ALL-RUSSIAN COUNCIL VOTES TO STRIKE FOE

National Congress of Workmen and Soldiers Unanimous for Offensive.

PLEDGE UNRELENTING WAR

LONDON, June 21. British troops on the western front now occupy what were formerly German trenches on more than eighty miles out of the total of ninety-six on which they are located. General F. B. Maurice, director general of operations, pointed out today.

PETROGRAD, June 21. The all-Russian congress of workmen and soldiers today unanimously resolved upon an immediate Russian offensive. The unanimous vote indicates that even the Petrograd Council of Workmen's and Soldiers' Delegates, which has heretofore been strongly in favor of peace, has been won over to the war side...

SUFFRAGE PICKETS AGAIN ILL-TREATED

Angry Crowd Attacks Women at White House, Tearing Down Banners

TREASON CRY RAISED

WASHINGTON, June 21. Screaming "Traitors!" an angry crowd, led by Mrs. D. E. Richardson, attacked the suffrage pickets at both the west and east gates of the White House this afternoon, ripping down their yellow banners and trampling them in the street.

Police reserves were called out to quell the rioting, in which several thousand men and a large number of women took part. Nearly 10,000 persons witnessed the rout of the suffrage pickets.

Mrs. Hazel Hunkins, one of the pickets, climbed upon the railings of the White House fence, holding her flag aloft in a vain endeavor to save it. Mrs. Richardson climbed up after her, scratching and clawing, and after a bitter struggle wrenched the banner away and tossed it to the howling crowd.

These banners were the old ones, asking the President what he intended to do for suffrage, which have been displayed at the White House gates for months. Immediately after the flags were ripped to bits, a duplicate of the denunciatory banner addressed to the Russian commission was put up at the west gate. The crowd made a rush forward and the sign went down instantly amid the snapping of its wooden frame work and the wild cheering of the mob which could be heard for blocks.

JAIL NINETEEN ON CHARGES OF OPPOSING WAR

Police Have Hard Fight With Socialist Agitators

LYNCHING THREATENED

A stringent investigation of anti-war agitation in the heart of South Philadelphia was begun today by the Department of Justice, following the arrest of seventeen agitators after a fight with the police and subsequent efforts of citizens to lynch several of the prisoners.

Frank L. Garbarino, special agent of the Department of Justice, asserted that the traitor hunt would be severe. His men are out in the troubled sections, combing for evidence for new arrests.

Magistrate Baker, after holding all of the prisoners, including five women, without bail for further hearing on charges of suspicion of treason and inciting to riot, hurried to the United States District Attorney's office for a conference with District Attorney Francis Fisher Kane. The magistrate and police officials are convinced that unless the distribution of Socialist anti-war literature is prevented there will be bloodshed.

SIBERIAN OUTLAWS RIOT; 2000 ARRESTS ARE MADE

PETROGRAD, June 21.—Taking advantage of the situation created by the revolution, anarchists established a reign of terror in the government of Tomsk, western Siberia, and martial law was proclaimed there today. More than twenty persons were killed by the outlaws and robbery became the common thing. More than two thousand arrests already have been made.

Italian Mission Reverses Independence Hall Relics

MISSION presents silver medal to Italian couple in appreciation of the sacrifice of a son who lost his life fighting for world liberty in Italy. Marconi, noted inventor, hugs and kisses two little Italian children who present him with American flags.

The wish that the members of the Italian war mission and the members of all other missions of the Allied countries that have visited this country should convene in Independence Hall after the big war and sign a peace pact for all time, was expressed today by Mayor Smith in a ringing address at the Manufacturers' Club.

The occasion was a farewell luncheon and reception to the members of the Italian war mission, which arrived in this city yesterday morning. The mission left Philadelphia for New York at 1:30 p. m., following a rousing farewell celebration participated in by thousands of Americans and Italians at the Reading Terminal.

"Your visit here," said the Mayor in his address at the Manufacturers' Club, "has opened up for me new vistas of democracy. It is my fond hope that you, and the members of other war missions will meet in Independence Hall after the war and sign a compact for peace which will be eternal, and insure forever the reign of brotherly love on this earth. I cannot speak too highly of this commission. It is exceedingly well-balanced, and the members are all men of great ability."

ECHOED BY ITALIAN VISITORS

The imagination of Enrico Arletta, one of the mission, was fired by the words of the Mayor. Rising from the banquet table, and lifting high his glass of wine, he cried in an enthusiastic voice: "Let us drink to justice, liberty and democracy. Something in my heart tells me that the famous Liberty Bell will no longer ring for America, for its clarion notes have already sounded the call of freedom for this nation. But I feel certain that the day is near when the grand old bell will speak
