

A HOUSE BUILT FROM OLD STOVE PLATES AND OTHER PICTURESQUE CAMERA CAPTURES

A YOUTHFUL AVIATION STUDENT
Joseph A. Paul, twenty years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Paul, 655 North Forty-fourth street, now enrolled at the United States Aeronautical School, at Pensacola, Fla.

CONSERVATION IS NOW PRACTICED EVEN IN THE RAG SHOPS
Women are employed to sort the wool from the cotton in the waste establishments of the city, the scene here pictured being one of the larger plants near Front and Arch streets.

A MASTER OF SPEED AND STRATEGY
Many of the Curtis Country Club's baseball victories are credited to Ray Germain's skill as a pitcher.

A STAG PARTY ALL HIS OWN
When the EVENING LEDGER staff photographer looked for "Butch" McDevitt, he found that "millionaire for a day" astride an iron deer on the lawn of Wilkes-Barre's courthouse.

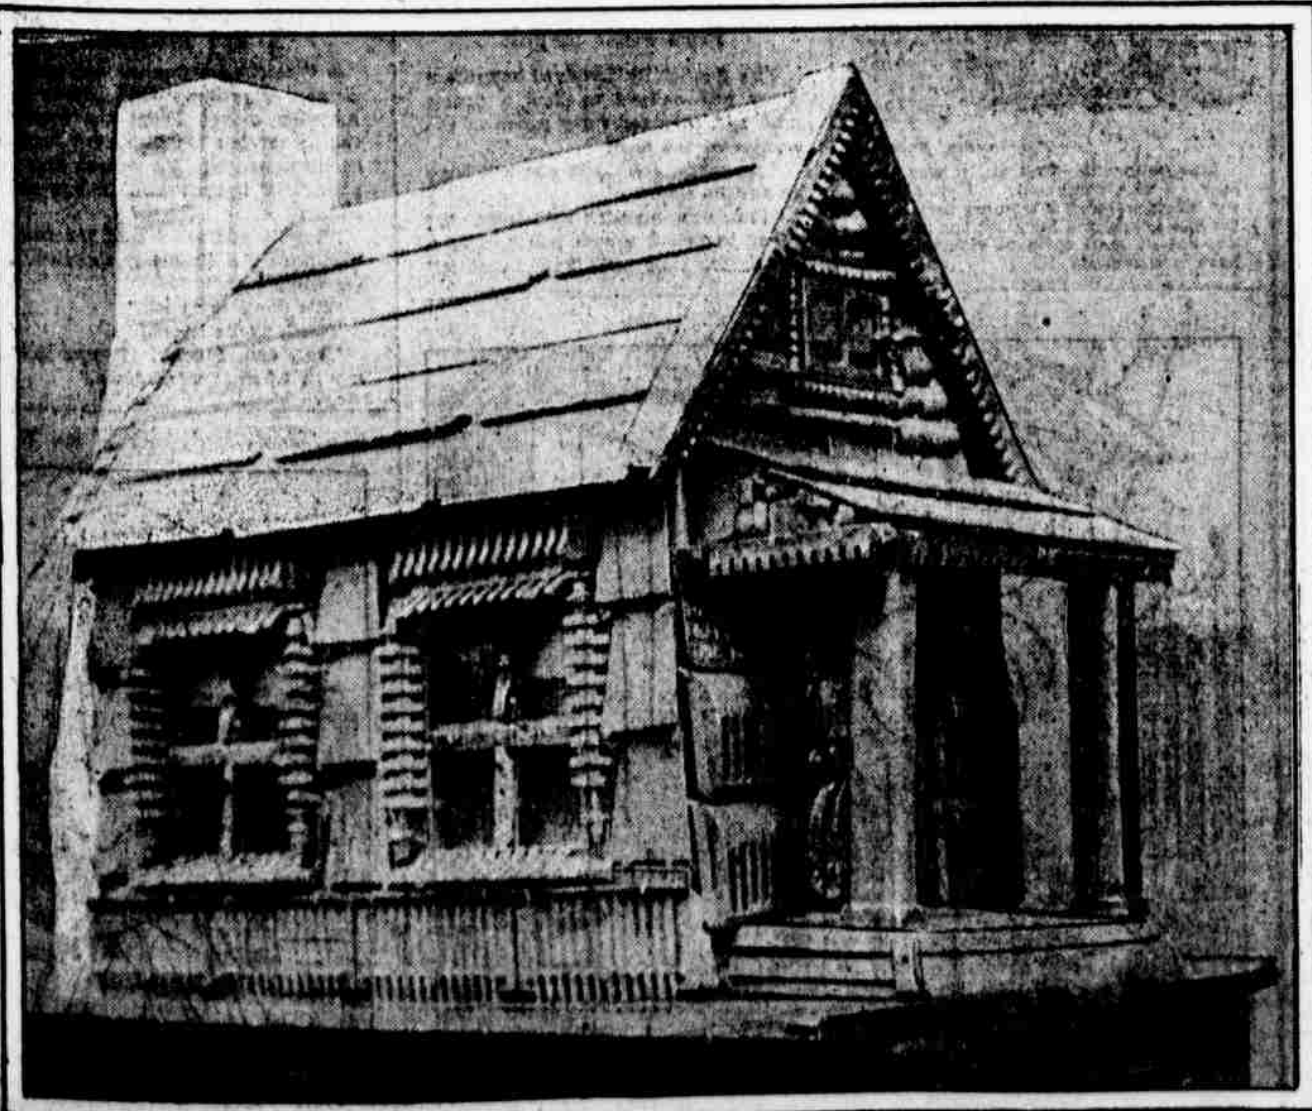

Copyright, Harris & Ewing.
WIFE OF THE NEW SWISS MINISTER
Mme. Jean Sulzer shows every indication of maintaining at Washington the high social pace set by her predecessor, Mme. Ritter.

