

A PICTURE PORTRAYAL OF POTTSTOWN—THE TOWN, THE HILL SCHOOL AND ITS WAR CAMP

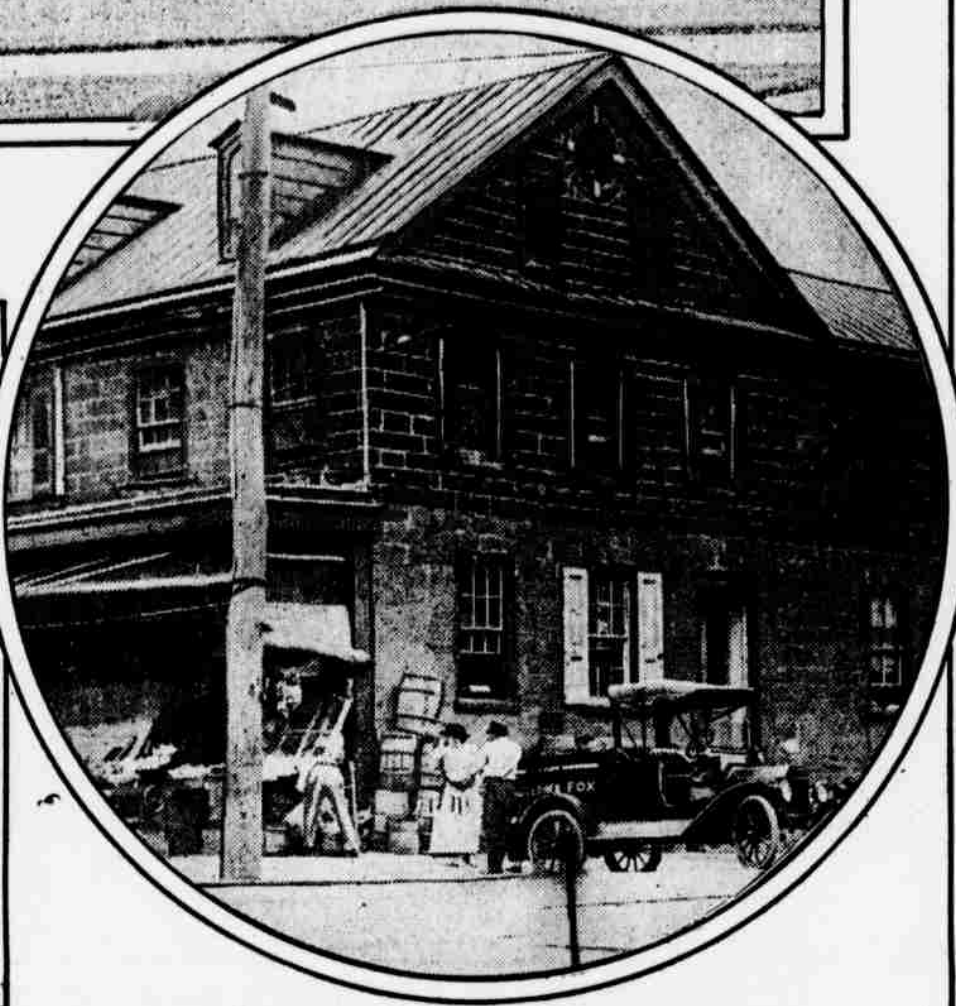

Photographs by Evening Ledger Staff Photographer.

