JUST GOSSIP ABOUT PEOPLE

And Now the Plans for Germantown's Midway Lane Are Discussed by Nancy Wynne. Other Matters Are of Interest

October 5 at the Alexander Van Rennsehe given two weeks later, on October 17. School House lane in Germantown, for the benefit of the Germantown Hosultal, and like all good people nearly every woman in Germantown is interested and in a plactical way, too, one of the latest ideas in connection with the fete will be the impersonation of the niways popular fiction characters by the younger girls who are to help in the affair. And the beauty of it will be that there will be a real live Alice from Wonderland, The Babes in the Wood, Little Red Riding Hood and loads of others JUST THINK of going out there and meeting the Hatter or the Mad March Hare, and, "positutely," I should be overcome with excruciating joy should I on passing down that historical old street, encounter the Walrus and the Carpenter tracing their steps toward the restaurant, there to eat "all the little oysters."

Do you know, I've often wondered why people did not give Alice dances or amateur entertainments. The Junior League, for instance, or the other annual entertainments. I think I've said this before in these very columns. Why, there's a whole wealth of possibilities in it! So many unique characters! Fancy sceing Pather William and his inquisitive son, with his upturned countenance! Think also of Tweedle Dum and Tweedle Dee and the White Knight, who would tell us of the Aged Man. And the Duchesa and the Cook and the Cheshire Cat. to say nothing of the Rabbit and the Jabberwocky. To be sure, the outlay would be a bit large, but I am sure the returns would justify the expense, for even "grown ups" love their Alice. And I'll bet the show would have to be given very many times.

TET'S go back to the Midway Lane, how-Li ever. There is to be a tollgate, and pretty Marjory Taylor will be in charge of the gate and will be assisted by a targe number of nides of the younger set, who will sell flowers and candy. There will be an orchestra on hand on the grounds of the Germantown Academy for those who want to dance, and most people generally. do, so the lawn there will surely be some spot of kaleidoscopic color.

The quaint old street will be transformed into a veritable midway of frivolous smusement, there will be pony and goat pides for the children, a Punch and Judy show at regular intervals during the afternoon, slides and other kinds of annuements for the little ones, and there will be novelties of every kind to purchase and much "eats."

Dolls? Oh, yes? Dolls of every kind and valiety will be there looking for new muchers and the grab bag will be filled with surprises for any who may care to emplore. Mrs. Acthur Baines, Mrs. Frank Strawbridge and Mrs. Affred Weill are to be in charge of the children's depart'and Te telman, to Mr. Abe J. Rosenfeld,

Mrs. Charles Penrose Keith is chair man of the committee, which is comprised | friends. of the board of lady visitors of the Germantown Hospital.

SO RACHEL PRICE is coming out after all. Well, I guess it's just as well. for young people need some pleasure and good times, and if they have a little of it they'll only work the harder for the hoys who can't be here to dance with them but who need the assistance of the Red Cross.

Rachel is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eli K. Price, you know. She is lark, with brown eyes and a slender figure, and has an especially charming smile. If she is one-half as attractive as her mother she will go a great way, I think. Mrs Price succeeded Mrs. Meade Large last spring as chairman of the annual Rittenhouse Flower Market, which was an even greater success than heretofore. The tea, unless the plans are changed, will be given on November 15.

HEAR Nancy Coleman Biddle is down Lat White Sulphur Springs, in West Virginia, where her father, Dawson Coleman, is stopping. George Blddle had to go to France in the last fortnight and Nancy, who had planned to go to France with Mrs. Donnell Swan, of Baltimore, has gone to the springs with Mrs. Swan. who has been ill. I hear they still plan to go as poon as Mrs. Swan is well again. Nancy has been over there once since the war started and drove an ambulance, so she knows the ropes and will be welcome where an untrained woman would not I am gind for her husband's sake that she will be able to go over and be tions him, for there is so much of this marrying and being obliged to separate almost immediately thereafter these days If seems sort of pathetic.

DiD you know Brad Fraley is driving an ambulance in France? Well, he is, and doing aplendid work for the mounded. Brad, you remember, married Effic Disston the year after she came out, and they have been living in Chestbut Hill. They have several darling children, who are as good looking as their parents, and that is saying something, for Effic is an exquisite blonde type Bist Brad a very good-looking brunette type. Just as it ought to be, isn't it?

FRANCES CLARK, the daughter of the Walter Clarks, of Chestnut Hill; writes that there is great need for ban-dages in the hospitals in France. She has been over there nursing the wounded and baladag in the hospitals for more

YESTERDAY I told you a lot about mother's time is spent in Red Cross work. Frances says that sometimes a soldier will be brought in with as many laers' place at Camp Hill, Fort Wash. as twenty wounds. Think of the banhigton. And now I have more to tell dages required for that one poor man about the Midway Lane Fete, which will alone! It's appulling what those men are suffering a while. And there were plenty of "amokes," too, for each man. "smokes." too, for each man.

Early the next morning they left, after the best of breakfasts, which the good women again provided for them. Each soldier-to-be was given a fat parcel, which later proved to b. a lunch. Joseph Hinkson gave them all cigarettes as a picasant last-minute surprise, and then the train came and at last they were all off, cheering with all their hearts—and voices—for Rid-

On that same Thursday morning the men who were drafted from Haverford township left for Camp Meade. The night before they left Horatio Lloyd gave them a banquet at the Oakmont Fire House. The men of the township presented each drafted man with a wrist watch—and there were eighty-five of them. The women of the Red Cross out there gave them all comfort bags.

Yard have had the pleasure, and, of course, the thrill, of making an ascension in the "captive balloon." This is a huge dirigible, nicknamed thus because it is attached to the aviation grounds, and, of course, cannot ascend very far. Before the war the women were permitted to ascend in the airships, but this is now forbidden. The basket of the big balloon is every bit as thrilling for those who dare to venture, and although they have the assurance that they cannot go beyond reach, still up in the air must be rastly interesting in any machine,
