MRS. TURNBULL, LONGEST WOMAN DRIVER IN CITY, WINS IDA E. DIXON MEMORIAL CUP FROM LARGE FIELD

Whitemarsh Valley Country Club Player Hits Tremendously Long Balls From Tee and Fairway. Miss Maule Skillfully Handles Tournament

By PETER PUTTER

When women played in the first annual competition for the Ida E. Dixon Memorial Cup over the course of the Springhaven Country Club yesterday were very much surprised when at the end of the day a single woman had been able to make better than 95 for the gross score, the honor going to Mrs. Caleb F. Fox, the local amateur champion. Yet the conditions were ideal for golf. The day turned out to be a delightful one. There was no wind to bother the fair golfers, and while the greens varied in putting qualities, they were true. Springhaven is as flat as your hand, yet it has some of the best golf courses in the city. The women in particular. The first nine are 151 yards long, and here it was that the women mounted up.

The story of Mrs. Wallace Turnbull was very popular. Mrs. Turnbull said after the play was over that all the credit belonged to Jimmy Barnes, the efficient professional at Whitemarsh. He had been greatly interested in her game from the start and had predicted that she would go far in golf. She has been noted for a long time as one of the longest drivers among the women players.

I had the pleasure of playing with Mrs. Turnbull as a partner not so long ago at Whitemarsh and had the first opportunity to see her work with the wood, and I soon learned that her reputation as a hard hitter was earned. Time after time she crashed out 200-yard drives, and some of her drives were terrific. On the long eleven, which for most players is a three-shot hole with wood all the way, she hit three tremendous shots, and her third was just over the green in that grassy hollow above the hole.

One Reason Why She Hits Long Ball
Mrs. Turnbull is fortunate in that she is 5'2" shoulders-high, and one of her long drives is in addition to this she times her wooden shots perfectly. She hits the ball hard and this is where most women fail to put in the force. Many a woman who is perfectly good with the club has hit the ball and just at that time when they ought to be getting every ounce into the shot they slacken down. But Mrs. Turnbull hits her wooden shots with her eyes and proficiency of a professional.

And yet a lot of women who have seen her hit the ball from the tee wonder why her handicap is as high as 18. The reason seems to be that she has not mastered the art of the approach. The shorter distances bother her greatly and she is usually well over the hole or far short of it. Her putting eye is good and her work on the greens compares favorably with most women. So when she gets the difficult art of approaching mastered we will see a very fine golfer, for from the time she is not only the longest woman driver in Philadelphia, but there are very few

CHARLES EVANS JR.
With a par four. The second hole also fell to Jones when Gardner drove badly and had his second shot trapped. At this point, however, Gardner's luck turned. He drove out of bounds, but the ball bounced back into the fairway with a splendid lie. Gardner chose his iron and was on the green before the right-hand trap. This hit of play seemed to shake Jones' confidence, for in trying to play safe he was trapped and lost the hole. The next three holes fell to Gardner, who was playing in splendid form and using fine judgment.

Jones Refuses to Crack

After losing a two-hole lead to the champion, Jones had a nervous moment. He had gone on in smoke and mentally, at least, conceded the match. Apparently that was what the gallery expected to see young Jones do, but instead he settled down and showed us a quality of golf that was of the first order. Jones won the eighth hole when the ball Gardner's pitch shot was trapped. The ninth hole at Merion is a beauty. It is a hole which calls for an iron from the tee. Jones played twelve feet to the right of the hole, while Gardner was nicely on the line. Jones' approach put stopped at the lip of the cup. At this point Jones showed some good judgment. He took a chance. From his position he ran a big risk of a gamble. But as he would have lost the hole had he played otherwise, he took this chance and squared the match by sinking his ball for a two. The battle tightened up and the fighting was furious from this time. The twelfth hole fell to Jones and left him one up, but at the thirteenth Gardner made one of the most remarkable shots of the week. It was the kind of a shot that shows a true championship caliber and iron nerve. Jones' shot was one foot away from the hole, while Gardner was some seven feet short and almost at a standstill.

Gardner pulled himself together, measured the distance with his eye and with all the confidence in the world putted. The ball went true as an arrow. It edged by Jones' ball and dropped into the cup, tying the match. If this remarkable playing of Gardner's affected Jones, he did not show it. For he came back and won the fourteenth. While Gardner took the fifteenth. The sixteenth hole at Merion is a hard one, calling for not only skill, but excellent judgment. Jones' second shot was within five feet of the hole. He won, and with it he had Gardner two down.

