MOB ATTACKS SUFFRAGISTS IN STREETS OF WASHINGTON

The cause of disorder is shown in the illustration at the left. Miss Katharine Morey, of Boston, and Miss Lucy Burns, of New York, holding the banner which excited the anger of the mob and precipitated the turbulent scenes which followed. To the right is shown a suffragist on the way to the White House, under police guard, bearing a new banner replacing one destroyed in the rioting. The lower picture shows

The whole reason for the police order became apparent when Miss Alice Paul, of Philadelphia, detailing what she had said to Major Puliman in a telephone talk, admitted that she had said she wished to "articulate the unrest of this country on the suffrage question." And that if this effort to promote unrest embarrassed the President, then the fault was the Government's and the women would continue their work. The suffrage riots and arrests in Washington today caused emphatic criticism of White House picketing by prominent members of the Natitonal American Woman Suffrage Association in Pennsylvania Mrs. John O. Miller, of Pittsburgh, president of the Pennsylvania branch to condemn the methods of the Congressional party. They have become intolerable.

"They have taken the credit for every burgh, president of the Pennsylvania branch of the Suffrage backets of the Congressional party. They have taken the credit for every efforts. THE BIG SHOE STORE

This Splendid Stock of Perry Summer Suits offers Every Man just his pattern his style his size

If we were asked to put our finger on the one big aim we have constantly in mind at Perry's, we would say that it is to have a stock of clothes so large in numbers, so diversified in pattern, so varied in style that every man, no matter what his taste, can find just what he wants right off the reel.

That's the way we buy our woolens. We buy enough for thousands and thousands of suits, adding pattern after pattern to our selections so long as the mills have any attractive designs to offer us.

We draft our models from many different points of view. We know the young fellow just in long trousers, and we give his clothes the juvenile touches he craves.

We know his fiveyears - older brother, and we cut a style for him that shows his growing self - importance without sacrificing the atmosphere of youth.

¶ For the substantial individual, we produce suits of ease and comfort with lines that keep young; while for conservative dressers, we make clothes without anything commonplace in them.

In a word, we have made Perry's the clothing store where any man and all men can get just what's wanted and get it right the first time!