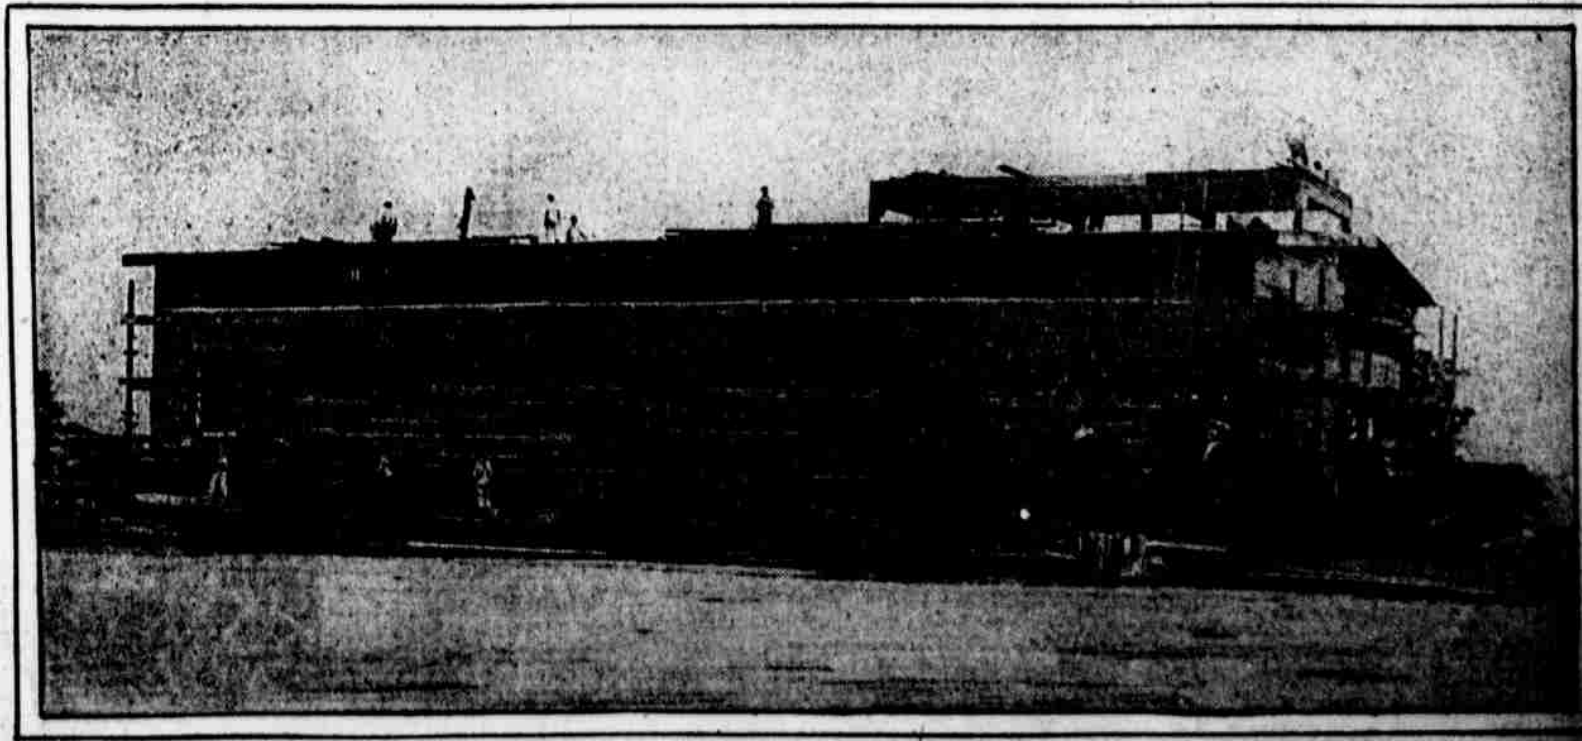

Copyright, Harris & Ewing.
SOME MAY CALL HIS JOB A SWEET ONE
The United States Food Administration has placed George M. Rolph, a San Francisco raw and refined sugar expert, in charge of its sugar department.

WHERE EVEN THE LOSER WINS
A watermelon race carries compensation for all participants, whether prize-winners or not.

A STOVE LIFTER WOULD SEEM A FITTING LATCH KEY FOR THIS BUILDING
Out of old grates, plates and other discarded parts of heaters, ranges and stoves this house, on exhibition at 117 Arch street, has been constructed.

Photograph by General Photo Service.
RUSHING WORK ON THE REFRIGERATING PLANT AT WRIGHTSTOWN CANTONMENT
In this building, which is nearly completed, will be made the ice needed for food preservation and other purposes of the army base which Uncle Sam is assembling at Camp Dix in the State across the Delaware.