GOSSIP OF THE STREET—PHILADELPHIA MARKETS

DO THE PHILADELPHIA BANKERS DRIVE BUSINESS TO NEW YORK?

Some Investment Houses Aver Trade Is Thus Diverted—Is a Change Needed? Gossip of the Street

"WHY do Philadelphia bankers compel investment brokers to do their banking business in New York and why do cities like Wilmington pass up Philadelphia and do their banking in Gotham?" were questions put by a well-known broker.

"Why," he continued, "is call money 3½, for instance, or even more, in Philadelphia, when we can get it easily in New York at the same time at 2¼?"

"I am not complaining of the Philadelphia banks as a whole," the speaker said; "some of them have treated me splendidly, but let me give an instance. I wanted to make a loan of $250,000. The bank I applied to wanted 3½ to 4 for the call loan. I called up a New York bank and got it at 2½ at once. The Philadelphia bank I applied to in the first instance had, to my knowledge, more than $7,000,000 on deposit in the New York bank that made me the loan, on which the local bank was earning nothing. I can't figure out why they did not meet New York's figures. And this is going on all the time.

"Another matter in this connection," he continued; "you get your answer from New York as quick as a flash, while here you have to wait for an executive committee meeting or some such thing."

New Credit of $100,000,000 for Russia

One of the reasons for the stronger market yesterday was said to be Secretary Lansing's declaration that the United States is not worried over the Russian situation, coupled with the announcement of Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo of a new credit to Russia of $100,000,000, thus bringing the total Russian credit up to $275,000,000.

Efficiency Needed in Sugar Production

The sugar producers will have to brace up, in common with other industries, to satisfy war demands. Sugar consumption always increases in wartime, and with the present war, the greatest ever, it can be easily realized that the demands will be correspondingly large. The estimated crop for the United States and Cuba, the former just coming to market and the latter almost completed, is 5,500,000 tons for this year. The estimated domestic consumption is 3,500,000 tons, leaving an available supply for export of 2,000,000 tons. In 1916 the Allies bought 1,200,000 tons, and if they buy as much this year there will be a surplus of 800,000 tons. It must be remembered, however, that we, too, have an army in the field this year, and this will increase the demand for sugar, and there is a good chance, therefore, that this surplus may be reduced by some volume.

Millions in Dividends for Standard Oil Stockholders

When Judge Landis, out in Chicago, fined the Standard Oil Company $29,000,000 some years ago Wall street and the country at large gasped. What would happen? This was the question on every lip. The only thing which did happen was a dissolution of the vast holdings into a number of smaller companies; the holdings of the stockholders were not disturbed, the only difference being that they had more eggs in more baskets. These various companies have gone right on mkaing money. For the third quarter of the present year the dividends declared amounted to $22,968,751, and for the nine months, $72,494,671.

A "Tip" That Was Misconstrued

"Tips" are a familiar thing in the financial district. Sometimes they work out and sometimes they don't. This is a story of how a bull "tip" was misinterpreted for a bear "tip," with the result that the stock which was "tipped" sold off when there was every reason under the circumstances to send it up. On Thursday afternoon Texas Company had a big decline. This decline, of course, was history after the close, but few persons in the Street knew why it had happened, the stock falling 12¾ points. It seems that a broker in New York received a communication from Washington to the effect that the Government would not fix a price for oil. He called a floor trader on the New York Exchange on the telephone and informed him of what he had heard, adding that it was bullish on Texas Company, in which the floor trader was interested. The floor trader seemed to understand, but soon the stock began selling off. After the close the broker met the floor trader and asked him if he could account for the stock having such a wide decline.

"Why shouldn't it," said the floor trader, "with the Government fixing the price of oil? There was every reason for it." After the two had compared notes the floor trader found that he had misinterpreted the broker's words over the telephone. Yesterday the stock had a good recovery.

Public Holding on to High-Grade Bonds

"I have plenty of orders on hand this morning," was the comment of the manager of a large investment house, "but I cannot execute them. People must be holding on to their holdings of first-class bonds on account of the recent prices they have been bringing or these bonds are being retired for the present.

