FOUR MORE HOSPITAL UNITS ARE MUSTERED IN

Presbyterian, Jefferson, University and Episcopal Base Organizations Await Orders

The Presbyterian, Jefferson, University and Episcopal base hospital units have been mustered into Federal service, and are now awaiting orders to proceed to some unknown destination, according to Major E. Hollingsworth Siter, M. D., of 1818 Rittenhouse street. Major Siter is the army examining surgeon in this city, and as such has had complete charge of the recruiting for the army medical forces. The Episcopal Hospital unit is now training at the United States army ambulance service camp at Allentown.

The order for the units to embark is expected at any time; the only reason that they have been delayed this long is due to the lack of transportation facilities, said Major Siter today.

The personnel of a base hospital unit consists of about 160 enlisted men, sixty nurses and forty doctors.

Major Siter is extremely pleased with the quick response of Philadelphians to enter the base hospital service. This city has furnished a larger quota for this branch of service than any other city in the country, he said today.

Motor Can Aid in Production of Almost Incredible Number of Air Machines

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12. Yankee ingenuity again has triumphed. The new aviation engine, designated by the signal service as the "liberty motor," which is to be the main reliance of the United States in blinding German gunners, has successfully passed its final tests. It has met with all requirements, an official statement from Secretary of War Baker said this afternoon. He adds that "in power, speed, service, ability and minimum weight the new engine compares favorably with the hest that the European war has produced."
Signal corps officers add that it surpasses any yet in use in Europe. It is standardized in type and can be produced in quantitles sufficient to place an almost incredible number of machines in the air in Europe.

These engines already are being con-

"The standardized United States aviation engine produced under Government super-vision is expected to solve the problem of building high class, powerful and yet com-paratively delicate aviation engines by American machine methods — the same standardized methods which revolutionized the automobile industry."

Actual details of manufacture, horse-power, speed and the like for war reasons are withheld. But officials of the Government openly asserted this afternoon that this engine will strike a greater blow at German aggression than any single achievement in the war either by the Entente or
