

DRAFTTEES MOVE FORWARD TODAY Third Group of Philadelphia's First Quota of 5 Per Cent Off LEAVE HOME IN 2 DETAILS

HUNDREDS AT STATION The station platforms and tracks overflowed with the hundreds of persons who said good-by.

The twenty-three details that entrained today from the Baltimore and Ohio terminal, at Twenty-fourth and Chestnut streets, were individually more handfuls, much smaller in numerical comparison with the second installment, but just as large in their share of heroic farewells from saddened homes and friends, and in filling their place in the fight against autocratic and militaristic power under the reign of Kaiserism.

The station platforms and tracks overflowed with the hundreds of persons who said good-by. The first train of recruits that left the station was a combination of the two trains that brought men from the northern section of the State, and pulled out at 10 o'clock.

On the last train, at the head end of one of the cars, at Twenty-fourth and Chestnut streets, played "Your Country Needs You" on their violin, guitar and mandolin, and before the train started a violinist from the Forty-sixth district joined them with his instrument.

The crowds lining the Chestnut and Walnut street bridges and filling the station areas had nearly all dispersed when an alien who couldn't speak English appeared at the gate. He was Paul Lohman, of 1329 Pearl street, in the Eighth district, and he was sent on the regular train leaving at 2.33.

The twenty-seven parties entraining tomorrow leave from the North Philadelphia station for the Pennsylvania Railroad.

Henry McNichol, son of state Senator James P. McNichol, who testified in the "Bloody Fifth" Ward hearing Wednesday to the effect that he had warned Mayor Smith concerning the slanders that developed, left his home at 4554 Hazel avenue, his wife and four children, at the head of the forty-ninth district train.

The thirteen men from local draft district No. 49, at Fifty-fifth and Pine streets, joined the thirteen men, headed by Willard K. McBride, from district No. 48, at Fifty-seventh and Spruce streets, in their march to the station.

The dozen men forming the party from district No. 18, at Thirty-ninth and Lancaster avenue, left about 1 o'clock with the dozen men from district 20, whose headquarters are at the same place.

The eleven draftees making up the detail from the thirty-second district, with headquarters at Sixty-third street and Lancaster avenue, met at the Baltimore and Ohio terminal shortly after 1 o'clock.

FOREIGNERS IN QUOTA Seven of the fifteen men of the contingent from the thirty-third district were Italians. They left about 1 o'clock in automobiles from their headquarters at 6047 Market street, headed by Leslie Meslin and Salvatore Muscare.

The Ninth District Board sent nineteen men to Camp Meade. They entrained at Twenty-fourth and Chestnut streets at 2 P. M.

The Eighth District Board dispatched twenty. The men left Twenty-fourth and Chestnut streets at 2 o'clock.

Herman Ecklar, a Syrian, and Anthony Godolts, a Russian, were forced to go with this detail by Edward F. Swift, chairman of the Eighth District Board. Godolts, a highly educated alien professing to be a Socialist, asserted that their bright eyes protected them from military service, but Swift had the men detailed by the police, providing two hearty meals for them, however, and they were escorted to the train.

Fifteen men, led by John Carney, went from the Seventh District Board, at Fifteenth and Vine streets, while thirteen men were sent away by the Fifth District Board, at Fourth and Race streets, headed by Leo Watkins.

Sixth District, Twelfth and Pine streets, had planned to send twenty-one men down, but were only able to send a dozen, as the district board has not yet certified enough names. The detail, including dramatic and musical critic of the Evening Ledger, led this group.

SOUTH PHILADELPHIA GPF An even hundred left the Third and Dickinson streets headquarters of the first draft district, under leadership of Samuel Greenberg. All of the South Philadelphia details left about noon for the Baltimore and Ohio station.

The Board of District No. 2 is not sending a single man today, not having received its list of certified names. District No. 3 sent thirteen men commanded by Joseph Curcione. Automobiles carried the nineteen men from the Twenty-second District, with Morris Gast at their head.

The smallest detail of all today represented District No. 27, Charles and Franch leading two other draftees, Paul Lusch and Joseph Makey led the party of twenty-three from Twenty-third and Federal streets, headquarters of the Thirty-fifth District. John L. Murphy headed the party of nineteen from Fourth street and Snyder avenue, headquarters of the Thirtieth District, and Samuel Buck commanded the detail of twenty from the Fifty-first District, that left from the same point. The Fifty-first District sent thirty selected men under charge of W. M. Montgomery, from its meeting place at Snyder avenue and Dorchester street.

The Forty-first District's contingent of sixteen men left the headquarters at Fifty-fifth street and Kingsessing avenue in time to catch the train at the Baltimore and Ohio station, having come on the trolley cars from Forty-fifth and Woodland avenues. The same means of transportation was adopted by the parties of fifty-five and forty-two from the Forty-second and Forty-sixth Districts, respectively, the former under command of Louden Kozleski and Henry Wiley.

