Delightful Lecture and Concert Planned for Soldiers' Leisure Fund—Nancy Wynne Talks About a Number of Things

AND now we have an interesting evening promised us next month and for the benefit of the Soldiers' Leisure Fund. I think I told you of this some weeks ago, but I have a few more details at present and it sounds as if it was going to be very pleasant, to my way of thinking.

Through Captain C. P. Fletcher and Mrs. M. L. Woodruff, both of whom are members of the committee for the Soldiers' Leisure Hour Fund, this Colonial Evening, as it will be called, is to be given. And it will be held in the ballroom of the Bellevue-Stratford on Thursday evening, November 8.

The attractive features of the evening will be the lecture on Colonial homes by none other than Mr. Wallace Nutting, whose water-color pictures are so well known and liked. The lecture will be illustrated and will show his paintings of some of the famous old homes in this country.

And the Orpheus Quartet will augment the lecture by appearing in costumes appropriate to the times and singing songs of the periods described by Mr. Nutting. The quartet, you know, includes Miss Edna Harwood Baugh, Miss Elizabeth Dickson, Mr. Royal P. MacLellan and Mr. Donald Redding. These four good persons make a practice of singing together for charity affairs, and those who get up these things are mighty glad when they can entice them to give of their time and talent for their special pet project.

The ushers on the night of the lecture and concert will be soldier boys—in their uniforms, of course. This fund is being raised exclusively for the Philadelphia men and in no way conflicts with any other. The gifts are made direct to the soldiers, each regiment receiving its supplies through the chaplain.

The good people interested in this work have interested a number of others, and such names as Mrs. Charles Munn, Jr., Mrs. Howard Houston Henry, Mrs. Edward Cassatt, Mrs. John Gribbell, Mrs. George Calvert Carter, Mrs. Stanley G. Flagg, Jr., Mrs. Charles A. Potter, Mrs. Nathan Folwell, Mrs. W. W. Harper, Mrs. David Howe and Mrs. Ellis Gimbel are among the patronesses.

It seems to me it will be worth while to save that evening on the calendar, as it will surely be a delectable one. AFTER the honeymoon it used to be the thing for the bride and bridegroom to settle down and live happily ever after. In these decidedly unsettled and greatly disturbed times, however, they are much more apt to go packing off to some seemingly god-forsaken spot "somewhere in America" where the bridegroom dons a uniform and the bride resigns herself to "watchful waiting" for an hour's or a day's leave, or else goes home to her parents' until his return. Well, after all, it's not so bad for the new brides as bridegrooms as it is for those who were married before war seemed imminent and who, settled in their pretty houses and apartments, were ready to take up the threads of home life together, and who now have had to break up the little home and the wife must return to her father's house while the husband goes forth to prepare for his death struggle, for even if he comes back safe, which we all hope and pray, he is bound to meet very close with death before this awful war is over.

THE George Wharton Pepper Jr. had to give up their apartment in town and Martin has gone home to live and taken her little four-months-old son with her. Another recent bride of the Main Line who has had to break up her home in Ardmore and return to her parents is Mrs. Channing Daniel. She was Katherine Verner, your remember, a sister of Eleanor Verner, whose engagement to Herbert Casey was announced recently. Channing Daniel is with the officers' camp at Oglethorpe.

I saw Mary Alice Borie at the Sporting Carnival last week, and thought how sad that her little apartment, too, must be broken up, as Louis Borie is off at camp as well. Of course, most of the very recent brides are living in bungalows near their husbands' camps. Esther Toland, for instance, and Eleanor Cuyler Walker have a bungalow together down in Chantanooga; Margaret Biddle is going to live in Admiral, I hear, to be near Aleck at Camp Meade; Mrs. Joe Du Barry and her son are going to Washington to be near Joe, who is at Admiral, and Mrs. B. Franklin Pepper has taken a house in that city to be near Major Pepp. Gladys Earle Mather is up at Fort Niagara near Captain Mather. And so it goes, at least while the men are still in the training camps, for after they leave for France there won't be much reason to stay anywhere but near their families or at home with them. And indeed it's been even harder on those who have been married some years and have their little families to look after and bring up without a husband and father's advice. There's Mrs. Arthur Newlin and her little ones, who have gone home to be with Mrs. Newlin's mother, Mrs. Sims, while Doctor Arthur is abroad with Base Hospital No. 10; and Frances Drayton, whose husband, Dr. Bill Drayton, is another member of that staff, and various others.

May it all soon be over and may they return safe to their loved ones! CLOTHES, you will no doubt agree, are most interesting; but did you ever notice how clothes affect the wearers of them? Put a good-looking girl in a dainty tea-gown and see how sweet her manner becomes; or, if it is already sweet, how much sweeter. Put her in a handsome evening gown and watch her scintillate—perhaps it's because her dress has sequins on it. Well, now put her in a well-cut sport suit, a velvet hat, a high collar, string tie, and low-heeled shoes, and you don't have to try to "take it like a man"; she does just that thing all of her own accord. Keep her in that costume for a while and pretty soon she'll have to tell you whether she's had the better of it. I think the way blame them for wearing the clothes— heaven knows they're wonderful looking in them—but why the mannerisms? They carry their heads a few feet in advance of their shoulders, and their feet never by any chance get within speaking distance of each other, either north and south or east and west. There was one of these habitually sport-dressed girls in Biddford Pool one year when one of our best-known illustrators, by name James Montgomery Flagg, was spending the summer there. She was stunning, but you felt as if you ought never to use a feminine pronoun in connection with her. She was invited to a dinner one evening, and by chance James Montgomery Flagg was also invited. She appeared in riding clothes—everybody else in conventional dinner dress. She stood about with her feet wide apart and discussed the affairs of the universe with the rest of the men, striking a match on her riding—clothes to light her cigarette. James Montgomery, leaning with one elbow on the mantelpiece, took his other hand out of his pocket to stroke his chin suggestively.

"MARY, I'm going to shave before dinner—are you?" he remarked.

To Preach Last Sermon on Sunday Before Taking Up Work as Chaplain in Navy—Roxboroughites Returning for Winter

THE Rev. John H. S. Putnam, pastor of the Fourth Reformed Church, Roxborough, will preach his final sermon as pastor on Sunday evening, having resigned to become chaplain in the United States navy, with the rank of first lieutenant. The service will be a patriotic one, attended by a number of the sailors and marines. Mr. Putnam was thirty years old in August and has done wonderful work in building up the church in which he was ordained in May, 1915, and installed as pastor. He was graduated from Rutgers College. A number of farewell dinners have been given in his honor and a petition, signed by all the members of the congregation, has been presented to him asking him to reconsider his resignation. The call to his country's service, however, will prevent the reconsideration and Lieutenant Putnam will leave for Washington, D. C., on October 9. He will wear his uniform on Sunday evening.

Roxboroughites are returning from their various vacations and all are hoping for better car service, so that there may be conservation of time as well as of food. Miss Rae Hoocock has returned from Pittsburgh to her home on Gerard street.
