

SUFFRAGE PICKET HOME FROM JAIL

Miss Winsor, of Rosemont, Declares Ocoquan Prison Conditions Frightful

OTHER CITY NEWS BRIEFS

Fourteen-Year-Old Boy Youngest Student Ever at University of Pennsylvania

Miss Mary Winsor, of Rosemont, suffragist, who has been released from jail in Washington after serving a sixty-day sentence for picketing the White House, arrived at her home near Philadelphia today.

Youngest Student to Enter Penn Truman Diller Wade, Jr., of Pottstown, son of T. D. Wade, District Attorney of Chester County, according to all available reports, is the youngest student who ever attended the University of Pennsylvania.

61 Stars in Church Service Flag The Calvin Presbyterian Church, Sixtieth and Master streets, has sixty-one members of its congregation in the war service of the Government.

Plan Comfort of Men in Camp Five hundred invitations have been issued to representative men in this city to attend a conference tonight at the Bellevue-Stratford to arrange for entertainment and comforts for the Philadelphians in the various camps and cantonments.

Speed King Evangelist Speaks "Gasoline Gus" Titchnell, known as the "speed king" evangelist and the converted chauffeur, spoke last night at the seventy-fifth anniversary of the Presbyterian Avenue Baptist Church, Broad street and Passunk avenue.

Killed While Telling Son Good-bye While saying good-bye to her only son, who was leaving for Camp Meade, Mrs. Mary Franks, a widow, 1211 James street, was struck by an express train at the Bridge street station yesterday. She died later in the Frankford Hospital.

Accused Man Hangs Himself in Cell Arrested for attacking his wife with a knife, Thomas Hopkins, forty-two years old, of 215 North Franklin street, committed suicide by hanging himself in his cell at the Tenth and Buttonwood streets police station, according to the police.

"STAR SPANGLED BANNER" GOOD ENOUGH FOR CARUSO

Declares Dr. Karl Muck Very Foolish Person to Refuse to Play It

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—The "Star Spangled Banner" is artistic enough for Enrico Caruso, who is back on Broadway after an opera tour in South America.

When Caruso arrived his first demand was for news from the Italian front.

Qualify for Recreation Teachers Five eligible lists, containing the names of fourteen applicants who have qualified for the positions of principals and class leaders in the recreation centers under the supervision of the Board of Recreation, were made public today by the Civil Service Commission.

Licensed at Elkton to Wed

ELKTON, Md., Nov. 5.—Couple's procuring marriage licenses here today included George D. Spottedwood and Bertha Z. Leves, Alfred Dahl and Adelaide Andrews, Charles W. Fay and Emily C. Strouss, Erwin Wagner and Gertrude Salmons, all of Philadelphia; Aubrey Forsythe and Ella Brown, Capron; North Wales, Lynn B. Dannon and Alfreda Gallaher, Wilmington; Howard Denney and Sarah Upshur, Landenberg; Robert Hilton and Martha Mercer, Buck Run, Pa.; Howard P. Rose and Mary A. Stirlith, Wilmington; Forest I. Reiss and Amanda Gibson, Chester; John Ratten and Eddie Lashrocher, Gloucester, N. J.; Gilbert Douglas and Elizabeth Dudley, New York; Raymond Stewart, Atlantic City, and William G. Pierson and Amelia M. Albright, Pottsville, Pa.

