

BECAUSE YOU'RE A WOMAN DON'T CLOSE YOUR POCKETBOOK TO THE LIBERTY LOAN

OPEN YOUR EYES AND HEART TO MEANING OF LIBERTY LOAN

Special Effort Is Being Made to Interest Women in Government Bonds—Lack of Realization Prevents Wholesale Investing

PERHAPS it is because we see the street cars running, because we get up in the morning and eat our breakfast just the same as we did a year ago, that we—all of us who are women—do not buy Liberty Bonds.

Because the sky does not fall through when something tremendous and almost unbelievable is taking place we cannot get it through our heads that the thing really is tremendous at all.

SURELY if we realized that you and I who go about our everyday duties as usual, are at these very moments part and parcel of days so decisive that they overshadow most of the other decisive periods in history, we would not sit back with our dollars.

THERE is patriotism in women. Those who have awakened to the size of this international period are making sacrifices to buy Liberty Bonds.

There is tenderness in women. Those who have opened their eyes and hearts to the picture of American boys going hungry because the people of America refused, when they had the opportunity through the Liberty Loan, to buy food for them, have opened their pocketbooks and bought Liberty Bonds.

Vyvettes

A bow in front and a bow in back and there you are!

A SPECIAL effort is being made in every city in the nation to reach the women. There is no red tape about investing your money in a Liberty Bond.

It doesn't cost anything to just peek in and hear of the way you can put on khaki in spirit and help America carve the way to Berlin! Try it.

TODAY'S INQUIRIES

- 1. How should the knife used in cutting butter be rinsed in order to cooperate with the national economy now in order?
2. What occupation requiring only tact and pleasing personality has lately been thrown open to firms in middle-aged women?
3. How are some of the girls in the large colleges helping the government solve the shortage of labor problem?

ANSWERS TO YESTERDAY'S INQUIRIES

- 1. A teaspoonful of glycerin added to every four pounds of marmalade about fifteen minutes before the preserves are to be taken from the stove will make them beautifully clear and transparent.
2. A steel knitting needle can be used in the kitchen to knit potatoes and vegetables, and can entirely displace the broom straw in knitting cakes.
3. An uncomfortable mattress can be made soft and easy to lie upon by covering it with the following simply made pad: Take a pair of old blankets and tack cotton batting in between them as you would in making a comforter.

Wedding Breakfast

To the Editor of Women's Page: Dear Madam—Will you kindly publish a menu for a wedding breakfast not too elaborate, and will you do so as soon as possible? (Mrs.) A. K.

You will find it easiest to have a buffet breakfast; that is, do not seat your guests, but have the table set with pink or white flowers in the center and piles of plates, forks and napkins on the sideboard and where there may be space on the table. At either end of the table have dishes of chicken salad and at either side flat dishes of lobster or oyster cutlets.

Bleach for Tan

To the Editor of Women's Page: Dear Madam—Will you kindly publish in your column a bleach for my arms, neck and face? I am a bride and my arms are still dark from the sunburn I got at a whole bottle, and my face was better before. What should a girl say when she is introduced to a gentleman? BROWN EYES.

Cold Pack Canning

To the Editor of Women's Page: Dear Madam—Can you please print the cold-pack method of canning peaches? (Mrs.) N.

Scald good, sound peaches, a few at a time, in boiling water just long enough to loosen their skins. Dip them in cold water and quickly slip off the skins. Have ready a sirup made by boiling sugar and water together till the sugar has dissolved, using one-half to three-quarters of a cupful of sugar to each cupful of water. Allow about one cupful of water to each quart jar of peaches. Put in one cracked peach pit for every quart of sirup.

To Clean Lamb's-Wool Baby Cover

To the Editor of Women's Page: Dear Madam—Kindly publish best method of cleaning lamb's-wool baby carriage cover. How do you advise washing or dry-cleaning method, and if latter how should it be done? OUT OF TOWN.

Answers to Request for Pet Dog

In answer to Mrs. N.'s request for a little pet home dog three replies have been made offering pets to Mrs. N. The letters have been forwarded to Mrs. N. and she will have the pleasure of selecting one of three beautiful dogs.

