The appellant paid the taxes on the building and machinery, but has not paid the taxes on the other two items and asked that the assessment upon them be cancelled on the ground that the corporation was not the owner of these explosives on May 20, 1916, the date the assessment was made.

The International Steel and Ordnance Corporation, which is organized under the laws of New Jersey, operates in the township of Sayreville, Middlesex County.

ALLIED DIPLOMATS CONFER AT PARIS

Great Secrecy Marks Council Called to Consider Balkan Question

WAR AIMS ON PROGRAM

Problem of Revising Objects, Raised by Russia, Also to Be Discussed

PARIS, July 25.—Great secrecy marks the new Allied council of war, but it was understood today that initial sessions have already begun.

What disposition shall be made of Balkan territory after the war?

How shall Bulgaria be punished? What rewards shall Serbia, Montenegro and Rumania get?

How shall Austrian and Bulgarian aggressions in Serbia be offset?

In addition to the Balkan problems, however, the Allies may go still further and recapitulate the Entente's war aims entirely. It must not be considered that the present council indicates anything serious in the war situation.

The possibilities inherent in the fore-mentioned Allied conference must not be underestimated.

Since then the question of revising the general war aims of the Entente became the most pressing one in inter-Allied relations.

The Allies revise their war aims on the basis of Russia's policy if Russia was to continue in the war.

A dispatch from Washington yesterday stated that it was the opinion of diplomats here that the only power that could halt Russian military demoralization was the Allied conference called to revise the Allied war aims and an open declaration in favor of the policy of "no forcible annexations."

In view of the position of Russia and the resolution adopted by the Reichstag, it is not at all unlikely that a common basis for peace negotiations would be created should the Allies follow the hint from Washington.