TODAY'S MARRIAGE LICENSES

Alfred I. Tenney, 128 Diamond st., and Catherine I. Cole, 1227 Marion st.; Giuseppe Palaia, 1121 1/2 York st., and Angelina Chisari, 1011 S. Rose st.; Joseph H. Baker, 502 S. Rose st., and Ruth E. Jeannette, 4825 Geeser st.; George W. Roush, 1479 E. 1st st., and Elizabeth Meyer, 2 Rondan Camp Dix, N. J., and Alice Sweet, P. Carl, Bridgeton, N. J., and Marion E. Chew, 1029 N. Broad st.; Stanley Whitaker, Frankford ave., and Dieston and Kathryn Rapp, 7200 st. and Torrington st.; Thomas H. Hill, 2224 Mantion st., and Alice M. Hays, 2220 Mantion st.; Jerome J. Jones, Bronx, N. Y., and Esther J. Ralph Miner, 2104 Rodman st., and Mannie Frank E. Hoxley, Roslyn, Pa., and Mary E. Williams Kindrick, Carlisle, Pa., and Frances E. Charles A. Jones, 1328 Spring Garden st., and Sara E. L. Hoffman, Pottstown, Pa., and John S. Pummer, 2029 N. Colorado st., and Oscar McCarroll, 221 E. Meyer st., and Sarah H. Gardner, 421 E. Meyer st., and Sarah Johnson Davis, Amber, Pa., and Elsie Brown, Alexander P. Brown, Chestnut Hill, and Mary B. B. Daniel, Chestnut Hill; John Little, 4700 S. 1st st., and Helen Evans E. Moeckel, 2021 Green st., and Helene E. Jones, Atlantic City, N. J.; John E. Kerner, 1228 Eber st., and Viola Fuller, 1228 Tucker st.; John M. Newton, 2711 N. Arizona st., and Frank Clayton, 1024 Fernon st., and Lavinia Dale, 1204 S. 17th st.; Margaret C. Grier, 1321 Pennock st., and Margaret Frederick T. Jones, Jr., Wayne, Pa., and Mattie Benjamin Rosenber, Frenon, N. J., and Edie George H. Kirk, Haron st.; George H. Kunk, 4212 Woodlawn st., and Ida Louise Kunk, 4212 Woodlawn st.; John Donald, 231 S. 2nd st., and Felicia Menna, 231 S. 2nd st.; Joseph L. Luchman, 4815 N. 50th st., and Joseph H. Weriman, 4815 N. 50th st.; Joseph A. Kunk, 1204 S. 17th st., and Josephine Kunk, 1204 S. 17th st.; Joseph A. Kunk, 1204 S. 17th st., and Josephine Kunk, 1204 S. 17th st.; Joseph A. Kunk, 1204 S. 17th st., and Josephine Kunk, 1204 S. 17th st.

FRANK BASTA Proprietor of the Leoncavallo restaurant, 256 South Twelfth street, and chef of national repute, who died on Saturday night.

FRANK BASTA DEAD; CELEBRATED AS CHEF

Proprietor of Leoncavallo Restaurant, Patronized by Noted Musicians and Artists

Frank Basta, one of the most widely known Italian chefs in the country, whose dishes have delighted the palates of famous men in the world of arts and letters, is dead.

Death occurred on Saturday night at his home, 1214 Spruce street. With him in his last moments were members of his family and several friends, who had been summoned when it was apparent that the end was near.

Mr. Basta, who was fifty-seven years old, was proprietor of the Leoncavallo restaurant, 256 South Twelfth street. His place was the favorite haunt of renowned singers, musicians, prominent artists, jurists and others who helped make a general good fellowship. Among others for whom Mr. Basta prepared dishes were Caruso, the noted tenor; Titta Ruflo and Bonci. The music of the masters from the golden throats of these noted artists frequently echoed through the dining halls. On one occasion when Bonci was the guest of honor he embraced the chef, who was also the most genial boniface, and paid tribute to his culinary art. And to further attest to this the enthusiastic Bonci gave him his picture on the spot on which he wrote: "To my esteemed friend, Frank Basta, artist gastronoma."

Leoncavallo, author of "I Pagliacci," after whom the restaurant was named, was among other noted composers entertained there.

Mr. Basta came to the United States twenty-two years ago after several years' experience in leading hostilities in Italy. He established several Italian restaurants in this city and their fame extended to various parts of the country.

Mr. Basta's funeral will take place on Wednesday from his late home. Solemn requiem mass will be celebrated at St. Rita's Church, Broad and Ellsworth streets, court today that the affair at no time assumed the proportions of a real quarrel.