PATSY KILDARE THE OUTLAW By JUDD MORTIMER LEWIS

Exercising Authority

IT RAINED all day today. This morning when I woke at Mr. Rockruder's I hopped out of bed and examined Rowdy all over, and he was not even scratched. Yet, look what he did to the outside! Then Rowdy and I went out on to the outside upstairs porch and watched the rain come down. It rained so hard that it was too good to miss, so I hoped it would keep on till I had breakfast, and it did.

Then I went upstairs to see my burglar. The nurse said: "If you will watch here by the bed I will go and get my breakfast. Do not excite the patient and call me if he needs me." I said, "I certainly will not. That is what you are here for." So I sat by the bed and she went away. My burglar lay with his eyes shut and finally I said, "Open up," but he did not. I said, "Are you going to open up or am I going to have to punch you one?" Then he opened his eyes and I said: "You were not asleep and you know it. You are a nice one, aren't you?" He did not say anything but just turned his face to the wall, so I said, "Look at me." He did not, so I said, "Look at me this minute." So he did, and I said, "You are a hero, aren't you, coming to rob a house that has nothing in it but a little girl?"

At that he spoke for the first time. He said: "Honest, kid, I did not know anything was in the house. I was hungry." I said: "You thought the kitchen was upstairs, didn't you? Do you think I am as easy as that? Where is your mother?" He said, "I have no mother." I said, "Didn't you ever have?" For I thought maybe he didn't, for you never can tell. But he said, "I had a mother once, but she is dead." I said, "For cat's sake, that makes it worse. What do you suppose the other angels are saying to your mother now about her boy and how do you suppose she feels about you?" It never could have happened if you had been Irish. He said, "I am part Irish." I said, "How much?" He said, "My great-grandfather was Irish." That certainly is not much.

Then the nurse came and gave him a piece of glass to put in his mouth, and then she looked at it and said, "You must have been talking to him, for you have sent his fever up." I said, "For cat's sake, may I not talk to him?" She said, "Certainly not, unless I tell you that you may." I said, "Who do you think you are? I will say something to you pretty soon that will send your fever up if you go on telling me what to do. Whose burglar is this, anyway? Did I catch him or did you?" She said, "You'd better go and play now. The houseman is going to kill a chicken and have some broiled."

So Rowdy and I went downstairs and the houseman was just going out to the shed with a hatchet. The chickens were all in there to keep out the rain and he shut the hole first and then went in and picked out a fat chicken and before I knew what he was about he held it down on a block and gave one chop and its head flew off. Rowdy grabbed it and ran and the houseman threw the chicken down on the ground and it flopped so that I grabbed it and then I gave the houseman a piece of my mind.

Then it stepped kicking and was dead and I was all bloody, so he took it into the kitchen and I went running in the rain. When I came in I watched the cook take out his gizzard and other works, and it was in-teresting. Then I went out again and Rowdy and I went swimming.

When we got back we went up to see the burglar. The nurse said, "You drowned rat, you are going to catch something if you do not look out." I said, "What's it to you, and what will you bet?" She said, "I should think your mother would turn over in her grave. You are a regular little savage and you would be a lot better for a good spanking." I said, "Maybe you would like to give it to me." She said, "I certainly will if you say much." I said, "Much," and she didn't dare and the burglar smiled. I said, "What are you laughing about? The nurse has stopped. I went and found some of Allen's clothes and played lady all the rest of the afternoon.

The burglar got the broth and Rowdy and I got the chicken and some dumplings. I am certain that I understood the cook, for I had not I would not have had the dumplings. It is still raining and I hope it will rain all day tomorrow. When it got dark Rowdy and I went all over the house squeezing the light the burglar dropped, and up in the attic, too, which is cowbunny. Then we came down and knelt and folded our paws and prayed. Dear mother which got it heaven, this has been one of the best days yet. I don't think any other little girl has got a burglar all her own. I wish you would send one or two more. At that Rowdy got up and went out the porch. When he doesn't want a thing he doesn't want it and he is not polite about saying so, either.

