

ORIGINAL GUNMAN
MAKES BLOODY '5TH'

Only Genuine and Somewhat Different Ward Defender Banished From Post
KILLED UP IN GUNNYSACK
Things Different Now, Oldest Inhabitant Moans—Not Like Days of Washington Grays

Original gunman, tender and true, what the Fifth Ward do without you? The old place don't seem the same no more, somehow. The dear old wind whistles through the Point Breeze gables and the trees of the dear old trees are mourning for the touch of a vanished hand. The blue air lingers on the corner of the street, and the old streets are turning the corner of Seventh and Walnut streets—squalls in a paroxysm of movement as it skids over the uneven cracks.

It don't seem like old times in the Fifth Ward no more, no ways, nohow. There's not the skids under the 'Only Genuine and Somewhat Different' original and the place where he used to park his fat is as empty as the space that the dentist has just pulled a tooth out of.

OLDEST INHABITANT SAD
With a voice choked with sobs and a face that was white as a sheet, the oldest inhabitant of the Fifth Ward, 'Pit' now sits in front of his deli, looking out at the happy, happy crowd that is passing by. He is the only original and somewhat different gunman who was first seen in the happy asphodel meadows between the Delaware River and the Seventh Street bridge. He was a tall, rufous-mustached man, with a head that was as big as a watermelon. Nine feet high he was and weighed a matter of three tons in his walking boots.

IS WASHINGTON GRAY UNIFORM
The first gunman was dressed in the uniform of the Washington Grays' artillery. It was a long-tailed, tightly fitting uniform and the tall shako worn by soldiers in the Mexican War. It was a uniform that was worn by the Washington Grays when they were first organized. They didn't get into the Mexican War, but when the Civil War broke out they were the first to leave for Washington. They were the first to be mobilized and sent to a spot that has since become notable for a far different reason—the Seventh Street just south of Walnut, on the west side of Washington Square.

WILAINY BEHIND GUNMAN'S BACK
The only original gunman, the bronze statue erected by the Washington Grays in honor of brave men who had died so that the people might not suffer from the war, was there standing silent on his pedestal in the center of the square, with his back turned to them. Nor was any single living resident of Philadelphia then being taken to block their progress.

It had been only two weeks since Michael Sullivan, who, according to his own testimony, brought the "murder squad" from New York, had described before Judge Lewis the manner in which he piloted his dog to the square.

OSTEOPATHS WILL OPEN
NEW HOSPITAL TONIGHT

Housewarming to Inaugurate Service in Fully Equipped Building on Spring Garden Street
Philadelphia osteopaths will tonight take possession of a new hospital building, which will be used by them temporarily, pending the erection of their new hospital on Nineteenth street below Spring Garden. The new temporary building is at 1725 Spring Garden street, where they have leased the former Radium Hospital, which has been lying idle for the last two years.

It is expected that the new building, for which contracts have been let, will be finished by next July, at which time the building just occupied will be profited to the Government. In the meantime the hospital will gladly receive a few cases to demonstrate the beneficial effects of the treatment.

BRUMBAUGH SETS NOVEMBER 1-2
FOR WOMEN'S WAR REGISTRATION

WHEREAS, Under the unusual economic conditions arising from the withdrawal from productive industry of more than a hundred thousand men of Pennsylvania to enter the national service in this war-time, thus menacing the production of material good to our people and to our country at a time when our output should be greatly increased; and

Whereas, it is imperative that Pennsylvania, as in the past, shall in this crisis lead the rest in the quantity and quality of service and support given the National Government; and

Whereas, This can be done only by utilizing the woman power of the Commonwealth, and the National Government has requested that accurate information be secured at once of the capability of women to serve in this emergency either in their own homes or in the industries of the Commonwealth, which information requires that in every community there be made and kept classified lists of all women willing to serve in trained or in untrained service in the country; and

Whereas, This record of service is now being undertaken by the Department of Registration of the Pennsylvania division, woman's committee of the Council of Public Safety.

Now, therefore, I, Martin Grove Brumbaugh, Governor of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, do hereby set apart and designate November 1 and 2 of this year to be days of registration for the women of Pennsylvania, upon which days they shall repair to the places locally designated for such purposes and register for such service as their abilities and the great significance of the movement may suggest. I urge all women, as a patriotic obligation, to comply with this important suggestion and give Pennsylvania, through her women, another commanding cause for gratitude that her people are willing and anxious to serve.