By way of emphasizing a telling point in her argument, Mary fired five shots from a revolver through the ceiling. Afterward she explained that her purpose in driving home her point in this manner was to frighten Edward, and Edward, whose brunette complexion had become ashy in the meantime, admitted that she had succeeded eminently well in that purpose. Neighbors heard the shots and Mary was pinched.

The court was of the opinion that the five shots were worth $1 each, which, with the costs added, brought Mary's total assessment up to $7.50. Edward showed that he was a regular fellow and bore no hard feelings as a result of the argument, for he dug down and produced the $7.50 with which to pay the fine. He interposed no objections, however, when the police announced that the revolver with which Mary had made such a strong point in her argument would be confiscated.

Two Hurt, Two Escape in Auto Crash NORRISTOWN, Pa., Nov. 5.—Mrs. Albert Raubhood, of Norristown, was seriously injured and George Guseman, of Lansdale, was slightly injured in a collision here between a heading Transit trolley car and an automobile driven by Albert Raubhood, a well-known local football star. Raubhood and a baby escaped injury. The auto was reduced to junk.

MARY PUNCTUATES POINTS WITH 5 SHOTS; COSTS $7.50

Hubby Is So Much Convinced That He Pays the Freight in Court

Mary Boyd, a negro, twenty-three years old, of 2942 Warren street, had an "argument" last night with Friend Husband, whose name is Edward, forty-three years old. Both Mary and Edward insisted in court today that the affair at no time assumed the proportions of a real quarrel.

By way of emphasizing a telling point in her argument, Mary fired five shots from a revolver through the ceiling. Afterward she explained that her purpose in driving home her point in this manner was to frighten Edward, and Edward, whose brunette complexion had become ashy in the meantime, admitted that she had succeeded eminently well in that purpose. Neighbors heard the shots and Mary was pinched.

The court was of the opinion that the five shots were worth $1 each, which, with the costs added, brought Mary's total assessment up to $7.50. Edward showed that he was a regular fellow and bore no hard feelings as a result of the argument, for he dug down and produced the $7.50 with which to pay the fine. He interposed no objections, however, when the police announced that the revolver with which Mary had made such a strong point in her argument would be confiscated.

The court was of the opinion that the five shots were worth $1 each, which, with the costs added, brought Mary's total assessment up to $7.50. Edward showed that he was a regular fellow and bore no hard feelings as a result of the argument, for he dug down and produced the $7.50 with which to pay the fine. He interposed no objections, however, when the police announced that the revolver with which Mary had made such a strong point in her argument would be confiscated.

The court was of the opinion that the five shots were worth $1 each, which, with the costs added, brought Mary's total assessment up to $7.50. Edward showed that he was a regular fellow and bore no hard feelings as a result of the argument, for he dug down and produced the $7.50 with which to pay the fine. He interposed no objections, however, when the police announced that the revolver with which Mary had made such a strong point in her argument would be confiscated.

The court was of the opinion that the five shots were worth $1 each, which, with the costs added, brought Mary's total assessment up to $7.50. Edward showed that he was a regular fellow and bore no hard feelings as a result of the argument, for he dug down and produced the $7.50 with which to pay the fine. He interposed no objections, however, when the police announced that the revolver with which Mary had made such a strong point in her argument would be confiscated.

The court was of the opinion that the five shots were worth $1 each, which, with the costs added, brought Mary's total assessment up to $7.50. Edward showed that he was a regular fellow and bore no hard feelings as a result of the argument, for he dug down and produced the $7.50 with which to pay the fine. He interposed no objections, however, when the police announced that the revolver with which Mary had made such a strong point in her argument would be confiscated.

The court was of the opinion that the five shots were worth $1 each, which, with the costs added, brought Mary's total assessment up to $7.50. Edward showed that he was a regular fellow and bore no hard feelings as a result of the argument, for he dug down and produced the $7.50 with which to pay the fine. He interposed no objections, however, when the police announced that the revolver with which Mary had made such a strong point in her argument would be confiscated.