William McCoy, the beloved elevator man in the southeast corner of City Hall for some years, left for Camp Meade with a contingent of drafted men today.

PHILADELPHIA CONSCRIPTS LEAVE FOR CAMP

Drafted men from the Twenty-second District, with headquarters at Fifteenth street and Snyder avenue, left this afternoon from the Baltimore and Ohio Station for Camp Meade.

NEW PARTY NAMED BY BLANKENBURG

"Town Meeting" Title Was Suggested by Warhorse of Reform

COMMITTEE BACKS HIM

"Town Meeting Party" is the name I would choose, Rudolph Blankenburg.

"The old warhorse of reform" has put across another body blow at civic immorality!

A week ago last night nearly every twentieth person in Philadelphia more than twenty-one years of age crowded around the Academy of Music in an effort to get within its doors and join in the expression of the city's indignation over "government by murder."

The three or four thousand persons who were fortunate enough to get within the building were thrilled most of all by one man. He dominated the meeting. Venerable, white-crowned, snowy-headed Rudolph Blankenburg thundered denunciation of the political crimes whose taint had never sullied his administration of the city's affairs.

A committee was chosen to translate the ideals expressed at that meeting into action. A new political party had emerged from that meeting, dedicated to the overthrow of the "boss" rule of the city. The men of the committee met together to give a name to this new political organization.

One name after another was suggested. None seemed to catch and preserve the spirit which had animated that great gathering of citizens which had surged around the Academy of Music—the spirit of the decent people of an entire city, assembled together to act as a welded unit.

WILL PUSH LIBERTY LOAN AT WORLD'S SERIES GAMES

Ty Cobb and Other Diamond Notables Expected to Urge Fans to "Come Across"

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5. In honor of the world's series, which begins Saturday, the second Liberty Loan campaign will be given a baseball angle, capitalizing the popularity of the great American sport to win support for the Government war financing.

Oscar Price, publicity director of the loan, today telegraphed to all Federal Reserve banks and local committees notifying them that the world's series and the Second Liberty Loan must occupy at least equal places in the hearts of the American people for the next week.

Mr. Price today telegraphed Ty Cobb and asked him to make a speech in support of the Liberty Loan during the world series. Mr. Price wants Cobb to speak from the diamond and appeal to all baseball fans in the stands and beachers to subscribe to the war loan.

CLEAN GOVERNMENT BY CLEAN MEN DEMANDED

Citizens of 43d Ward at Rally Sound Ringing Call Against Thug Rule

"A clean government by clean men" was demanded by more than 500 citizens of the Forty-third Ward at a rally held last night at 2505 Germantown avenue.

The meeting was held under the auspices of the Forty-third Ward Independent Club. Samuel J. Pennypacker presided. Men who formerly were active in the ward executive committee have volunteered to work in the various divisions of the ward to defeat the "thug" Administration.

Mr. Pennypacker was elected president; David L. Hemmerly, vice president; John Lauber, secretary; and George H. Detweiler, treasurer.

The ticket of the Town Meeting party, formed yesterday by the Independents, Democrats and Republicans as the fusion party under the standard of which the fight against the Vore-Smith city administration will be waged, will not be named until the latter part of next week, according to Thomas F. Armstrong, chairman of the party.

At a meeting of the Master Builders' Exchange last night John Wunnamaker urged that business organizations throughout the city unite for the betterment of the city government. He said:

"I have always been and am a Republican, but if it would alleviate conditions I would become a Democrat. Why should we not fight here, and surely Philadelphia is worth fighting for. During the last month this city, the third largest in the country, through its thuggery and strong-arm reign, has given courage to Germany."

But Philadelphia must not be measured by the size of the men at its helm. Traditions and accomplishments of our city are too big to be dominated by any one or a group of men."

BOLO CASE EVIDENCE SENT TO JUSSERAND

In Completed Form Shows How Adroitly Frenchman Deceived United States Banks

NEW YORK, Oct. 5. Evidence obtained in the investigation of the activities of Paul Bolo Pacha, the alleged German spy in America, was forwarded today to French Ambassador Jusserand. The evidence was obtained by Attorney General Merion F. Lewis, of New York, at the request of the French authorities. It will be used in Pacha's trial as a German spy. Pacha is now under arrest in Paris.

The completed evidence shows how adroitly Pacha, posing as a loyal Frenchman, duped the greatest of American banking houses by transferring a corruption fund of approximately $1,700,000 to France.

Included in the evidence is a statement by Adolf Pavenstedt, German subject and intimate friend of Count von Bernstorff, former German Ambassador. He said Pacha told him of a separate peace pact which Germany and France might agree on.

