

THE CAMERA REVEALS CARLISLE AS A CENTER OF LEARNING AND A CITY OF GREAT BEAUTY

"OLD WEST," ONE OF THE GROUP OF BUILDINGS COMPRISING DICKINSON COLLEGE
This structure is said to be the only perfect type of classic Colonial architecture in America. A replica of the Temple of the Winds, at Athens, surmounts it.

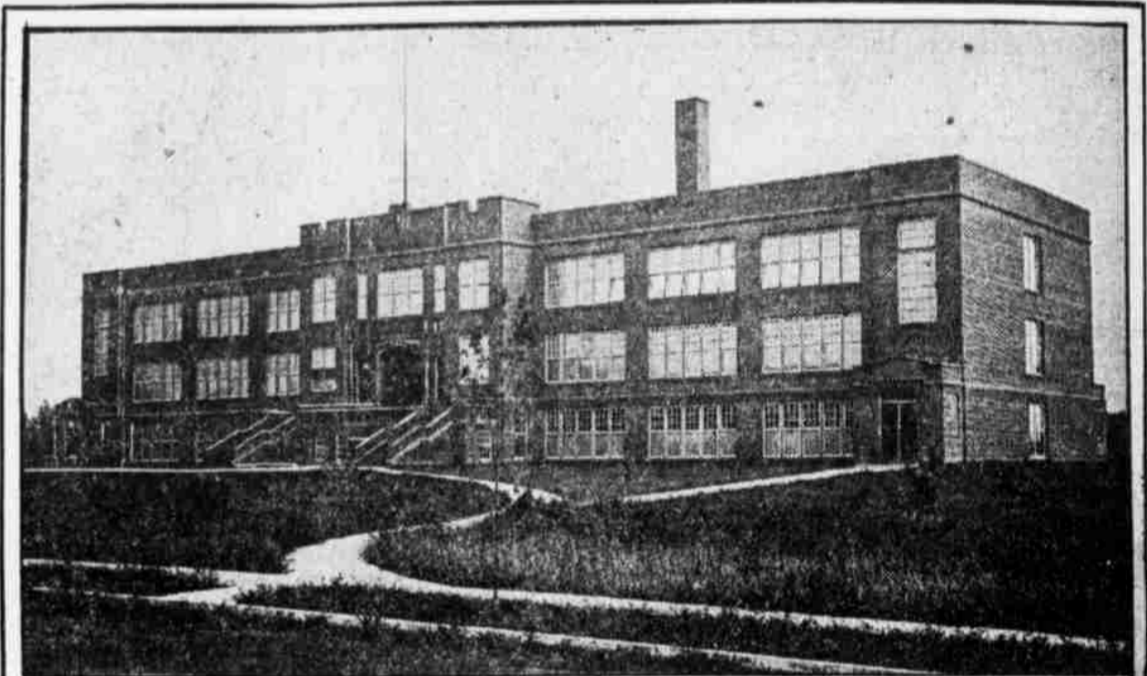

CONWAY HALL FOR BOYS ALSO HAS ITS HOME IN CARLISLE
Here boys of high-school age are prepared for the splendid courses offered at Dickinson College. As the inscription over the front of the main building relates, the hall was the gift of Andrew Carnegie.