The court was of the opinion that the five shots were worth $1 each, which, with the costs added, brought Mary's total assessment up to $7.50. Edward showed that he was a regular fellow and bore no hard feelings as a result of the argument, for he dug down and produced the $7.50 with which to pay the fine. He interposed no objections, however, when the police announced that the revolver with which Mary had made such a strong point in her argument would be confiscated.

The court was of the opinion that the five shots were worth $1 each, which, with the costs added, brought Mary's total assessment up to $7.50. Edward showed that he was a regular fellow and bore no hard feelings as a result of the argument, for he dug down and produced the $7.50 with which to pay the fine. He interposed no objections, however, when the police announced that the revolver with which Mary had made such a strong point in her argument would be confiscated.

The court was of the opinion that the five shots were worth $1 each, which, with the costs added, brought Mary's total assessment up to $7.50. Edward showed that he was a regular fellow and bore no hard feelings as a result of the argument, for he dug down and produced the $7.50 with which to pay the fine. He interposed no objections, however, when the police announced that the revolver with which Mary had made such a strong point in her argument would be confiscated.

The court was of the opinion that the five shots were worth $1 each, which, with the costs added, brought Mary's total assessment up to $7.50. Edward showed that he was a regular fellow and bore no hard feelings as a result of the argument, for he dug down and produced the $7.50 with which to pay the fine. He interposed no objections, however, when the police announced that the revolver with which Mary had made such a strong point in her argument would be confiscated.

The court was of the opinion that the five shots were worth $1 each, which, with the costs added, brought Mary's total assessment up to $7.50. Edward showed that he was a regular fellow and bore no hard feelings as a result of the argument, for he dug down and produced the $7.50 with which to pay the fine. He interposed no objections, however, when the police announced that the revolver with which Mary had made such a strong point in her argument would be confiscated.

The court was of the opinion that the five shots were worth $1 each, which, with the costs added, brought Mary's total assessment up to $7.50. Edward showed that he was a regular fellow and bore no hard feelings as a result of the argument, for he dug down and produced the $7.50 with which to pay the fine. He interposed no objections, however, when the police announced that the revolver with which Mary had made such a strong point in her argument would be confiscated.

The court was of the opinion that the five shots were worth $1 each, which, with the costs added, brought Mary's total assessment up to $7.50. Edward showed that he was a regular fellow and bore no hard feelings as a result of the argument, for he dug down and produced the $7.50 with which to pay the fine. He interposed no objections, however, when the police announced that the revolver with which Mary had made such a strong point in her argument would be confiscated.

The court was of the opinion that the five shots were worth $1 each, which, with the costs added, brought Mary's total assessment up to $7.50. Edward showed that he was a regular fellow and bore no hard feelings as a result of the argument, for he dug down and produced the $7.50 with which to pay the fine. He interposed no objections, however, when the police announced that the revolver with which Mary had made such a strong point in her argument would be confiscated.

The court was of the opinion that the five shots were worth $1 each, which, with the costs added, brought Mary's total assessment up to $7.50. Edward showed that he was a regular fellow and bore no hard feelings as a result of the argument, for he dug down and produced the $7.50 with which to pay the fine. He interposed no objections, however, when the police announced that the revolver with which Mary had made such a strong point in her argument would be confiscated.

The court was of the opinion that the five shots were worth $1 each, which, with the costs added, brought Mary's total assessment up to $7.50. Edward showed that he was a regular fellow and bore no hard feelings as a result of the argument, for he dug down and produced the $7.50 with which to pay the fine. He interposed no objections, however, when the police announced that the revolver with which Mary had made such a strong point in her argument would be confiscated.

The court was of the opinion that the five shots were worth $1 each, which, with the costs added, brought Mary's total assessment up to $7.50. Edward showed that he was a regular fellow and bore no hard feelings as a result of the argument, for he dug down and produced the $7.50 with which to pay the fine. He interposed no objections, however, when the police announced that the revolver with which Mary had made such a strong point in her argument would be confiscated.

