FIRST AMERICAN SIGHTED

My first sight of an American soldier in the field was pastoral. The soldier came from Paris pulled into a siding a kilometer from a certain station, where we waited twenty minutes. Off to the left, two far away, I detailed observation, I could see a camp of brown and black men, the outline of khaki-clad men. Suddenly from the other side of the track I heard the music of a flute, a flute playing "My Old Kentucky Home."