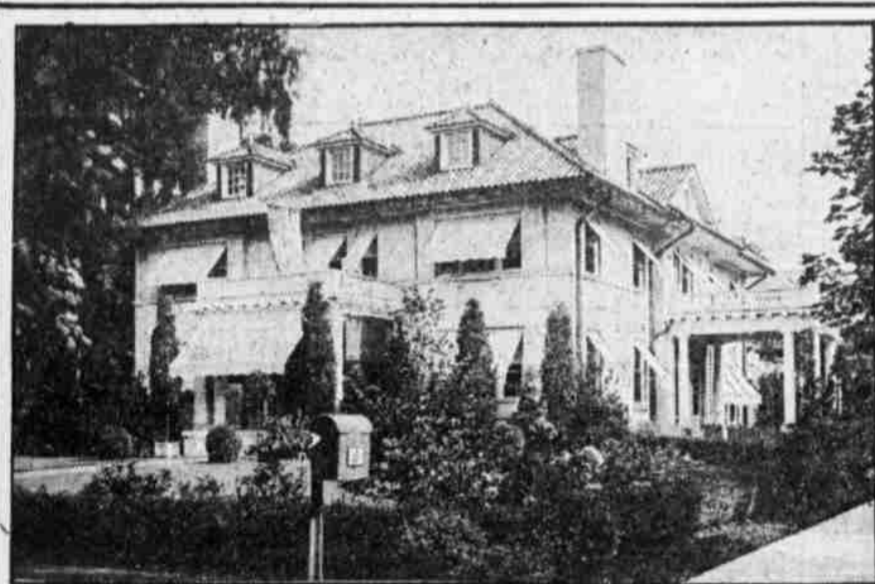

CARLISLE'S FAME IS NOT CONFINED TO HALLS OF LEARNING
Many up-to-date manufactories also are situated there, as witness the Raglin Handcraft Rug Mills, exemplifying the very latest type of mill construction.

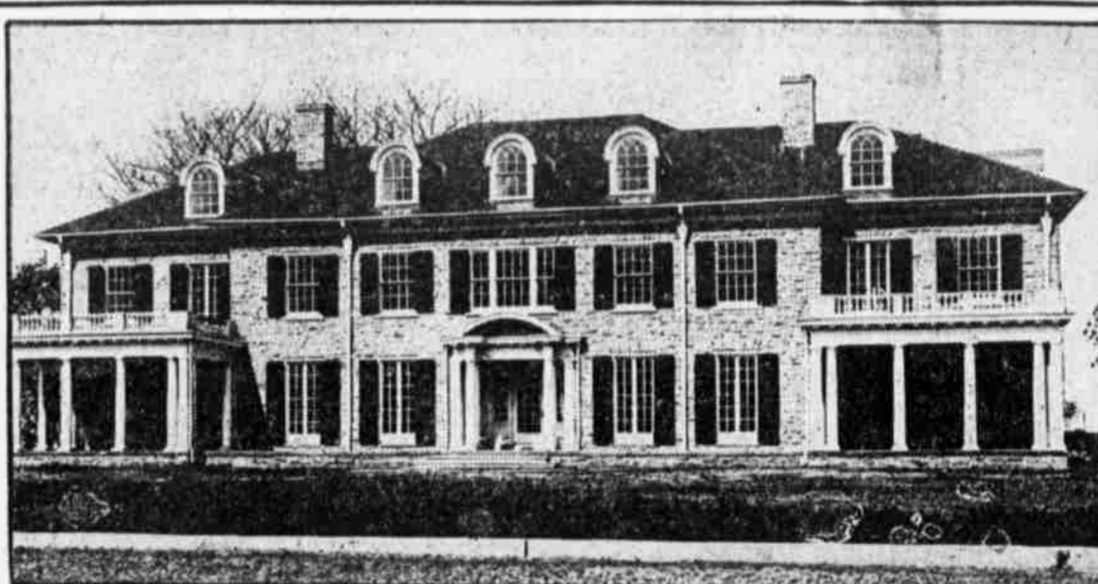

KNOWN AS A LIVE WIRE IN CARLISLE
Dr. Guy Carleton Lee is at one time president of the Chamber of Commerce and leader of the National Society for Broader Education.

CARLISLE HAS NOT NEGLECTED THE EDUCATION OF ITS NATIVE YOUTH
The photograph shows the new technical high school, where the sons of citizens are prepared for engineering courses at Dickinson College.

CARLISLE IS PROUD OF ITS BEAUTIFUL RESIDENCES
Not less notable is the city's wealth of trees. The photograph shows the residence of Abram Bosler.