The court was of the opinion that the five shots were worth $1 each, which, with the costs added, brought Mary's total assessment up to $7.50. Edward showed that he was a regular fellow and bore no hard feelings as a result of the argument, for he dug down and produced the $7.50 with which to pay the fine. He interposed no objections, however, when the police announced that the revolver with which Mary had made such a strong point in her argument would be confiscated.

The court was of the opinion that the five shots were worth $1 each, which, with the costs added, brought Mary's total assessment up to $7.50. Edward showed that he was a regular fellow and bore no hard feelings as a result of the argument, for he dug down and produced the $7.50 with which to pay the fine. He interposed no objections, however, when the police announced that the revolver with which Mary had made such a strong point in her argument would be confiscated.

The court was of the opinion that the five shots were worth $1 each, which, with the costs added, brought Mary's total assessment up to $7.50. Edward showed that he was a regular fellow and bore no hard feelings as a result of the argument, for he dug down and produced the $7.50 with which to pay the fine. He interposed no objections, however, when the police announced that the revolver with which Mary had made such a strong point in her argument would be confiscated.

The court was of the opinion that the five shots were worth $1 each, which, with the costs added, brought Mary's total assessment up to $7.50. Edward showed that he was a regular fellow and bore no hard feelings as a result of the argument, for he dug down and produced the $7.50 with which to pay the fine. He interposed no objections, however, when the police announced that the revolver with which Mary had made such a strong point in her argument would be confiscated.

The court was of the opinion that the five shots were worth $1 each, which, with the costs added, brought Mary's total assessment up to $7.50. Edward showed that he was a regular fellow and bore no hard feelings as a result of the argument, for he dug down and produced the $7.50 with which to pay the fine. He interposed no objections, however, when the police announced that the revolver with which Mary had made such a strong point in her argument would be confiscated.

The court was of the opinion that the five shots were worth $1 each, which, with the costs added, brought Mary's total assessment up to $7.50. Edward showed that he was a regular fellow and bore no hard feelings as a result of the argument, for he dug down and produced the $7.50 with which to pay the fine. He interposed no objections, however, when the police announced that the revolver with which Mary had made such a strong point in her argument would be confiscated.

The court was of the opinion that the five shots were worth $1 each, which, with the costs added, brought Mary's total assessment up to $7.50. Edward showed that he was a regular fellow and bore no hard feelings as a result of the argument, for he dug down and produced the $7.50 with which to pay the fine. He interposed no objections, however, when the police announced that the revolver with which Mary had made such a strong point in her argument would be confiscated.

The court was of the opinion that the five shots were worth $1 each, which, with the costs added, brought Mary's total assessment up to $7.50. Edward showed that he was a regular fellow and bore no hard feelings as a result of the argument, for he dug down and produced the $7.50 with which to pay the fine. He interposed no objections, however, when the police announced that the revolver with which Mary had made such a strong point in her argument would be confiscated.

The court was of the opinion that the five shots were worth $1 each, which, with the costs added, brought Mary's total assessment up to $7.50. Edward showed that he was a regular fellow and bore no hard feelings as a result of the argument, for he dug down and produced the $7.50 with which to pay the fine. He interposed no objections, however, when the police announced that the revolver with which Mary had made such a strong point in her argument would be confiscated.

J. E. CALDWELL & CO. ENGAGEMENT RINGS

EILEEN Victor Herbert's Greatest Success

Lighting Fixtures and Lamps The Horn & Brannen Mfg. Co.

Mountain Valley Water Stop suffering from Bright's Disease, Rheumatism, Gout, Diabetes, etc.

Perry's Unquestionably Have the Clothes! We have prepared for this Winter Season of Unprecedented Price Advances the Largest Stocks of Overcoats and Suits that we have ever produced...

Single-Breasted Suits, Winter Overcoats, Double-Breasted Suits, Evening Dress Suits and Tuxedo Suits, Officers' Uniforms, Junior Special Suits, Suits Trimmed With Iridescent Silk, Fur-trimmed Overcoats, Fur-Lined Overcoats, Fur-Collar Overcoats, Fur-Outside Overcoats.