GEORGE J. GOULD, JR., MUST EARN HIS LIVING

Sacrificed Millions by Philadelphia Marriage to Girl He Loved

George J. Gould, Jr., youngest son of the New York financier, has sacrificed his own millions and has been thrown on his own resources as the result of his recent elopement and marriage to Miss Laura Carier, a pretty country girl, in Philadelphia on July 5...

The young couple already have moved to a small flat in the East Side in New York and young Gould will start today to earn his own living...

Young Mrs. Gould appeared radiantly happy when newspaper men called to verify the report. 'We're happy as can be,' she said, 'regardless of what happens.'

She was formerly Miss Carter, the foster-daughter of D. P. Callahan, a farmer of Ardena, N. J., near Freehold. They were married in this city by the Rev. Dr. W. B. Chalfant, of 147 North Fifteenth street...

The marriage attracted more than usual attention, as it was the second in the well-known Gould family in that many days. The first marriage was that of Kingston Gould to Miss Annunziata Lopez, an art student. It is known that both marriages were displeasing to ruling members of the Gould family...

Young George has emphatically declined the aid of his many friends who offered assistance when it became known that the luxurious Gould mansion had been closed to the young couple. 'I have always wanted to earn my own living,' he said, 'and that is just what I propose to do. We are happy. We are leading the simple life and I tell you it goes good.'

'And I might say that it is mighty interesting to be cut off from many of the things that have made my life so easy heretofore. I have several positions in view and probably will go to work on Wall street.'

'The great drawback to wealth is that it rather deadens one's own ability,' he said. 'I'm by no means sure that I can make good, but I assure you I am going to have a good stab at it.'

Young Gould's first move was to discharge his chauffeur and sell his favorite motor, which, by the way, was the car used to court his bride and the one he used in the elopement to Philadelphia.

HARRISBURG, July 28.—Governor Brumbaugh remained at the Executive Mansion all of this morning and refused himself to all interviews on the plea that he was acting on bills.

MOTHER OF BOLLINGER INFANT NOW IS DEAD

Final Chapter in Tragedy of Child Whom Doctor Would Not Save

CHICAGO, July 28.—The final chapter in the death of Baby Bollinger whose life Dr. H. J. Haiselden refused to save in 1915 because of the child's hopeless deformity, was written today with the announcement of the mother's death, due, her husband believes, to a broken heart.

The Bollinger case received additional notoriety only a few days ago when Baby Meter, a similarly imperfect infant, was allowed to die by Doctor Haiselden.

The shock of the infant's hopeless condition at birth, Doctor Haiselden's verdict to permit it to die and the attendant publicity were more than the mother could stand. Allen Bollinger, the woman's husband, declared...

'She was never the same afterward,' he said. 'I was afraid her mind would give way under the strain and I tried to cheer her, but she never recovered from her grief. If ever a woman died of a broken heart she did.'

The Bollinger case became famous throughout American and European medical circles. Doctor Haiselden's verdict that the child should die because of the hot controversy between medical men and laymen.

The Bollinger infant would probably have been an imbecile if allowed to live, according to Doctor Haiselden, who gave the same reasons for permitting Baby Meter to die.

WASHINGTON, July 28.—The United States draft law may be broadened so as to swing in men reaching the minimum age of twenty-one before the next call to the colors.

Secretary of War Baker indicated today that not only might he ask such a step, but that he might also seek to exclude men who turn thirty-one—the maximum age—before the second call.

An act now stands, the War Department apparently has power to continue drawing men to fill up quotas. For instance, after the first two 500,000 groups have been called, the Secretary of War can get other men to maintain those groups.

As wastage runs about one-third, he could continue calling out about 700,000 men a year to fill up the gaps or to 'maintain' existing troops. In this way, with the national army, National Guard and regular army, the United States would have about 2,000,000 fighting men always in Europe.

The question of transporting such forces to Europe furnishes a vexatious task, but indications are that there will be sufficient tonnage for transports and supply ships when they are needed. As at present estimated, 600,000 or more soldiers should be on French soil by September, 1918.

The War Department today contracted the impression that France was to manufacture all our heavy artillery. Baker said part of it would be made there, but that the United States has no intention of ditching its own very good model or of stopping production here.

FIRST MAN CALLED SEEKS EXEMPTION

Says He Had Passed 31st Birthday When He Registered

INELIGIBLE TO DRAFT Master Lists Mailed From Harrisburg—Selection Probably Will Begin on Monday

Philadelphia's first conscript to be summoned for physical examination on Monday morning has filed a claim for exemption.

He is Charles Arey, Eighth and Pine streets, and is one of the fifty-one men in this city who drew number 238 when Sizing number was the first draft. The War Department, opened the army lottery on the morning of July 20.

Whether Arey succeeds in avoiding army duty will depend upon the decision of General Crowder, Provost Marshal. Arey claims that he was over thirty-one years of age when he registered, that he is not eligible, and that his name must be stricken from the draft list in the Sixth District.

On June 5 Arey went before the registrar of the Second division of the Seventh Ward and registered for the national army. Upon reaching his home he was informed by his father that he was just over the age limit prescribed in the conscription act.

The family Bible was opened and, turning to the family records, Arey discovered that he was more than thirty-one. He returned to the registrar and demanded his card, but they refused the request. On July 20 Arey's name was the first drawn from the conscription list in the Sixth District.