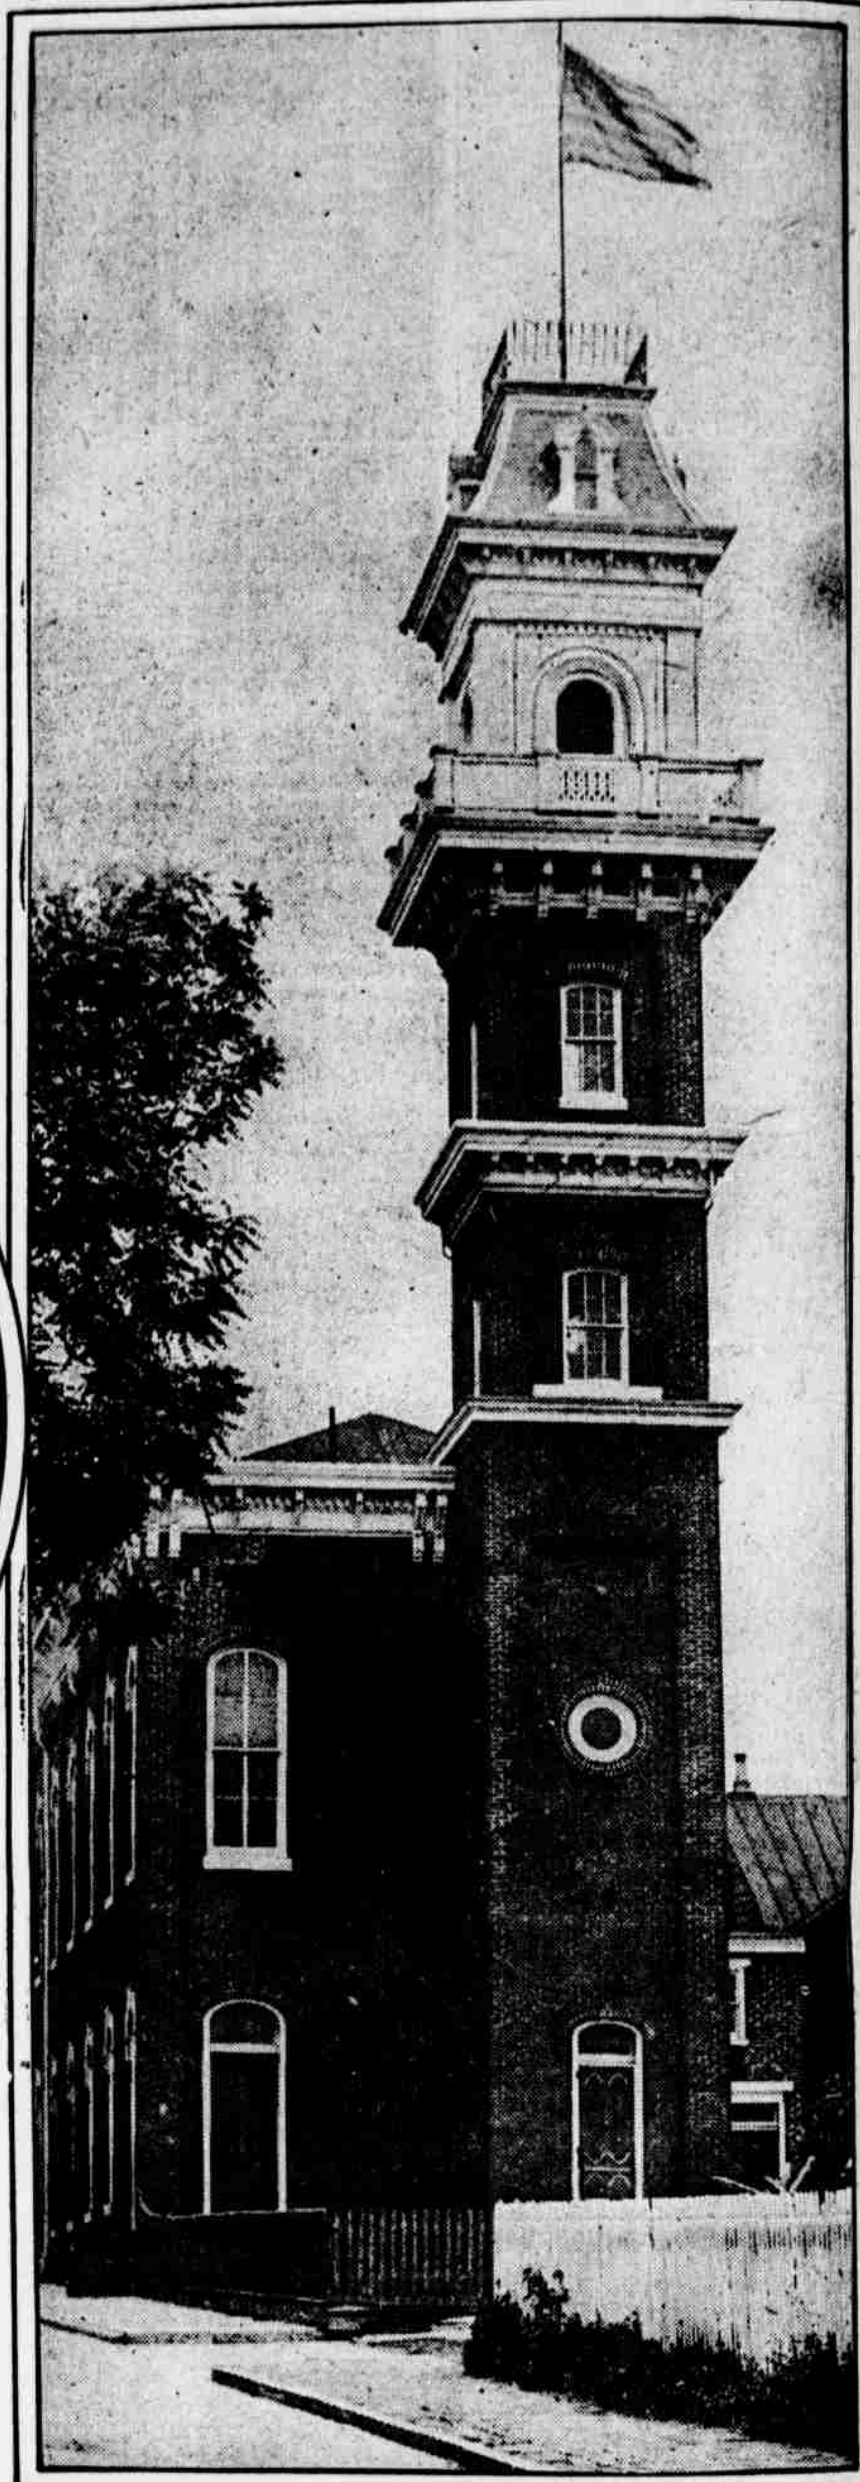

POTTSTOWN IS KNOWN EDUCATIONALLY AS THE HOME OF THE HILL SCHOOL
The ivy-mantled structure is the main hall of the school. In the curriculum of the Hill School is included a splendid course in the rudiments of military training.

