CHICK EVANS HAS EARNED $46,300 FOR WAR RELIEF, NOT INCLUDING RETURNS FROM WHITEMARSH MATCH

Four-Ball Match Between Amateurs and Professionals Will Go Down in Golf History as a Most Sensational Contest

THICK EVANS, the national open and amateur golf champion of this country and the only American to win the two titles in the same year, remarked on Monday at luncheon at the Whitemarsh Valley Country Club that the only other serson in the world who had ever won the two titles in the same year in any other country won them in the year he (Evans) was born. A glance at the records shows that John Ball, the man referred to won them in 1890. Evans, incidentally, has played in fifty-one exhibition matches for the Red Cross, Soldiers' Tobacco Pund and other allied charities and, with the exception of the Saturday match in Boston and the Monday match at Whitemarsh, the proceeds were $46,300. What other athlete has done as much?

In many ways the match of Evans and Maxwell against Barnes and Loos was even more exciting than the one that was played between Barnes and Buxton and Loes and Maxwell. And we may be pardoned for remarking that both matches were the suggestion of the Evening Lepone and were played through the courtesy of the Whitemarsh Valley Country Club and the players who partleipated. In the first place, the open and amateur champion and the North and South champion were paired against the western and Philadelphia open champlon and the Shawnes open champion, and it is to be questioned if any match ever played in this country had as fine golfers as these four. It was virtually the first match in which two amateurs were paired against two professionals. At first thought it would seem that the advantage was distinctly with the professionals, as one of them is the home professional and the other has played the course within two strokes of the professional record. On the other hand, Evans had never seen the course until Monday morning, and while Maxwell is an excellent player, it was not thought that he could hold his own against Evans, Barnes nd Loos. It may be interesting to recall what the Evening Labour said last Thursday and on Monday morning before the match had started;

66 AT FIRST it was thought that the better match would be between Barnes and Maxwell as opposed to Evans and Loos, but after all it will be more interesting to see what the two amateurs can do against the two professionals. It will not be a one-sided match, at all events; and there are a number of golfers who think the amateurs can take the measure of Barnes and Loos. * * * It will be interesting, as the two amateurs will play against the two professionals, and while this may seem like a one-sided match, the chances are that it will be one of the closest matches ever staged in this country."

Barnes and Evans Have Driving Honors

NATORALLY, there is a great deal of curiosity about the driving. It might be said that at no time was the farthest ball more than thirty-five yards ahead of the shortest, and there were times when a blanket would have covered all four, At other times they were so close together that it was a question which one was the furthest. In many cases where the short ball played first only a few yards separated it from the last man to shoot. In the morning Barnes, possibly the ngest of the professional drivers, had the best of the argument from the tee Taking the fourteen two and three shotters, he played his second shot last eight times, Evans and Loos three times each and Maxwell not at all. Taking the men who played third, having the next best drive. Evans led with six, Barnes had four, Loos had three and Maxwell had one. Of those who played second, or who had the third longest ball, Evans played only once, Barnes twice, Loos three times and Maxwell eight times. The players who had the shortest ball were Maxwell and Loos with five each, Evans four and Barnes not once.

In the afternoon Evans had a distinct advantage, having the longest ball seven times, Barnes four times, Loos twice and Maxwell once. Loos had the second longest ball five times, Barnes four times, Evans three times and Maxwell once, Maxwell played second five times, Loos four times, Evans three times and Barnes twice. Maxwell had the shortest ball six times, Barnes four times, Loos three times and Evans once.

Barnes played last all day for the twenty-eight long holes twelve times, Evans ten times, Loos five times and Maxwell once. Evans played third nine times, Barnes and Loos eight times each and Maxwell three times. Evans and Barnes played second four times each, Loos seven times and Maxwell thirteen times. Barnes played first four times, Evans five times, Loos eight times and Maxwell

When it came to approaching. Evans was on the eight short holes five times from the tee, Barnes four times and Loos and Maxwell each twice. Evans was on the green in his second shot twenty times, Loos twenty, Barnes sixteen and Maxwell sixteen. On the third shots Maxwell was on in three on seventeen greens, Loose twelve, Barnes eleven and Evans nine. Barnes was on the green on his fourth shot five times and Evans, Loos and Maxwell three times each. Evans and Loos were the only ones who needed five shots to get on the green, and this only once with each.

THERE are a lot of golfers who still labor under the old delusion that Evans is a poor putter. Years ago this was said about him, but he demonstrated that there was nothing to it when he won the national amateur at Merion. He has twice played in the national open. The first time he just escaped tying for first honors by a single stroke. When he won the open title last year he made the lowest score ever registered in that event. So why keep up this nonsense about his poor putting?