"The only way I can account for such a condition," he remarked, "is the feeling which is in the air in regard to an early peace. This is my own personal opinion and is not shared by any of my associates, but I believe if something big would happen to let the people of this country know unmistakably that they are in this war to the last available man and the last dollar things would suddenly change in the investment market.

"Personally," he concluded, "I am not in favor of peace under present conditions, but I would like to see this peace feeling that is in the atmosphere get a good knockout blow, which would bring us all to our senses."

Price Fixing Fair So Far

"We are interested in several soft-coal operations, but not big enough to be a power in any way. Yet I have no hesitation in saying that I consider $2 a ton at the mine a fair price," observed the principal member of a large brokerage house yesterday.

"Indeed," he continued, "the price fixing by the Government, so far, is certain to dispel any fears which have been entertained as to radical cutting in the prices of the commodities which are still to be regulated and is bound to have a good effect all around."

Republic Railway and Light July Report

The report of the Republic Railway and Light Company and its subsidiaries for the month of July has just been issued.

It shows an increase of $61,294.79 in gross earnings for July, 1917, as compared with those of July, 1916. It also shows a slight increase in net earnings during the same period.

In common with other similar public utilities the company shows a large increase in operating expenses and taxes for the month, but this is unquestionably due to the exorbitant prices which it had to pay for coal and labor. It is more than probable that the fixation of coal prices by the President will result in a large saving on this item in next month's report, unless contracts for coal at high rates are still running.

After providing for preferred stock dividends, etc., there is carried $84,221.05 towards interest and dividends, an increase over July, 1916, of $15,405.01, leaving a balance of $30,185.60.

The present market price of the stock is 34¾ bid, 35½ asked.

The Public "Be Pleased"

A well-known banker in the central section of the city called one of his office boys yesterday morning and said:

"Ed, will you please look up such a file for a letter from ——"

"Yes, sir," came back the quick reply.

"Do you always address your employes that way?" he was asked.

"I think so," he answered, "at least I try to."

"Speaking about that," the banker continued, "an order went out from a certain concern to its employes to cut out the 'please' when talking over the phone, and they did it. A short time after a special order went out to put the 'please' in again. The first order had demoralized a big organization."

"I just read," he continued, "a circular addressed by E. E. Loomis, president of the Lehigh Valley Railroad, to all its employes which, among other things, says:

"'When we sell a ticket we sell more than a ride. When we issue a bill of lading our obligation extends beyond the mere movement of freight. In each case our patrons are entitled to and must receive prompt, accurate and courteous information and attention.'

"I find," he ended, "that 'please' and 'thank you' are magic business builders."

After Price Fixing, Government Must Deal With Labor

A prominent uptown banker remarked in the course of a conversation on price fixing: "There is a well-defined impression that immediately following price fixing by the Government, and the adjustment of the income tax schedules and taxation on excess profits, that the Government will be compelled to face the labor situation as Great Britain has had to face it.

"This impression," he said, "is general, and in the discussion of almost every important topic of the day it intrudes itself into the conversation, but no one seems to have any defined idea as to what is necessary to be done, nor do many seem to know what has been specifically done in Great Britain, although in a general way they know that the problem there has been effectually grappled with.

"The restrictions on labor by labor unions in England prior to the war made it impossible to produce the munitions necessary for the army and navy. These restrictions were to be eliminated by consent of the unions on conditions agreed to by the Government officials as follows:

"'The rules and practices were to be changed only for the period of the war; no changes were to be made which unnecessarily affected established conditions; capital was to receive no advantage in the struggle between capital and labor.'

"For example, profits were to be limited and wages controlled by Government tribunals.

"On these conditions labor agreed that there should be no stoppage upon work on munitions or other work required for the successful carrying on of the war.

"With reports of strikes in shipyards and other labor troubles in widely scattered parts of the country," he continued, "I am inclined to think that labor is the next thing the Government must deal with."
