HAVRE DE GRACE OPENS TOMORROW

Seventeen-Day Program Arranged for Annual Fall Racing Campaign

TEN STABLES ON LIST

HAVRE DE GRACE, Md., Sept. 10.—With a seventeen days' meeting, the Harford Agricultural and Breeders' Association will inaugurate Maryland's autumn racing season for 1917 tomorrow here, just south of the point where the Susquehanna River mingles its waters with the waters of the Chesapeake Bay, and about midway between Baltimore and Philadelphia.

The meeting will be marked by the running of ten stakes of sufficient value to attract to Maryland the most representative American and Canadian sportsmen and the cleverest horses in spite of the competition of Belmont Park and Aqueduct. The coming meeting promises to exceed in attractiveness as regards sport any that has been held on this track in the past.

New York competition will help rather than hurt it. For there will be no racing in Canada this fall, and if there was none about New York, this meeting would be called upon to take care of more horses than possibly could be accommodated, and the fields, in stakes and purses alike, would be too big and unwieldy for either successful handling or true racing.

As far as support goes, this track draws its crowds from Philadelphia, mainly, and in a lesser degree from Baltimore and Wilmington.

Mulford Enters Motor Race

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—Ralph Mulford is the latest speed star to enter the automobile race which will be run September 22 at Sheepshead Bay Speedway.

CHANEY NOR KANSAS IS CLEVER; BUT AS PUNCHERS THE OLD MULE AND ITS KICK DO NOT FIGURE

Principals in Olympia's Windup Tonight Are Batters of Terrific Wallop—Met Before and Scored Three Knockdowns Each

By LOUIS H. JAFFE

PRIZES for cleverness will be out of the question tonight at the Olympia, when Rocky Kansas-Rocco Tozza in real life-gives an exhibition or something on the order of what we think is going on over there, with George Chaney as the other combatant. Some Philadelphia fans may not know it, but Rocky and George have met before. The scene was laid in Buffalo, and exchanges from there didn't state that the conflict was pretty from a scientific angle, but in so far as slugging was concerned no other two punchers could have walloped each other so hard and still be battling at the finish.

It was only a few days after Chaney's great contest with Johnny Dundee here at Shibe Park that the Baltimore bearcat met Kansas in a 10-rounder at Buffalo. The fans there, having heard of Chaney's knockout record, didn't figure which would be the winner on points. They knew Kansas also was a boxer of the hard punching type, so the general dope was that only a key would terminate the match. However, everything went flooie for Chaney and Kansas were on their feet at the finish of thirty minutes of thrifty fighting. But each of the batters' punch powers were in evidence. Kansas knocked Chaney down three times. Not to be outdone, and to make matters even, George knocked Rocky down three times.

Kansas, twenty-three years old, five feet two inches tall, and boxing since 1911, has been opposed to a number of flat-fingers of national reputation. He has had the gloves on with Johnny Dundee, Eddie Morgan, Benny Leonard, Frankie Callahan, Ad Wolgast, Johnny Kilbane and Fred Welsh. He twice experienced matches with Kilbane. The first time Rocky was pasted and lambasted all over the ring by the boxer in his own class, and great ring general.

The second scrap, however, found Kansas a much improved fighter, and not only did he give Kilbane a tough tussle, but he also dropped the title-holder. Just before Leonard took the crown away from Welsh, Kansas gave the Briton a terrific trimming, and had Sir Frederick wobbly in two or three of a ten-round tilt. Buffalo fans are pulling for Kansas to be allowed a match for the lightweight championship, and we shall see tonight whether he is worthy of a crack at Leonard.

Charley White may be one of the hardest punchers in the business, yet just so good a hitter as the Chicagoan is Eddie Wagonid. He is just so tough. They were opponents in the opening wind-up of the season at the National Club Saturday night, and bets were placed at 2 to 1 that White would knockout the Philadelphian Italian. Those that put up the bigger portion of the wagers didn't win.

Patsy Broderick vs. Harry Boyle will be the semifinal to the Kansas-Chaney bout at the Olympia tonight. Other bouts are Bert Spencer, of Brooklyn, vs. Lew Stinger, battling Dundee, of Baltimore, vs. Battling Murray and Frankie Oes vs. Patsy McFadden, of Brooklyn.
