Nancy Wynne Talks About Cushman Club Tea. Actresses Join Independence Square Red Cross Auxiliary—Jack Proves Very Patriotic

THE Charlotte Cushman Club is about to give another tea. This time the guest of honor will be Miss Martha Hedman who is playing the leading part in the "Boomerang." The club in its ten or twelve years of existence has become quite an important factor in the city, and I have seldom seen any women as interested in an undertaking, keep it up as long as the women who back this one have and are some sentence, but I mean it. Mrs. Otis Skinner is president and takes a most lively and active interest in the club and in the individual actresses during the season.

ALL these women of the stage are anxious to employ their leisure hours in working for the Red Cross, and Mrs. Skinner went recently to Mrs. George Horace Lorimer, who is head of the Independence Square Auxiliary of the Red Cross, that the Cushman Club actresses wanted to join her auxiliary, and they had done so. So you see it's likely that many a pretty actress will saunter into many a workshop and don her cap and apron and go to work cutting and stitching and sewing and clipping for the boys "over there" at any time. The women on the committee with Mrs. Lorimer at the Independence Square headquarters include: Vice Chairmen Mrs. George Fales Baker, Mrs. Robert Knott Hare, Mrs. E. Burt Grubb and Mrs. Otis Skinner. The directors include Mrs. Frederick English, Mrs. Theron Crane, Mrs. Francis X. Dorem, Mrs. Hampton L. Carson and Mrs. I. H. O'Hara, and on the advisory board are Mrs. J. Bertram Lippincott, Mrs. Joseph Ledy, Mrs. Rodman Griscom, Mrs. J. Wellington Shannon and Mrs. Reed Morgan.

TO RETURN to the Charlotte Cushman Club, the reception will be held this afternoon from 4 until 5:30 o'clock, and the usual members of the board of directors will receive. Mrs. Skinner is at present in Chicago, or rather was there last week. She travels a good deal with Mr. Skinner, you know. A little bird whispered to me that there was question of Mr. Skinner getting up a benefit when he comes to Philadelphia. This time for the Red Cross, not for the Charlotte Cushman Club, however.

THE Women's Suffrage party here is so delighted with the carrying of New York for suffrage, Mrs. George A. Dunne, who is chairman, tells me they are planning to hold a jubilee reception this evening at the headquarters at 1721 Chestnut street at 8 o'clock to celebrate the victory of their New York sisters. And they invite all to attend.

It certainly is worth celebrating. Don't tell me if the women in this city could vote, for instance, that there would be any question now as to whether the "TOWN PARTY" had gotten in or not. They would be in. Get me?

NEVER before had he been so popular! It was after church, and in dividing up the sailors from the Navy Yard among the hospitable church members who had opened their doors to the lonely creatures, one little Jackie found himself the common property of two of the sweetest old ladies imaginable. The only difficulty lay in the fact that it was a question of two against one, and that he had, had he but known it, in the very midst of a lifelong friendship. Both ladies had expected at least two of the "dear boys" and both had prepared dinners fit for a king. Alas! What should a little boy do?

"My dear Margaret, you must take him," said the little blue-eyed lady. "Not at all, my dear Mary," said she of the silvery curls. "He shall go with you." And so it went on until our hero, crimson to the tips of his ears and driven between politeness and desperation, suggested a way out of the difficulty. At that the ladies were a little shocked, but they were good sports and always had been, so at last with a twinkle of the eye and a little toss of the head, they DREW LOTS in the churchyard for that precious bit of humanity! That sailor lad!

Of course, the moral is that if more sailors had been religiously inclined on that bright Sunday morning it would have saved two little saints a few conscience pangs. It sometimes does seem as if these boys don't know when they are in luck.

USES TALENT FOR RED CROSS

Novel Game of Bridge Conducted by Expert at Manheim Cricket Club

IT is wonderful that the war has done to arouse people to a realization of their manifold resources and ability to serve their country in the many different ways that they have proved themselves capable of doing. Every one is using his or her talent in giving recitals, getting up bridges or begging on the street corners (and that is a talent) to raise funds for the Red Cross and for many war relief organizations.

