ROWLAND AND MUGGSY ARE GREAT GENERALS, BUT RIVAL STARS WILL DECIDE BIG ISSUE

BASEBALL MANAGERS IMPORTANT, BUT THEIR WORK IS DONE WHEN THEIR TEAMS TROT OUT ON FIELD

Everything Depends on the Players Themselves. and They Should Receive Credit or Blame. Giants Here Today for Final Game

BASEBALL is like football in a certain respect, inasmuch as the real work is done by men on the playing field and not by the manager or the coach. This seems strange and unusual these days when we read about the clever inside stuff about to be pulled by McGraw or Rowland which will turn defeat into a glorious victory, but it can't be otherwise, according to the dope. If a ball club wins a game there always are nine reasons for the victory, and those reasons consist of the players on the winning side. The manager does his work before the game and after that he is more or less a spectator. True, he may switch his men around and change pitchers when the going is rough, but that lets him out. As soon as the men trot out on the field the manager's value to the team drops to almost zero. Let's talk it over.

It is a well-known fact that a general's work is done the night before a battle. He has laid out his plans, issued his instructions and the only remaining thing is for the men to carry out the orders. A football coach does the same thing, and the baseball manager faces similar conditions. He tells his men what to do and it is up to them to do it. The manager can't go out on the field and play every position himself. For example, suppose on the very first play, a ball is knocked to Zimmerman and Heinie boots it. Who is to blame? Surely not McGraw. Yet McGraw placed Zim at third and expected him to get everything that came his way. If an infielder makes a wild throw or an outfielder falls all over himself while chasing a fly ball, the blame will rest on the shoulders of the men who make the errors, not the boss of the club. In 1912 New York had the series won from Boston and Fred Snodgrass muffed the easiest kind of a fly ball, which gave the Red Sox the game. In the same series Harry Hooper made a sensational one-handed jumping catch which robbed Larry Doyle of a homer and again caused the defeat of the Giants. Jake Stahl, who managed the Red Sox that year, did not go around with his chest sticking out, telling every one how he won the world series. Nor did McGraw hang his head in shame because he felt directly responsible for Snodgrass's error. Both managers knew that the men themselves were responsible and let it go at that.

THERE should be no sensational inside baseball in this series. The players will use the old cut-and-dried tactics which have stood the test of time, and one side knows the system as well as the other. McGraw has built up the most powerful team the National League has known since the days of the conquering Cubs. Rowland has got together a flock of sluggers that compare favorably with the Athletics in their prime. Both managers have done their duty and may be dismissed from further consideration so far as weighing the dope is concerned.

Giants Are Here Today for Four-Game Series With the Phils

THE National League champions will be with us today for a pair of doubleheaders which will end the season. Philadelphia fans will have an opportunity to gaze upon the team which made baseball history and compare it with the White Sox, who played here two weeks ago. As the Phillies always put up a hard fight against New York, we will have an excellent chance to see what the big-town boys can do under fire. Although the games mean nothing at this stage so far as the official standing is concerned, McGraw always likes to wallop the home folks and Pat Moran delights in taking a fall out of the Giants. Two double-headers in as many days will be great stuff for the dopesters, and a large crowd will be on hand.

The Giants have been on the road since September 13 and will not return to the Polo Grounds until the third game of the world series, which is scheduled for next Tuesday. They have been traveling constantly, and perhaps this will have some effect on their play. At least, the betting gentlemen believe so, as the White Sox are the 6-to-5 favorites to win the first game on the curb in New York. At that, McGraw is lucky to get in an extra day's rest before the series begins. His team was scheduled to play here up to Thursday night, which meant that the players couldn't reach Chicago until Friday night. This worried the champions, so President Baker, of the Phils, was asked to shorten the series one day. Mr. Baker gladly consented to do this and now the club is expected to leave early Wednesday night. An effort will be made to play an exhibition game with the Cubs on Thursday, but this is unlikely. The men probably will rest a couple of days, or spend some time in the White Sox park, which is something new to the majority,

THE White Sox playing field may bother the Glants considerably on the first day and may have an important bearing on the series. The center-field wall is painted in various colors, and batsmen not accustomed to it are likely to lose the ball before it reaches the plate. A couple of days' practice, however, may overcome this handicap,

White Sox May Use but Two Pitchers in the Big Series

CLARENCE ROWLAND recently issued a statement that his pitching staff consists of two men, and if Clarence is not handing out the grand old bunk, it may mean that only a pair of pitchers will be used by the White Sox boss in his battle to place the skids under Jawn McGraw. But who is this other person? It is certain that Eddie Cicotte will hurl the first game in Chicago Saturday, but there is nothing certain about who will pitch the second. If Eddle gets by in the opener, perhaps Red Faber, another right-hander and moist ball expert, will be used on Sunday. If, on the other hand, Cicotte is trimmed, then it is safe to predict that Lefty Russell will take a chance in the second battle. Then, taking Clarence at his word, it is equally safe to say that Cicotte will work the third game in New York, and his successor on the mound for the fourth game will be the man who hurled the second game in Chicago.

