

EVERYWHERE A PHILADELPHIAN WENT HE FOUND INDEPENDENCE DAY CELEBRATED

OF COURSE, THE DECLARATION WAS READ
Adam Miller, a schoolboy, performs the annual duty at the Independence Hall exercises.

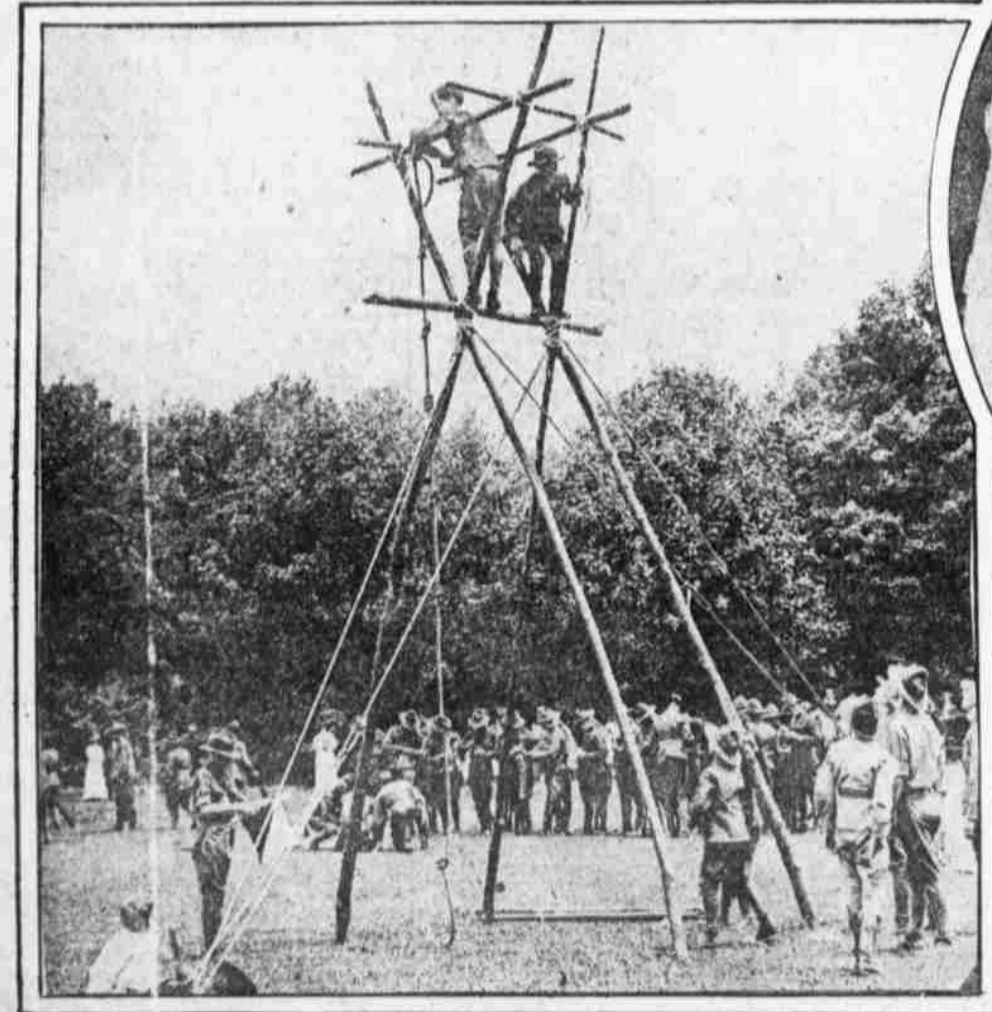

THE SUBMARINE WAS A FEATURE OF THIS PARADE
One of the most attractive turnouts was that of the Sixtieth Street Business Men's Association.

RELIGIOUS OBSERVANCE OF THE DAY WAS NOT LACKING!
Participants in the union services at old Pine Street Presbyterian Church, left to right: The Rev. H. Wheeler, the Rev. V. H. Lukens, Bishop Rhinelander, Bishop Berry, the Rev. Dr. W. H. Roberts, the Rev. Louis C. Washburn, the Rev. Edwin Heyl Delt, Bishop Neely and the Rev. J. S. Hughes.

MISS COLUMBIA REIGNS AT ATLANTIC CITY
Miss Zella Rambo, of Boston, enacts that patriotic character, with Beatrice Kahn, as her herald, introducing the States of our Union.

BOY SCOUTS PROCLAIM LIBERTY BY WIGWAG
One of the exhibitions at Wayne was the erection of a field signal tower in ten minutes.

SPEEDY ATTENTION QUICKLY CURED WOUNDED
Red Cross nurses demonstrate at the Main Line sham battle of the Wayne Company of the Philadelphia Training Corps the importance of "first aid." The Girl Scouts played a big part in the exhibition.

THE "KIDDIES" SHOWED THAT IT WAS THEIR DAY
Juvenile parades carry off the honors of Pemberton street's observance, and little Edward Felona (below) was one of the "big hits" of that neighborhood's array.

THE REAL SOLDIER BOYS WERE AS ARDENT AND NOISY AS THOSE WHO CONFINED THEIR EXPLOSIVE PATRIOTISM TO FIRECRACKERS
The Second Pennsylvania Field Artillery made a gallant appearance on Belmont Plateau, where it went through an exhibition drill and review before Colonel Turner and hosts of cheering spectators.