"Soothing Words," the next Patsy Kildare adventure, appears in tomorrow's Evening Ledger.

IN THE MOMENT'S MODES Separate Coat of Bolivia Cloth Trimmed With Nutria

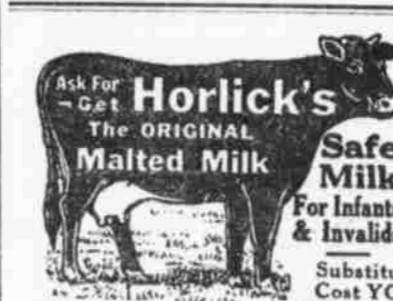

By this time it must be quite patent to every woman that the reason for the popularity of the long separate coat is to be found in the quality of smartness which is wedded to their practicability. To call them cover-all coats, as we once did, is to give them a name which fails to suggest their attractiveness. And yet they are quite the most practical of coats; and because they are, many women are wearing them. They are suitable for cold-weather shopping; they can be pressed into service as evening wraps when the occasion is of a semiformal nature; they are readily adaptable to the purposes of traveling wraps and they are equally suitable for motoring. Today's illustration presents one of these coats developed from Bolivia cloth, with cuffs and cape collar of nutria fur. The coat skirt is slightly gathered over the hips and the belt is doubly buckled.

Tomorrow's War Menu

- BREAKFAST: Scramble, Corn Muffins, Coffee. LUNCHEON: Creamed Celery on Toast, Apple Cake, Cocoa. DINNER: Hamburg Steak, Casserole of Potatoes and Cheese, Romaine Salad, Snow Pudding.

CASSEROLE OF POTATOES AND CHEESE

Put three cupfuls of mashed potatoes in a saucepan and add to them the beaten yolks of two eggs, stirring slowly as you add. When the mixture has grown stiff and steaming hot put it into a casserole dish that has been greased. Mold it firmly against the sides and leave a hole in the middle about the size of a cup. Spread the surface of the potato with the white of one of the eggs and set in the oven until glazed over. Make a sauce of six tablespoonfuls of cheese, a cupful of milk, the yolk of an egg, a pinch of salt and a little paprika. Heat the cheese and milk and when hot add the egg and seasoning. Let cook until thick. Take the casserole dish from the oven and fill in the hollow with the cheese sauce. Dust the top with cracker crumbs and return to the oven to brown. Serve in casserole.

Ignorance Is Dangerous

PARTIAL knowledge is dangerous, and ignorance is still more dangerous; or, rather, partial knowledge is more dangerous than a more complete understanding of facts. Children, young people, will not grow up in innocent ignorance. If, in obedience to custom, they are not encouraged to inquire of their parents about the mysteries of life, they will seek to satisfy their curiosity by appealing to older or better-informed companions. They will eagerly read any book which promises any hint on the mysterious subject and will embrace every opportunity, proper or improper—most likely to be the latter—of obtaining the coveted information. Knowledge obtained in this uncertain and irregular way must of necessity be very unreliable. Many times—generally, in fact—it is of a most corruptive character, and the clandestine manner in which it is obtained is itself corrupting and demoralizing. A child ought to be taught to expect all such information from his parents, and he ought not to be disappointed. If human beings received much of their knowledge through instinct, as animals do, they might better be left to learn sexual truths for themselves, but man gets his knowledge largely by instruction. Young people will get their first knowledge of sexual matters mostly by instruction from some source. How much better, then, to let them obtain this knowledge from the most natural and most reliable source—their parents. It is impossible to designate a certain age at which all children should receive information on sexual subjects. Children differ. A safe rule is that a certain amount of knowledge should be imparted as soon as curiosity is manifested in this direction.

Bunions and Their Cure

I have had a bunion on my left foot. Can I do to cure the bunion? When the joint has become enlarged, you cannot get a normal-shaped foot again, so you can wear corsets or shoes, so that the enlargement does not increase and so that the feet will not become more misshapen as they already are.
