FIRST WAR INSURANCE TO GRESHAM'S MOTHER

Evansville Widow Only Dependent of First Three U. S. Soldiers Killed

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7. Mrs. Alice Dodd, of Evansville, Ind., widow of Private James B. Gresham, who was killed in the recent engagement between American soldiers and Germans in France, will be the first dependent of a soldier to receive an income under the war insurance act.

No available records show any dependent of Thomas F. Enright, Pittsburgh, and Merle D. Hay, Glidden, Ia.

Mrs. Dodd, as the widowed mother and sole beneficiary of a soldier, will receive at least $45 a month, $20 a month as straight pay and $25 a month as insurance. There is no record available to show whether young Gresham carried a special policy in behalf of his mother, but if she did she will receive $5.75 for every $1000 instead of the $25 automatic insurance.

The government will continue to pay the allotment of pay and the family allowances to the dependents of the men reported captured or missing and these dependents will benefit accordingly, if any change is made in their status by the War Department.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 7.—Judge Biedsoe, of the United States District Court, holds that courts have the right to determine whether military exemption boards have acted arbitrarily in ordering selected men to camps.

Suffrage Landslide in New York Gives Them the Joy of Anticipation

ENFRANCHISEMENT NIGH

Miss Philadelphia Confidently Looks to Congress for a Federal Amendment

By MLISS

Are you Republican or Democratic or Town Meeting, Miss Philadelphia? Do you know where to put your "X" mark? Have you found your polling place? Formed your political opinions?

Now's the time, for, flushed with the victory of the New York suffragists, Philadelphia leaders predict that the time is nigh for your enfranchisement, as it is nigh for the enfranchisement of every woman in the country.

With the landslide suffrage vote in New York the climax of the women's fight in this country for the ballot has been passed. Nothing remains to be told of that story, suffragists assert, but the last chapter—the gathering up of the loose ends—of Pennsylvania is one. These loose ends, it is the consensus of opinion, will be gathered up by the Sixty-fifth Congress, which convenes in Washington in December. A Federal amendment in the near future, it is the emphatic prophecy, will make all women free, even those of the reactionary States.

It's been a thriller, this tale of the American woman's indomitable struggle for political enfranchisement in the face of almost insuperable obstacles. It started with the efforts of hardy pioneer women who faced ridicule and social ostracism in order to gather recruits. Slowly and painfully the work of Susan B. Anthony, Elizabeth Cady Stanton and others grew, taking almost a hundred years to reach the magnificent culmination which the New York vote represents.

PENNSYLVANIA LOOKS TO CONGRESS What effect will the New York victory have on the women of Pennsylvania? That was the question I asked some of the Philadelphia leaders.

"I'll tell you exactly what is going to happen," Mrs. George A. Dunning, chairman of the city party, replied with conviction. "We are all going to vote very, very soon. Nothing can keep us from it. When Congress convenes you will see."

"The New York women put over the most glorious campaign that has ever been put over by any body of workers. It was a magnificent spectacle to watch women of all classes working in perfect unison with a single dominating motive. The justice of our demand made the fight worth while. And what they have done and won has been not only for themselves, but for every unenfranchised woman in the country."

"I do not believe that we shall have to wait for Pennsylvania to enfranchise us. We are looking toward Washington rather than toward Harrisburg. To even get a hearing here we should have to wait for no long a time—until 1918—and the liquor interests and the other opposing forces are so strongly entrenched here that, when New York now in the field for us, it is inconceivable that we should wait until 1918." According to Mrs. George A. Piersol, prominent worker here, the absolutely democratic spirit displayed by the New York women and their indefatigable energy is responsible for the victory that has put heart into every suffragist in a non-suffrage State.

"Those women were defeated in 1915," Mrs. Piersol said, "but it was like water rolling off a duck's back." They paid absolutely no attention to the defeat, but went on working. In their campaigns they have showed a spirit, an energy, a solidarity and sagacity that makes it seem ridiculous that these women have not had the vote before.

"The New York women worked together," she continued, "that is their secret, if they have any. As Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt said, 'The enemy knows the difference between a hollow and a solid square.' Their square was solid. Women with millions worked side by side with women who hadn't a penny to call their own. They had a great fine organization. There were not various little clubs or cliques or 'sets' all working individually and ineffectually."

"New York women have done a glorious thing," she said, "and although the headline says that New York wins, the figures do not say so. The figures show that a majority of 100,000 were against suffrage."

ANTIS WONT ADMIT DEFEAT Despite the overwhelming reports of a landslide, however, the "antis" refuse to yield a victory to their rivals until the last ballot has been counted and tabulated.

"I have read the Ledger," Mrs. George P. White, spokesman for the antis, said severely, "and although the headline says that New York wins, the figures do not say so. The figures show that a majority of 100,000 were against suffrage."

It was pointed out to Mrs. White that she must have misread, or read an early edition of last night's paper. "I have seen the 5 o'clock edition," she answered, "the figures tell the truth."

McCall Elected Governor for Third Term by Plurality of 91,023 Votes

BOSTON, Nov. 7. Governor Samuel W. McCall and the entire Republican State ticket made a clean sweep in yesterday's election. The Governor was re-elected for a third term by a plurality of 91,023 over Frederick W. Mansfield, his Democratic opponent.

The anti-aid amendment to the Constitution, which prohibits the use of State money for other than State-controlled institutions, was adopted by a majority of 75,000. Lieutenant Governor Calvin Coolidge, Republican, defeated Matthew Hale, who had the support of the Democratic Progressive and Prohibition forces by 100,545 plurality.

The only point scored by Democracy in the election was the success of William E. Russell in a senatorial district in Cambridge. Mr. Russell is a son of the late William E. Russell, formerly Governor and a Democratic idol.

Wilfred W. Lufkin, of Beverly, Republican, was elected to Congress in the Sixth district, over George A. Schofield, Democrat, by a plurality of 11,038. The election was to fill the vacancy caused by Augustus P. Gardner going to war. Mr. Lufkin was Mr. Gardner's secretary.

The total vote on the anti-aid amendment was: Yes, 204,788; no, 129,922. The other amendments, one calling for absentee voting and the other that municipalities may sell necessities of life, were adopted by large votes.