Evans Proves He Is Not a Poor Putter

THE figures at Whitemarsh show that he is not a poor putter. A careful account was taken of the number of putts, and except in the cases where Loos and Barnes holed out from off the lot, no putt was taken account of until the player was actually on the green. Evans had one putt on four greens in the morning and on seven in the afternoon; twelve times in the morning he took two putts and twelve in the afternoon, and three times he had three putts, twice in the morning and once in the afternoon. Maxwell led in the one putts, having three in the morning and eight in the afternoon. He had two putts seventeen times in the morning and ten times in the afternoon. Barnes had one putt in the morning on three greens and the same number in the afternoon. He took two putts in the morning on fifteen greens and seventeen in the afternoon. Loos had a single putt in the morning on seven holes and two in the afternoon. He had two putts in the morning on nine holes and fifteen in the afternoon. He had three putts on two holes in the morning and three in the afternoon. But in the case of many of these players it must be remembered that in many cases the approach shots were so near to the green that it was possible for the player to lay the approach dead for a single putt. But to offset this, some of the players laid their approach shots dead to the pin from traps, and Maxwell excelled in this.

Evans was in the rough ten times either on his drive or approach, Barnes and Loos six times each and Maxwell five times. Evans was the only man in the creek in the morning; he shot his drive to the short fourth into the Wissahickon Evans, Barnes and Maxwell sent one ball apiece out of bounds and Loos not at all. Loos and Barnes were in traps three times, Maxwell twice and Evans once. On one of these shots, on the eighth hole, Loos lost a penalty stroke when his ball lay in casual water in the hazard.

BARNES and Loos were the only players who had an eagle-two strokes under par-Loos having a three on the par five third hole and Barnes a three on the par five seventeenth. Evans had nineteen holes in par and nine birds. Barnes had twenty par holes and three birds. Loos had sixteen par holes and two birds. Maxwell had fifteen par holes and three birds. Of the thirty-eight holes, Evans had pars or birds on twenty-eight, Barnes twenty-four, Loos nineteen and Maxwell eighteen.

Amateurs Overcome Tremendous Handicap

THE professionals got a tremendous lead on the amateurs, for of the first eight holes they won five outright, and the amateurs did not win a hole until Chick dropped the ball into the ninth cup for a bird two. And after the amateurs had reduced the lead to two the professionals, by the most brilliant play imaginable, had more than made up the difference and at the end of the first eighteen holes were six up. But in the afternoon the amateurs won five out of the first eight, and when the first nine holes of the afternoon round were over the professionals were only two up. But it was not until the thirty-sixth hole, when Maxwell shot his long putt into the cup for a win, that the four players were on even terms, And it was not until Chick wen the thirty-eighth hole with a bird that the amacurs were up, and for the first time of the day.

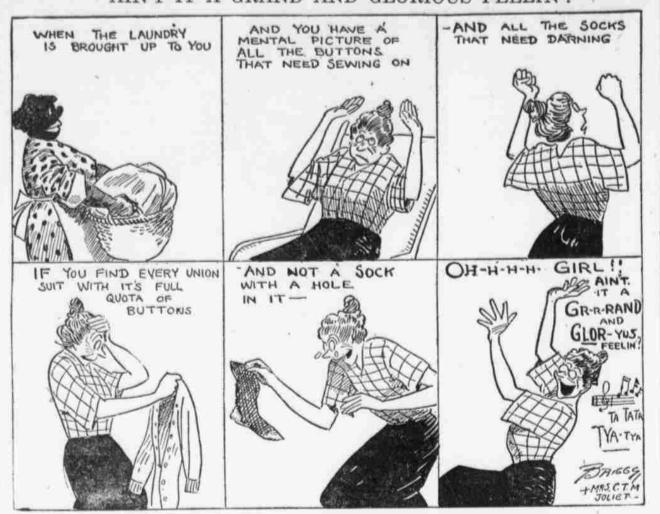

There were several brilliant spots in the morning round. In the first nine hojes Loos, with an eagle, par and bird, won three holes in a row, a feat which be alone accomplished in the forty-two-hole match. Another was in the last nine, when Barnes holed out four holes in a row with threes and won all four with two birds, a par and an eagle.

In the afternoon Evans won three out of four holes in birds, while Maxwell that another on the next hole, and then Barnes stopped this rally with a bird on the ninth. The amateurs won the third, fifth, sixth, seventh and eighth Then Chick enptured the thirteenth, and after that the holes were halved It the last hole of the afternoon round.

THE EVENING LEDGER takes this opportunity of extending its thanks on the Whitemarsh Valley Country Club for its kindness in turning the course for the match, to the four players for their splendid sportsis in sacisficing their own pleasure and convenience in playing, to yans for his kindness in coming to Philadelphia, to Thomas H. e hard work in making the preliminary arrangements and in they spawed to calledting $400 for the McAndrew's match with Tillman was an interesting bout. They could have gone along boxing at almost an even gait for many rounds. First one romped off into the lead and then the other went abead.