Clinton Rogers Woodruff, chairman of the exemption board in the Sixth District, has forwarded the matter of Arey's case to the various exemption boards. A majority of the boards have made no attempt to summon eligibles on the draft lists, but will get down to business after the master lists have been delivered.

Forty-eight men have been summoned by the Sixth District exemption board for physical examinations. They will appear at the Twelfth and Pine streets station house at 10 o'clock, where four physicians will be on hand to conduct the tests. The examination of these men will be the first actual step to be taken in Philadelphia concerning the organization of the city's quota in the national army.

At noon today announcement was made by the military authorities in Harrisburg that the master lists have been mailed and by Monday morning will be in the hands of the various exemption boards. A majority of the boards have made no attempt to summon eligibles on the draft lists, but will get down to business after the master lists have been delivered.

A new method for determining the credits to be given cities and counties for enlistments in the National Guard was announced this morning by Colonel Frank G. Sweeney, chief of the State registration and draft bureau, following a conference with Adjutant General Stewart. This will permit counties and cities to get full credit for all men enlisted in the guard instead of accrediting all to the city in which the guard unit may be located.

Adjutant General Stewart today issued orders to the commanding officers of each unit in the guard to furnish him with the unit roll giving the name, postoffice address, county and city of each enlisted man. These rolls will be made the basis of a re-assignment of credits to be assigned each city and county.

DIDN'T CALL IT CITY OF VICE

'I never said that Philadelphia was a city of vice,' he added. 'I did say that conditions were bad there, as at many other Government cities, and I repeat the charge. Further, I mean to see that they are cleaned up, and I am satisfied that the Governor of the State and the spirit of the press and the people of Philadelphia will aid in such a course. I have never said that the people of Philadelphia will make such an atmosphere there that fathers and mothers will not object to sending their boys to the yards. I thought that all that was needed was to point out conditions and that the authorities would get legal evidence and promptly act. But I am confident that the spirit of the people and the press will force a clean-up, and that will be promptly.'

Asked whether he meant to stop progress at the yard because of the conditions, the Secretary replied that he had no such thought; that he knew the State or local authorities would quickly establish a wholesome condition.

'Philadelphia will be made the great shipbuilding center for the Government,' he said. 'I still think that the vice conditions must be cleaned up, but I never had any idea of punishing the yard because of conditions which have just arisen. I have expended the greater portion of $1,000,000 on the yard; increased the marine barracks and developed the yards for building dreadnaughts and battle cruisers.'

TO CALL ON STATE FOR VICE CLEAN-UP

Secretary Daniels Will Ask Governor to Act Since City Failed

SCORES RAIDS BY POLICE

Doesn't Propose to Reduce League Island Navy Yard, but Resorts Must Go

Governor Brumbaugh promised the Secretary of the Navy that State's Attorney General Brown will be sent to Philadelphia to make conditions surrounding the Philadelphia Navy Yard wholesome. The next step in the Federal Government's fight to clean up vice conditions will be to call upon the Governor of the State, as was done in Rhode Island. If there is another failure by the State, as in the case of the Philadelphia authorities, then the Federal Government will take charge of the situation.

A Attorney General Brown is somewhere in the city today, and the Governor left Harrisburg for Philadelphia early this morning. Secretary Daniels was greatly distressed at the outcome of the hearings in Philadelphia yesterday. He said the Federal authorities had furnished indisputable evidence of the existence of the places, and he had expected the police of Philadelphia would get the evidence on the proprietors.

The manner of conducting the raids by the police, he said, worked against getting evidence of proprietorship.

HE SUPPLIED INFORMATION 'If a man is known to be running a gambling place and is told by the police in the front pew of a church when the raids are in progress,' was the Secretary Daniels commented upon the action of the police. He said he had supplied the names and numbers of places trading in vice in order that the police could get evidence on them, not with the idea that local authorities would simply raid them without attempting to get evidence that would result in convictions.

Secretary Daniels said he had never said that Philadelphia was a city of vice, but that the conditions around League Island were bad. In justification of his position he had resolved hundreds of letters from Philadelphia citizens giving him evidence and approving his course. Mr. Daniels is not in the least embarrassed by the action in Philadelphia yesterday. He does not charge that politics operated there; but he has some well-founded ideas how to get evidence and how to allow the guilty to escape.

He called on Mayor Sizing today. 'If the conditions of which I complained in my letter to Governor Brumbaugh can be discovered by agents of the Navy Department, they can be discovered by the police of Philadelphia, and I am confident that with vigilance and careful action that part of the police, they can be corrected.'

'Of course, if the Governments of Pennsylvania and Philadelphia notify the Navy Department that they are unable to maintain clean and wholesome environment for youth entrusted to them during their training, then the question of what must be the duty of the Navy Department in such an impossible condition in such an enlightened State and city, will not be avoided by the Navy.'

'I never said that Philadelphia was a city of vice,' he added. 'I did say that conditions were bad there, as at many other Government cities, and I repeat the charge. Further, I mean to see that they are cleaned up, and I am satisfied that the Governor of the State and the spirit of the press and the people of Philadelphia will aid in such a course. I have never said that the people of Philadelphia will make such an atmosphere there that fathers and mothers will not object to sending their boys to the yards.