This is according to the grandoldope, which is working overtime these days. But there is a swell chance for the dope to slip up, as the man to pitch the second game may be hammered all over the lot and put out of business for the fourth contest. In the case of Cicotte, he is almost sure to pitch a good game and, even If he should lose, it is safe to say that he will go back again. Incidentally, if Eddie is walloped in the first game, the Giants will have a decided edge on the series and probably will be a 2-to-1 shot to win.

But it is possible for the opening-day pitcher on both sides to come back in the third game, as there will be Sunday and Monday intervening between the first and third games. Sallee has a good chance to start for the Giants, for he looks like the best bet on an alien field. Also, the White Sox expect to have trouble with Slim's delivery, so why not give them a chance to worry? If Slim has a bad day, however, McGraw may switch to one of his right-handers in the second. Pol Perritt and Benton look good and either may have the call. It is not believed that Schupp will be used until the club gets back to the Polo Grounds, where the home crowd can root behind him.

THE White Sox wound up their season in New York yesterday and stopped off in Cleveland today to play an exhibition game with the Indians. Tomorrow they will play another exhibition contest with the same club in Chicago, and Friday will be a day of rest.

Football Not Struggling for Life

POOTBALL this year is going to be a very live proposition, in spite of the fact that Harvard, Yale and Princeton have decided to leave the game flat on its back. Minus the big hooraw made every year over the games indulged in by the historic triumvirate, with its angles resting at Princeton, New Haven and Cambridge, the old game is going right along, and it seems certain that the West is going to be the center of the thing. Despite general belief, football doesn't live and breathe in the atmosphere of Connecticut, Massachusetts and New Jersey, They have a decidedly interesting brand of the pastime out in Illinois, Wisconsin Minnesota, Michigan and other similar points of the wild and woolly. Historical interest alone sticks out in the big eastern conflicts, and only the glory that attaches to shese contests gives them the edge over the western kind of scraps on

It would be wrong to say that football as it is played in the East is superior to that played in the West, for there are two different kinds of football. In the West the idea is to develop a working unit of play, ready for any emergency. Their best teams in that section reach a high degree of efficiency under this method of tutelage. In this section the work begins early on pointing teams for me big game. At Harvard, it is for Yale, and at Yale it is for Harvard. At on it is for Yale and Harvard.

The coaches are more numerous at these big eastern universities. Graduates as a greater interest in the instruction of players. Each individual is taken by a former star at that position and taught all the tricks that can be smined into his head. As a result he becomes proficient at a certain style of y, ready to be set into the Yale, Harvard or Princeton style of attack

Fire big calleges turn out individuals who stand out as marvels. The ore schools turn out strongly working units of foosball. Consistent the two sections would bring out which of the two is better, But the coming fall ergson will see more inter

Coach Harry Snyder has selected the above line-up to represent Northeast High School when the Red and Black institution makes its debut into the local scholastic football society on Saturday afternoon. Villanova Preparatory School will be the other half of the attraction to be staged on Norheast's athletic field, Twenty-ninth and Cambria streets.

Saturday will mark the first appearance of Coach Snyder as instructor of gridiron tactics at Northeast. The tutor of the Archive youngsters is not a novice at the football game, having played for three years on the eleven of Ursinus College. After leaving Ursinus he secured a position as athletic instructor at Slippery Rock Normal School, where he touched the baseball, football and basketball teams.

Last spring he had charge of Northeast's baseball nine, and when the supervising committee on athletics of the Philadelphia High Schools passed the rule barring professional instructors he offered his services as football and baseball ceach. He will as-sist Doctor Guerne as basketball instructor. Only five men from last year's first squad were in the huge number of candidates who reported for the first football practice last month. But either this year's scrub team is very weak or the uptown high school has one of the best football teams if he heat football teams if he heat football teams if he heat football teams if one of the best football teams it has had in many moons. AMERICAN AHEAD OF OLDER LEAGUE

National Has Won but One of Seven World Series Since 1910

CONNIE MACK STARTED IT

By GRANTLAND RICE

From 1905 through 1909 the National League was undoubtedly stronger than the

Those were the days of National League greatness. In the five world series played during that epoch the National League won four and lost but one. Of the twentyseven world series games played the National League won eighteen and lost nine. In 1910 the big shift swept under way: 1910 was the year Connie Mack finally launched his powerful machine. That year started the rise of the American League and the fall of the National. Since 1910 seven world series have been Of these seven the American League has won six and lost but one. Of the thirty-seven championship games played the American League has won twenty-four and lost thirteen.

