kiddies on the Main Line "Oh, take me, mamma! Oh, goodie ice cream and cake!"

The Barnes wedding will be a pretty affair tomorrow afternoon in Old St. David's Church, and from all I have heard most artistic arrangements will be made to fit the quaint old place, and that sounds very appropriate, doesn't it?

Doctor Lamb, rector of the church, will perform the ceremony, and Bishop Rhinelander will give the blessing.

The engagement was only announced about ten days ago, and at the time there was not a positive idea of marriage so soon.

Sylvia is the daughter of Mr. John Hampton Barnes by his first wife, you know. She was Miss Emily Harrison, a daughter of Mrs. John Harrison, and she died after a short married life, leaving three daughters, Sylvia, Dorothy and Cecily.

Each auxiliary of the Red Cross has been asked to help by promising to take charge of one day or half a day.

Mrs. Drexel has given her home at Eighteenth and Locust streets as the headquarters for this branch, and will be there every day for the next two weeks to receive the various offers of aid.

Already twenty-two auxiliaries have signified their intention of helping, and will take a day each. This means that they must hold themselves in readiness to be called on at any moment. They will simply get a phone message and they must be ready to "beat it" at a minute's notice.

I HEAR that Bishop Rhinelander, who is head of the men's committee of the Armenian Branch of the Emergency Aid, will give a luncheon at the City Club tomorrow in behalf of these poor people.

Mrs. Robert Broadhead, who belongs to that branch, has inaugurated knitting classes, which will start next week. The new sweaters for the soldiers are made of gray wool instead of blue as heretofore, as it was found the blue dye came off, and, needless to say, such a happening would add greatly to the discomforts of the trenches, instead of alleviating them.

The Ogontz and Huntingdon Valley branches of the Red Cross is working wonderfully hard to raise the sum of $10,000 for the fund which is to be given over to the Government this week.

The Ogontz chapter had a mass-meeting on Monday night, and appointed a men's committee, headed by Percy Madeira and John Newbold, to raise the funds. Mr. Bitts addressed the meeting, and was most interesting, rousing great enthusiasm.

Tomorrow night the Glenside branch, of which Mrs. Maurice Fagan is chairman, will hold a mass-meeting in the Glenside Methodist Episcopal Church, and Colonel Sheldon Potter and Judge John Patterson will address the multitude.

It's quite thrilling to hear how the various branches are working so hard to raise the money which will be collected.

MRS. ALEXANDER BROWN and her sister, Kitty Penn Smith, and the small Brown kiddies left Bryn Mawr yesterday for Narragansett Pier, where they will spend the summer. Carol Harriman was spending a week with Mrs. Brown, since the announcement of her engagement to Mrs. Brown's brother, Penn Smith, made a week vacation for her, but Mrs. Brown, of course, did not figure in it, as she is still in deep mourning for her husband, who died a tragic death last fall when making a flying trip in his airplane on the Delaware.

A bird told me that the wedding of Miss Harriman and Mr. Smith would be in the very far future, but who can tell? Sometimes birds do a lot of chattering.

THOSE indefatigable townswomen of ours, Mrs. Henry Brinton Cox, Mrs. George W. Childs Drexel and their associates, simply cannot sit idle one minute while there is work to do.

THIRD WEDNESDAY IN JUNE MARRYING DAY

Miss Patterson and Mr. Chamberlin Wed in Overbrook. Other Nuptials

The marriage of Miss Blanche M. Patterson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William M. Patterson, of Merion, to Mr. John R. Chamberlin, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Chamberlin, of Torresdale, took place this afternoon at the Memorial Episcopal Church of St. Paul, Overbrook, at 4 o'clock.

Miss Elizabeth P. Dallas, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Preston Dallas, was maid of honor, and Miss Margaretta Patterson and Miss Margaretta Hains, sister and cousin of the bride, were flower girls.

Mr. John Larsen, of Akron, O., acted as best man, and the ushers included Mr. Charles W. Earl, Wilmington; Mr. A. Mober Biddle, Jr., Mr. Henry Bower, Mr. William B. Chamberlin, Jr., a brother of the bridegroom; Mr. George R. Wood and Mr. R. Luther Patterson, a brother of the bride. Upon their return from a wedding journey, the bride and bridegroom will spend part of the summer with Mr. Chamberlin's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William B. Chamberlin, at Devon-on-the-Behaves, their home in Torresdale.

A wedding of interest to persons in this city took place in Chester this afternoon at 5 o'clock, when Miss Phoebe Delaney Wetherill, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Wetherill, of Graystone, Chester, became the bride of Mr. Carl M. Nolting. There were no bridesmaids, but Miss Katherine Wetherill, a sister of the bride, acted as maid of honor.

A small reception followed the ceremony, which was performed at the home of the bride, after which Mr. and Mrs. Nolting left on a wedding trip.

A quiet wedding on the Main Line took place at 1 o'clock this afternoon at Credefield Farm, the new home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter S. Thomson, at Rosemont, when Mr. Thomson's sister, Mrs. Sara Thomson Watson, was married to Mr. Charles W. Wetmore, of New York. The Rev. Dr. Kille, pastor of the Simpson Memorial Methodist Episcopal Church, of Ardmore, performed the ceremony, in the presence of the family and a few intimate friends. The bride wore a traveling gown and did not have any attendants. After a wedding journey, Mr. and Mrs. Wetmore will live in New York.