The Alumnae Association of the Stevens School held its annual luncheon on Wednesday at the Manheim Cricket Club. As it was the school's fiftieth anniversary, a great many of the "old girls" came back, and Miss Mary Bentley, principal of the school, gave a very interesting talk on the work that they have been doing this last year. Every department seems to have been extremely busy. The intermediate classes are helping to support some little fund for the school, and the smallest child in the primary knows how to knit for soldiers. The school took a $100 Liberty Bond, the interest of which goes to the French soldiers, and which is being paid for by donations from the girls. They also raised subscriptions amounting to $200 for the Liberty Loan.

Social Activities Bishop Thomas J. Garland and Mrs. Garland will give a reception on Thursday evening in celebration of their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary at Clowriea, their home in Mount Airy.

Miss Frances Shepperd, of the Gladstone, has returned to town, after an extended visit at the St. Charles, Atlantic City. Mr. and Mrs. John A. Hickey, of 251 South Thirty-eighth street, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Margaret Riegel Paul, to Mr. Karl A. Suelke.

HORATIO CONNELL WINS FAVOR OF AUDIENCE

Philadelphia Bass-Baritone Gives First Home Recital in Five Seasons

Horatio Connell, the sterling bass-baritone, who hails originally from Philadelphia, made his first recital appearance in five years on his native beach, so to speak, last evening in Webster's Hall when he won the favor of a discriminating University Extension audience, under whose auspices the concert was given. Mr. Connell's suave yet powerful tones and polished art have, of course, been known to local music lovers since he became a national figure on the concert and festival platform through his soloist appearances with the Philadelphia Orchestra and with various choral organizations, as well as at the Bach festivals at Bethlehem. It was, however, a welcome opportunity to hear him in a "one-man" program selected with tactfulness and mood, and variety, and with the expert accompaniment of Ellis Clark Hammann.

The program traversed the classics, the romantic school, the known and the unknown, including that this is an American year in music that that American composer have contributed meritoriously to song literature. Typical of one phase of Handel in its pure grace and florid sweetness was "Tween the Branches and the Blossoms," from "Bernice," one of the composer's invulnerable and immortal operatic "Porcelain's." "Nina" was another of the olden lyric bits worthy of more frequent revival. Beethoven was represented by "In Questa Tomba Oscura," very adequately rendered. Evidence of his ingenuity in his program and sang them poetically in the original German without raising a ripple of protest at his liberalizing a ripple of protest at his liberalizing and only arousing applause for his interesting interpretations.

Then he gave a group of foreign songs, some in the original language, some in translation, including the Hungarian folk song "Hungaria's Treasure," the old French "Sur le Pont d'Avignon" and numbers by Cui, Rachmaninoff and Coquard. His American songs were impressively indigenous with its inclusion of "Aooah," a Sioux melody transcribed by Thurlow Lieurance. It comprised also George B. Nevins' "When the Kys Come Home," and a manuscript offering of merit by Philadelphia composer, Stanley Muschamps, "Where Go the Boats" and Maurice Ledesma's "Cupid's Visit," both of which deserve speedy publication.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Harris, of Granite street, are visiting friends in New York. Mrs. A. Bartlin, of James street, will entertain her card club at her home this afternoon. The graduate and student nurses of the Frankford Hospital held their annual Halloween party in the nurses' home at Frankford avenue and Wakefield street last Thursday evening.

Aid for Draftees' Families Red Cross Civilian Relief Committee Will Provide Care

Contradicting the statement that there was no organization in Philadelphia to care for destitute families of drafted men, it was announced today that the home service section of the Civilian Relief of the American Red Cross will attend to all such cases. Mrs. Henry C. Boyer, chairman of this department, said: "The home service section of the American Red Cross, whose office is at 1607 Walnut street, has a complete organization to look after the needs of families of all men in the military and naval services, and not only furnishes financial relief but, anything else that is needed by the families, including legal and medical advice; indeed, the thing else that will brighten the lot of the families of the men who have given themselves to their country. After the family life is adjusted and there is no longer need of financial or other material assistance, the home service section still keeps in touch with the family, so that when help of another character is required, advice or other assistance will be furnished cheerfully and without delay."