Youngster Pushes Champion

In this critical situation, naturally, the former champion was getting worried. It took a fighter to stand up to heavy fire like this. When the seventeenth hole was halved in three, the pressure on Gardner must have been terrific. The situation seemed impossible. Here was a fourteen-year-old sticky kid taking the measure of

INJURIES KEEP SISLER OUT FOR REST OF YEAR
Sprained Wrist and Fractured Thumb Forces Browns' Star to Go Home

George Sisler, brilliant all-around athlete on the payroll of the St. Louis Browns, former Michigan University luminary and pal of Vic Lahn, will not be in the game for the remainder of the season. Sisler has been out of the line-up for more than two weeks and not until today did we learn the cause.

According to Vic Lahn, who has followed the work of Sisler closely all year, George was hit by a ball in the American League in hitting if it hadn't been for that bad heel and thumb. Sisler has been playing all season with a bad heel and thumb and his heel caused him so much trouble that it kept him from his toes in every game. George is resting at his home in Ohio and hopes to be in condition next season.

TEMPLE SCHOOL BOYS TO PASS UP FOOTBALL AND WILL FORM SOCCER ELEVENS INSTEAD FOR THIS FALL

Gridiron Material Lacking, So Prep and College Athletes Will Participate in English Pastime. Supervisory Committee Meeting Today

By PAUL PREP

TEMPLE COLLEGE and Temple Prep will not be represented on the gridiron this fall. This decision was reached when it was seen that the number of male students enrolled in the normal school of training was not large enough to compose an eleven.

There are only fifteen men enrolled in the normal school of training this season. Of course, there are a large number of male students in the other departments, but during the last five years the athletic teams have been composed entirely of students in the physical training classes. The men in the medical university department feel that they cannot spare the time from their scholastic work to try for the various athletic squads.

When the plans for the present season were completed previous to the closing of the school term, last spring, those in charge of the Intercollegiate League invited the Philadelphia Trades School to join. Definite action, however, was delayed until the opening of the present fall term. Trades will now have to wait until next year before becoming a member of the Intercollegiate Soccer League.

Smith Leaves West Philly
Hopes for a championship football team at West Philadelphia High School received a severe jolt yesterday. Perry Smith, the husky lineman, left school to enter Mary's State College. Coach A. L. Reigner announced that he would most likely have to resign his position as physical instructor because of the week was over. Reigner has received notice from the new National Army officials to be prepared to leave for one of the training camps on twenty-four hours' notice.

The loss of Reigner and Smith will be deeply felt. Although the first eleven had been definitely selected, Smith was sure of his position on the line, as he was the heaviest and most experienced man in the squad.

To fill up the gap Reigner has been shifted from guard to tackle, and Kline, a sub from last season, will be sent in at guard.

The first eleven lined up as follows in yesterday's practice:
L. E. Hewitt; L. T. Captain Swing; L. E. Gilmore; C. Meador; R. E. Kline; R. T. Hertzler; L. E. Monroe; G. B. Grossman; H. B. French and Krengel; F. B. Groff.

This eleven will most likely start the Penn Charter game scheduled for Friday at Green Lane.

Practice to Start Today
Part of the physical training course at Temple is to spend two mornings each week on the athletic field. Starting today, the fifteen men, under the coaching of Athletic Director Nielson, will begin their work at the new sport at Kingsessing Playground.

Several well-known athletes are enrolled at Temple this fall, including "Al" Hedelt, formerly of Northeast High School and star football and basketball player of last year's Penn freshmen; Jay Smith, formerly of South Philadelphia High; Ashton, of Camden High; Fredericks and Piager, of Atlantic City High; and Tommy Barker, of Northeast High and Parkersburg Seminary.

Games will be arranged with Girard College, George School, Northeast High and other leading soccer school teams.

War Hits Trades School
The big war "over there" has played havoc with the plans arranged by Athletic Director Charles Schlow, of the Philadelphia Trades School, Schlow had intended to have the Trades School represent the soccer field this fall, but the present international conflict has smashed his plans to smithereens.

Due to the scarcity of men throughout the industrial plants of the city, the major
