SHANNON PLAYS WELL

SHIBE PARK, Sept. 29.

SHIBE PARK, Sept. 29.
Connie Mack's juvenile outfit, strenghened by Jamieson in right field and Grover at second base, gave a splendid exhibition in the first game today and they defeated the Detroit Tigers by 8 to 4.

The home players hit the delivery of James for nine singles and a three-bagger, and took full advantage of the wildness of the giant right-hander of Jennings's staff.

The high spot of the Athletics' fielding was the work of Shannon at shortstop. This youngster handled six ground balls like a veteran and several times robbed his opponents of base hits.

Perkins also did good work in checking the ambition of the visitors to annex extra bases.

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Sept. 29.

The greatest football card in America was staged here this afternon when Glenn Warner and his world's championship eleven met West Virginia. Accompanied by a band of rooters, the Panther machine pulled into the playing area shortly after the lunch hour. Football fans from western Pennsylvania, eastern Ohio and West Virginia dotted the mountain scenery of this typical college town, Great anticipation was manifest on the part of the home team, in view of the fact that Coach Warner brought a combination for the opening contest made up of several new faces. Like all institutions of the country. Pitt suffered heavily through mili-tary activities, but the students wearing the Blue and Gold pinned their faith on such youngsters as Captain Carlson, Mc-Laren, Miller and Gougler, who remain with the team that has not tasted defeat since

Hackney Gives Fine Exhibition

LONG JIM BARNES, of the Whitemarsh | had two par fives, a seven and eight Valley Country Club, has played in played the other five holes in par three big open golf tournaments in the last three weeks. He won the Western open, was second in the Vermont and crowned his efforts with a victory in the Philadelphia open at Merion yesterday. In the Western open he broke all records for a 72-hole event, and on the first day of play he reg-istered the wonderful total of 67, which is positively uncanny in competition. The best Hackney Gives Fine Exhibition

It might be said that no one played in harder luck and got into more trouble during the afternoon than Clarence W. Hackney, the twenty-two-year-old pro of Atlantic City. And it might be said that no professional at Merion played out of pits and traps and ditches more magnificently that the same stocky Hackney. On the sixth hole both he and Barnes drove into the ditch. Hackney's bail lay well below him and it took him some time to get any kind of a stance. His iron shot was a heauty and was worthy of the round of applause it earned. Barnes's ball lay on the other side and was above him. It was too far for him to stand on one side, so he bridged the stream and in this uncomfortable aposition he got a beautiful shot out. On the short thirteenth Hackney missed a one by an eyelash, and in his first round op Thursday he all but holed out in the hinth. He has plenty of good shots in his bag, and no one played into more trouble and got out mbre masterfully than Hackney.

It was a real chaspionship over a chaminonship course. previous ecoring for seventy-two holes was made by Chick Evans with 286 in the last

National open, while Walter Hagen made the same total in the Western open in 1916. Charlie Hoffner said to me after the tournament yesterday that Barnes was at least two or three strokes better than any other professional in the country. And his scor-ing would indicate it. He won the open championship here with two split fingers and a split thumb, and when some one asked him what he would have done if his hands were in condition he modestly re-plied that there would have been no change. During the afternoon round yesterday, Barnes played what is probably the most consistent golf ever seen in this country. It lasted just eight holes. Here is his score and the par of the course for those sensational eight holes:

Holes 7 8 9 10 11 12 13 14 Barnes 3 4 3 5 4 4 3 3 4—27 Par 8 4 8 4 4 3 4—29 For these holes he was three over threes or five under fours, whichever way you prefer to take it.

The Wonderful Golf of the Cornishman During his four rounds he had a wonomething in two days that only one player and the par of the course:

On his out round he equalled par on the light two parting bleds first five holes and the last two getting birds on the sixth and seventh only.

But on his journey he raised havoc with par, scoring birds on the tenth, eleventh, twelfth, fourteenth, fifteenth and seventeenth, and equaling par on the other holes. He had ten par holes and eight birds. Curiously enough, on the four short holes, the seventh, ninth, thirteenth and seventeenth.

he had birds only on the seventh and seven-He made twenty-six holes in fours, twenty in fives, sixteen in threes, six in sixes, two in twos, and one in seven and one in eight.

His hoodoo was the long second, where he away, and he finished with a round of TL.

out mibre masterfully than Hackney.

It was a real championahip over a championship course, and the professionals wers warm in their praise of the course which met with such universal approval from the amateurs in the last championship. Only one criticism was heard and that concerned the eighth green. It will be remembered that this green was formerly one that foll away. This was changed last summer and the green was banked up in the back, enlarged considerably and a deep trapplaced in front. From where the long drive lands there is a dip in the ground to the green, and in many cases the trap, which is twenty yards from the fairway to the green, cannot be seen. But the objection of the pros is that in most cases a long bair results in a hanging lie and, with the green as small as it is, it is a hard task to hold the ball on the green. Either a wider of longer green would make the hole perfect they say. It was remarkable how many of the pros tried to just clear the trap. Norman Maxwell led the amateurs and