Note the shift. For the first five years the National League had a world series percentage of .800, the American League For the last seven years the National League has had a mark of .142, the American League 857.

American League on Top The American League has beyond any loubt had superior strength in the last years. It has not only won most of the world series games, but has had most of the game's stars in Cobb, Speaker, Sisler, Colline, Schalk, Chapman, etc.

But for 1917 the National League has sent forward the most powerful entry it has known for many years.

The Glants are far stronger than the winning Glants of 1911, 1912 and 1913. They are far better balanced than the Phil-lies of 1915 or the Dodgers of 1916. It is the first time in seven years that a majority of the critics have given the National League an even chance to win.

McGraw has been aiming at this series for a long time. In building and buying his present machine he had something more in sight than a National League pennant. He also had in view a victorious world series after his three successive setbacks up through 1913. It has taken him four ears to rearrange his present outlay. Yet the White Sox barrier is no light This club is the first American League machine in some years to win a pennant by a decisive margin. As strong as the Red Sox were, they won by only three games in 1915 and by only two games a year ago.
The Wite Sox have been eight or ten The Wiste Sox have been eight or ten

They have gone to battle with a strong defense and a robust attack, and have dis-

The White Sex are not likely to have the defensive steadiness shown by the Red Sex in 1915 and 1916. But neither are the classic The Ped Sex were a possible to The Red Sox were a peculiarly effective world series club.

With the Giants, an aggressive, confident, hard-charging outfit, to carry on the banner, the National League has its best chance in some time to emerge from the rut.

But even with as strong a club as u.c.
Giants now have the National League has no advantage to speak of.

And in the Chicago club the White Sox have both speed and power. They can hit, they have good pitching, and, as most of them are veterans, they are not likely to blow.

The Long Count

Taking in the full count, the two leagues have been well matched. Of the twelve vorid's series the American League has von seven to the National's five. Of the sixty-four ball games fought to a

Of the sixty-four ball games fought to a decision the American League has won thirty-three and the National thirty-one. The record couldn't run any closer without being a draw.

But the fan public remembers only the later years. It remembers only that the National League has won but one series since 1909, and 1909 in a baseball way was another era.

another era. If the Giants are beaten it will be taken pretty well for granted that the National League hasn't the stuff with which to stop its younger rival.

For the Giants look to be one of the best balanced and one of the strongest teams the older circuit has ever sent to

It would be difficult to find any better rofessionals in the country than Barnes and Loos, and as the intention was to have none but Philadelphia amateurs, no better players could have been selected than Buxton and Maxwell. Buxton, who only re-cently gave up his business in Dallas, Tex., to take up a responsible position under Herbert Hoover in the United States food administration, said he would be delighted to run up from Washington to play in the match. Barnes has played a lot in exhibition matches for the Red Cross, but he has always been ready and willing to do his bit for the Red Cross. Both Loos and Maxwell were enthusiastic over the proposed match, so that all is necessary now is a bright October Sunday.

Last year Barnes played in a dozen tour naments or more and he won nearly all of them. Playing over the Van Courtland links he registered the lowest total ever by train, trolley and motor.

Four in a Row for Giants,

Says Stallings, of Braves

George T. Stallings, manager of the Brayes, former Miracle Man, picks the Giants to win. Says George:

"I'll be surprised indeed if the Giants do not win their series Just as easily and just as speedly as we won our entanglement with the Athleties. Chicago's only hope rests on Eddie Cicotte's ability to stop Medraw's sluggers, and I'm convinced that he will go down befere the weight and dash of the New York attick, just as Alexander, Rudolph, Nehf, Vaughan, Cooper and the rest of the National League stars have given way.

"If they do beat Cleotte in the opening game of the series, and they will beat him just as surely as Rowland starts him, New York will win four straight games. They'll show the Sox the strongest and most effective offense that has been launched by any major league club this year, and don't ever ferlive offense that has been launched by any major league club this year, and don't ever believe that McGraw's own pitchers won't stand up.

"Sallee and Schupp are the greatest left-handers in the country today, and Fol Ferritt ranks with the best of the righthanders. These three are all McGraw will need against the White Sox, or would need against thew."