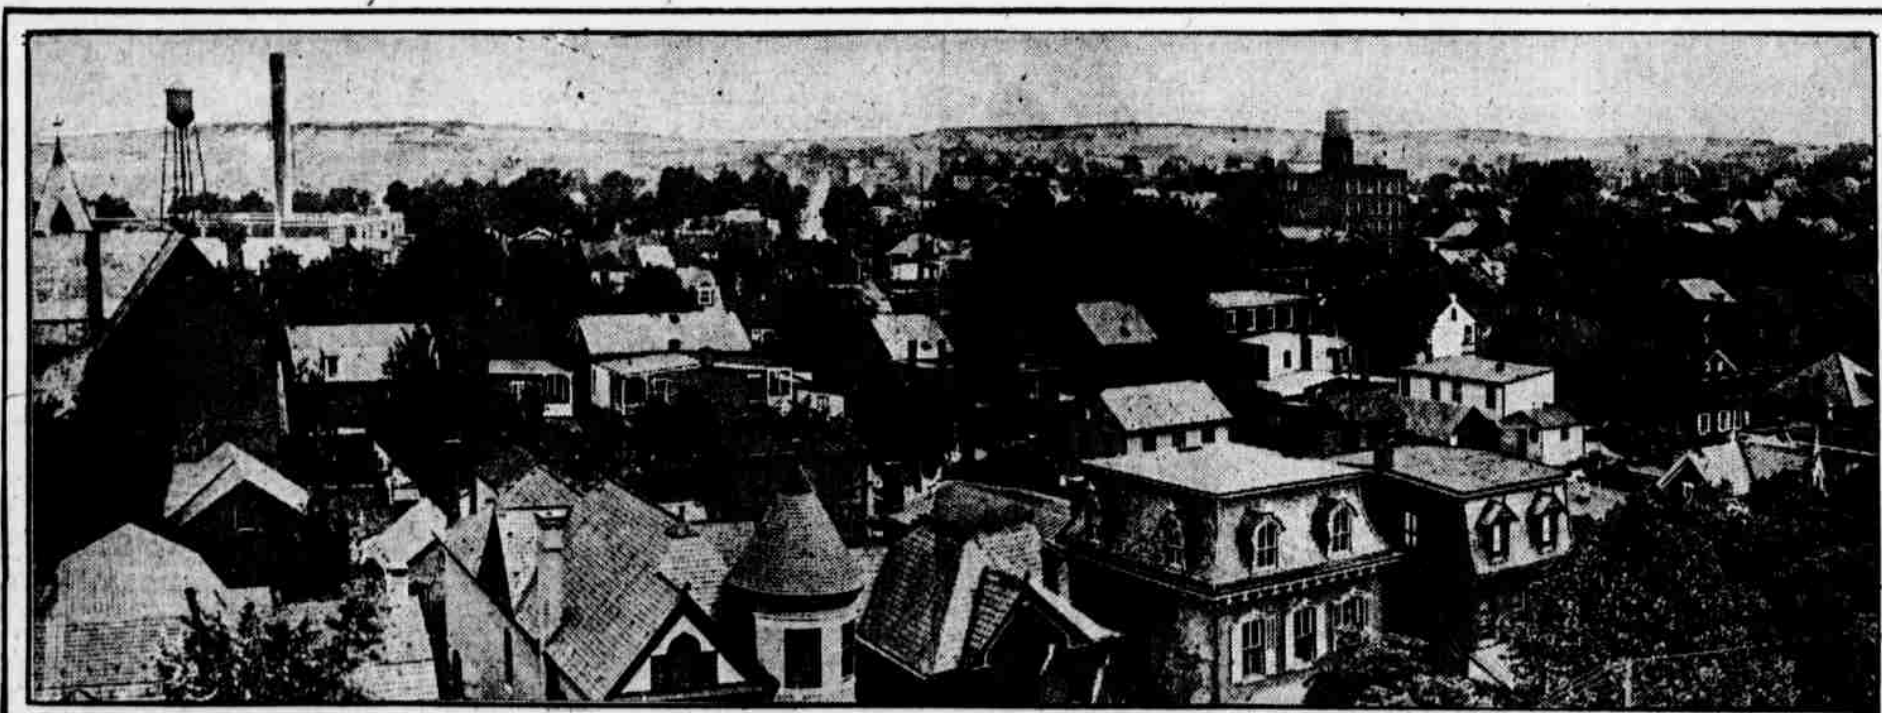

POTTSTOWN PRIDES ITSELF ON ITS INDUSTRIAL ACTIVITIES
The photograph shows the Eastern Steel Works, where hundreds of men find unbroken employment in these days of mammoth war orders.

A RELIC OF THE EIGHTEENTH CENTURY
Here lived General Arthur St. Clair, whom students of American history will recall as a presiding officer of the Continental Congress. The building stands at the intersection of High and Hanover streets.

A HEADQUARTERS FOR BRAVE FIRE LADDIES
As is everywhere the case, the members of Philadelphia Fire Company, No. 1, of Pottstown, bear an undying interest in the welfare of their native city.

A CAMERA VIEW OVER THE ROOFTOPS REVEALS THE NATURAL BEAUTY OF POTTSTOWN
The hilly nature of the city and its environs is indicated by the highway ascending quite abruptly in the middle background of the photograph and the fringe of wooded hilltops on the horizon.

MILITARY ENCAMPMENT AT THE HILL SCHOOL
That the summer might not be lost in these times of the nation's dire need for trained men, the authorities of the school prescribed a summer military encampment for the boys.

LOOKING WEST ALONG HIGH STREET, IN THE VERY HEART OF POTTSTOWN
Like most cities of middle size, not so large as to justify several shopping centers, the whole of Pottstown comes to the center of the city to transact its business.
