

PENN MEN FIND LOTS OF FUN IN CAMP LIFE

Far away from the ivy-covered halls of the University of Pennsylvania these graduates are working for commissions in the regular army. The picture was taken at their camp at Fort Lawton, Wash. The men, from left to right, are Holmes, Paul, Blogg and Biles.

"BAKERY CORNER" IN CITY HALL COURTYARD

One of the interesting war scenes in Philadelphia is this army baking camp, which has been pitched in the square surrounded by the massive walls of the big public building. There is plenty of amusement in watching the rookies being taught how to make good bread for "Sammees."

A QUICK JOB

B. and O. workmen tore up the old tracks and placed this new concrete and steel bridge in position in an hour and a half.

NEW COLLINGDALE BRIDGE IN SERVICE OF B. AND O. R. R.

In this picture the new concrete bridge, shown on the left, is bearing its first burden after it was placed in position by a score of workmen. It weighs many tons and is situated near Collingdale, Delaware County, Pa.

Copyright Harris & Ewing.

THE DRAWING AS IT WAS ACTUALLY CONDUCTED
This picture shows the busy "draft" officials as they called off the second lot of numbers in Washington. It was a tiresome job that gave these men the longest day's work they had experienced for a long time. Their faces show that they were beginning to feel the strain.

PORT RICHMOND'S BOYS AND GIRLS WAIT FOR OUTING TICKETS

And no person can blame them for being impatient when the good time that is assured them is considered. They are to have one of the finest outings of their young lives on Thursday, when they will be the guests of "Mother" Ketchum at a picnic. The picture shows them waiting for the precious cardboards permitting them to attend.

SOME OF GERMANTOWN'S BUSY YOUNG RED CROSS WORKERS

These boys and girls sold refreshments at a lawn party held at 630 Chew street, and realized a substantial sum, which they contributed to the Red Cross. (From left to right) Virginia Khar, Richard Miller, Louis Raven, Katherine Schaefer, and Marie Koch.

Copyright Harris & Ewing.

CAPITOL PICKETS AFTER THEIR PARDON BY PRESIDENT
That their imprisonment in the Occoquan jail did not cause these suffragists much worry is clearly indicated by their smiles. The picture shows the militant workers for equal rights just after they returned to suffrage headquarters in Washington. They had served a few days of a sixty-day sentence for picketing the White House.

FOTTERALL SQUARE WOMEN WHO WORK FOR AMBULANCE

Desiring to do something helpful for the soldiers of Uncle Sam, who have gone and will go across the Atlantic, the loyal girls and women, living in the vicinity of Eleventh and Cumberland streets, have begun a vigorous campaign to get funds with which to procure a first-class ambulance for the use of the Red Cross.