German Imperial Chancellor von Beth-mann-Hollweg is to announce Germany's adherence to the principle of "no annexa-tions and no indemnities" in a speech he is expected to deliver at the Reichstag meeting today, according to reports received here. Germany, it was indicated, looks to the speech as affording immediate opportunity for opening of peace negotiations. The Chancellor, it was indicated, has long upported the "no annexations, no indemn ties" principle, but because of opposition of other governmental forces has made no an-nouncement of this stand. The fact that all opportunity of a separate peace with Russia seems now to have failed has impelled the German Government to decide on new peace

The term "peace without annexations and without indemnities" was first agitated in connection with the German efforts to call a "Socialist peace conference" at Stock-bolm. It was coined, apparently, by Philip Scheidemann and other pro-Government German Socialist. German propagands in Russia was strenuously directed to have the Russians approve such a slogan, the German propagands system even some so dent Wilson has pointed out in his Me rial Day speech, would merely mean that Germany, through her alliances with Aua-tria. Bulgaria and Turkey would still menace the world peace through her Mittel Europa scheme of empire.