Miss Bernice Bloch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Bloch, of 2823 North Broad street, and Mr. Mortimer L. Weil, of Hartselle, Ala., were married at noon today in the Rittenhouse Hotel by the Rev. Joseph Krauskopf, of the Keneseth Israel Temple. The bride, who was attended by Mrs. Samuel Marcus, as matron of honor, and Miss Fannie Dorothy Herzfeld, of Birmingham, Ala., was given in marriage by her father, Mr. Nathan Bloch, of Hartselle, Ala., was his brother's best man. The ceremony was followed by a breakfast. Mr. Weil and his bride, after a southern honeymoon trip, will be at home in Hartselle, Ala., and will receive after July 26. The bride is prominent in Jewish social circles in this city, and will be entertained extensively in her new home.

An interesting meeting was held on Monday night at the Friends' Meeting House on Coulter street, in Germantown, when Mr. C. W. Whitehair, chief organizer of the movement under Dr. John H. Hill to establish Young Men's Christian Association recreation buildings in the war countries, was the speaker.

Mr. Bayard Henry, for thirty-three years president of the Germantown Young Men's Christian Association, made a short address, in which he spoke of the crying need for places where wholesome, healthy, clean diversion and entertainment can be found for "our boys" as he called them. Mr. Henry's voice broke and it was with great difficulty that he continued to speak. He apologized, saying that he had only just returned from Princeton University and had been out of 18th month there are only 500 left. He said "the university is virtually broken up."

Mr. Livingston Jones, the new president of the Germantown branch of the Young Men's Christian Association, also made a stirring plea for funds with which to carry on this good work, and then Mr. Whitehair, his voice vibrant with deep emotion, told his story, and it brought tears to the eyes of big, strong men in the audience.

He said among other things: "So great is the desire for something to break the monotony of the present days that one man said he would be willing to sell half his already meager share of bread in order to have some one buy phonograph records. Here we are in America, safe, protected, happy, untroubled, can hear that superb symphony orchestra of ours, and how little we appreciate that or any other such privilege."

Among those noticed were Mrs. Bayard Henry and her son, Mr. John Henry Jones, Jr.; Mr. McLean, Dr. Samuel Rhodes, the Rev. John Harvey Lee, Mr. Frederic Strawbridge and his son, Mr. Frederic Strawbridge, Jr.; Mr. Arthur Brown and many others.

What People Are Doing Dr. and Mrs. William Henry Dean will entertain their friends this evening at the Aldine, from 8 to 11 1/2 o'clock in honor of the doctor's graduation from the University of Pennsylvania today.

THE GRIZZLY KING

By JAMES OLIVER CURWOOD The Author of "Kazan"

CHAPTER XVII Continued HIS first thought was that he was powerless—utterly powerless. He could not even run, for the rock wall was behind him; he could not fling himself valleyward, for there was a sheer fall of a hundred feet on that side; he was face to face with death, a death as terrible as that which had overtaken the dog.

And yet in those last moments Langdon did not lose himself in terror. He noted even the redness in the avenging grizzly's eyes. He saw the naked scar along his back where one of his bullets had plowed; he saw the bare spot where another of his bullets had torn the way through Thor's fore-shoulder. And he believed, as he observed these things, that Thor had deliberately trailed him, that the bear had followed him along the ledge and had cornered him here that he might repay in full measure what had been inflicted upon him.

Thor advanced—just one step; and then in that slow, graceful movement, reared himself to full height. Langdon, even then, thought that he was magnificent. On his part, the man did not move; he looked steadily up at Thor, and he had made up his mind what to do when the great bear lunged forward. He would strike him over the edge. Down below there was one chance in a thousand for life. There might be a ledge or a projecting spur to catch his foot.

Had Langdon moved then he would have died. But Thor was not like man, a murderer. For another half-minute he waited for a hurt for some sign of menace. Neither came, and he was puzzled. His nose swept the ground, and Langdon saw the dirt rise where the grizzly's hot breath stirred it. Then, without warning, he lunged forward, his ribs thirty seconds, the bear and the man looked at each other.

Then very slowly—and doubtfully—Thor half turned. He growled. His lips drew back, and he saw the man's teeth. He fought for that striking, white-faced pigmy crouching on the rock made no movement to offer him battle. He saw that he could not go on, for the ledge was blocked by the mountain wall. Had there been a trail the story might have been different for Langdon. As it was, Thor disappeared slowly in the direction from which he had come, his great head hung low, his long claws click, click, clicking like ivory castanets as he went.

Not until then did it seem to Langdon that he breathed again, and that his legs resumed their beating. He gave a great sobbing gasp. He rose to his feet, and his legs seemed weak. He waited—one minute, two, three, and then he stole cautiously to the twist in the ledge around which Thor had gone. The rocks were clear, and he began to retreat his own step toward the meadow, breaking, watching and listening, and still clutching the broken parts of his rifle. When he came to the edge of the plain he dropped down behind a huge log, and Three hundred yards away Thor was ambling slowly over the crest of the dip toward the eastward valley. Not until the bear reappeared on the farther ridge of the hollow and then vanished again, did Langdon follow.