France would give to Germany some of her colonial possessions, he said. Pacha told him, and Germany would restore to France parts of Alsace-Lorraine, besides evacuating northern France.

Pacha first tried to get funds from American banks to influence the newspapers of France toward peace, Pavenstedt said. "As far as my investigation goes, it was purely a social relationship between Mr. Hearst and Pacha," said Attorney General Lewis today. He described Mr. Hearst's acquaintanceship with Pacha as a "closed incident."

Doom Walnut Street Eyesores

Unlucky signs, steps, booths and cellar doors now extending beyond the building line on Walnut street will disappear with the advent of the year 1918, according to an ordinance passed in Councils. The measure was introduced June 28 after a campaign of several years by the Walnut Street Business Association.

"EAT CAPE MAY GOODIES," FOOD COMMISSION ADVISES

Cheapest Fish on the Market, Costing 6 to 7 Cents a Pound—Car Shortage Affects Peaches

The Philadelphia Food Commission, through its chairman, J. Russell Smith, has issued a bulletin advising citizens to eat Cape May goodies, which, they say, are the cheapest fish on the market, their price being six to seven cents a pound.

Sweet potatoes, says the bulletin, are becoming less plentiful and peaches are rather high-priced. Mr. Smith points out that the price of peaches is due to the lack of refrigerator cars. Cantaloupe is higher, but the abundant vegetables continue cheap. Cabbage is selling at two cents a head and squash somewhat cheaper. These are wholesale prices.

The report follows:

ABUNDANT—Beets, carrots, lettuce, cabbage, squash, parsnips.

NORMAL—Oranges, apples, peaches, cucumbers, cantaloupe, eggplant, sweet potatoes, sugar corn, radishes, turnips, potatoes, spinach.

SCARCE—Peppers, tomatoes, celery, lima beans, onions, string beans, pimientos, pineapples, grapes, pears, lemons, cranberries, pumpkin.

SEARCH FOR TWO GERMAN RAIDERS

U. S. and Japanese Craft Hot on Trail of Teuton Pirate Craft

FORMER SEEDLER CREW

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.

Watchful ships of the American and Japanese Pacific patrols are hunting today for the two German raider pirates known to be cruising the Pacific seas.

The raiders are manned by ruthless Teutons, who piloted the raider Seeadler out of Germany under disguise of a Norwegian sailing ship, swept her over to the Atlantic, sinking victims as she went, and then around Cape Horn to Mopeha Island, where she stranded and pounded to pieces.

Some of the stranded Germans, after reaching Mopeha, fitted out a motor sloop on August 21; the other seized the French schooner Lutèce when she put into Mopeha, and, using the Seeadler's guns, started out afresh.

Captain Smith, of the Slade, reports to the Navy Department from Tutuila, Samoa, that he and other prisoners were dumped on a desolate island, but that he and others made their way to Tutuila, but that the others were badly in need of food. This has been seen, meantime, there is reason to believe that the two raiders have continued their operations, though whether they have bagged new victims is unascertainable.

The patrols are on careful watch, while the Navy Department has taken the added precaution of concealing all naval vessel movements and ship sailings in the Pacific for some days past.

OFFICIAL STATEMENT

The dispatch from Tutuila as announced by the Navy Department reads:

The master of the American schooner C. Slade arrived in an open boat from Mopeha Island, which they captured from the German raider Seeadler on July 18. The schooner was destroyed by burning and the entire crew were taken aboard the raider.

A Smith further states that the Seeadler captured on June 14 the American schooner A. B. Johnson and was captured by the American schooner C. Slade, which was destroyed by burning and the entire crew were taken aboard the raider.

On September 5 the French schooner Lutèce, bound out of Tahiti, Society Islands, arrived at Mopeha and was captured by the remainder of the Seeadler's crew, who immediately left on the schooner with machine guns, supplies, fifty men, and a motor launch. The schooner was white men and seventeen native prisoners from the Seeadler marooned on Mopeha Island. These men are in great need of food and water.

For weeks the Navy Department is known to have been aware that there was a German raider in the Pacific, but it was not until last night that it was deemed advisable to disclose any of the facts to the public, for military reasons. All the information possessed by the department has not been divulged, but only the facts which were not of value to the enemy. Meanwhile steps have been taken to try to round up the two raiders and to relieve the prisoners their command and abandoned if great need of food and water on a barren South Sea island two months ago.

The Seeadler was evidently being to wait for vessels of the schooner type. Naval authorities are anxious to capture or destroy the motor sloop or the French schooner, in which officers and men of the Seeadler are now traveling the South Pacific, before these raiders are able to capture some unnamed steamship which might better serve their purpose. It is difficult search, as there are hundreds of islands in the South Pacific extending westward and northward from the Society group toward Australia, the Philippines and Japan.