THE TODD HOME FOR LADIES IS A CARLISLE INSTITUTION
The building, only recently completed, is a tribute to the city's thoughtfulness about matters philanthropic.

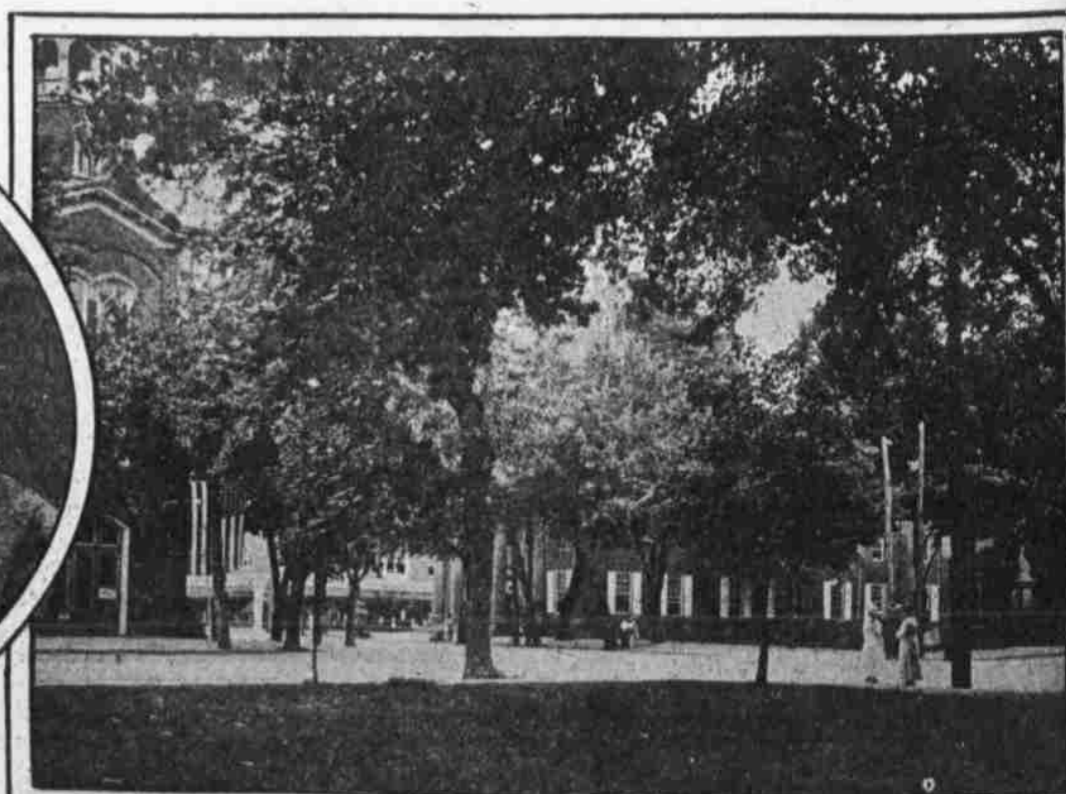

ANOTHER OF CARLISLE'S MAJESTIC RESIDENCES
The home of Dr. H. T. Sadler has an appropriate setting in this fair city in the Cumberland Valley.

CARLISLE IS FAMED FAR AND NEAR AS THE HOME OF THE INDIAN SCHOOL
Perhaps nowhere else in the United States has such splendid work been accomplished in regenerating the only real Americans. The photograph shows a frontal view of the reconstructed residence of the superintendent of the school.

THEIR SUN RISES AND SETS IN CARLISLE
Alfred T. Jenkins, at the left, is secretary of the Chamber of Commerce. P. W. Morris, to the right, is Mayor of the city.

LOOKING SOUTH ACROSS THE QUAIN PUBLIC SQUARE AT CARLISLE
