Eaglets

A hundred thousand aeroplanes—a million if we need 'em—will soon be proof that Yankee brains are in the fight for Freedom. The flock of fliers we will send to circulate destruction, from tip to tip and end to end will be of best construction. In point of power, strength and speed they'll all be masterpieces, and they will serve our Allies' need until this old war ceases. This mighty fleet of winged craft above the foe will hover, and they will shoot him fore and aft and make him hunt for cover. They'll chase him from redoubt and trench and make him sick of slaughter; his ranks with leaden rain they'll drench until he cries for quarter. And he who scorned the Eagle's brood because they watched and waited, will change his royal attitude before our anger's sated.

WILL MOORE.

No Sacrifice

The governess sought by every known means to stimulate her small pupil's somewhat undeveloped sense of gratitude.

"Now, Charley," she said, "ought you not to be very much obliged to the cow for the milk she gives you every morning?"

"Oh, I don't know," said Charley. "She has no use for it herself."

Keeping Up With Science

Doctor—What? Troubled with sleeplessness? Eat something before going to bed.

Patient—Why, doctor, you once told me never to eat anything before going to bed.

Doctor (with dignity)—Pooh, pooh! That was last January. Science has made enormous strides since then.—Christian Register.

The Young Lady Across the Way

We asked the young lady across the way if her father was satisfied with the Administration's conduct of the war and she said Oh, no, he'd always been a strong Republican.

Heroic Remedy

The physician to whom the Irish man had applied for relief from a stomach ailment asked on the occasion of his last visit:

"Have you been drinking the very hot water an hour before each meal, as I directed? If so, how do you feel now?"

"Doc," said the Celt, "I tried hard to do it, but I had to quit. I drank for thirty-five minutes, and it made me feel like a balloon!"
