PENN'S 1916 ELEVEN MADE GOOD, BUT RECORD FOR 1917 SURPASSED EFFORTS OF NEIL MATHEWS'S TEAM

Latter Won Seven, Lost Three and Tied One, Against Nine Wins and Two Reverses for Captain Miller's Aggregation

N THESE wartimes victories and defeats in football are not supposed to be taken seriously. We of the present generation realize the hardships under which the sport is fostered and appreciate the sportsmanship of the authorities who have placed teams on the field. But in the drift of years, conditions will be forgotten and the record-books will show merely the scores of the various games and the credit, of course, will go to the victors. For this reason it can be said safely without fear of any great argument that in years to come students of the game will look back on 1917 as one of the greatest years in the history of football at the University of Pennsylvania. And rightfully they should, for the splendid 37-0 triumph of the Red and Blue over Cornell yesterday was the crowning achievement of one of the greatest machines ever to fight for the institution on the other side of the

In the offices of the Athletic Association after the twenty-fifth annual struggle between Penn and Cornell gathered the officials and many former stars of the gridiron. The opinion was unanimous among these authorities on the great college game that the eleven men who wrung victory from the defenders from the shores of Lake Cayuga formed a machine that does not suffer in comparison with the famous teams of other days. It is unfortunate that in these days the presence of the war-fever prohibits giving the proper amount of credit which is really due the Praise still is being sung to Captain Neil Mathews and the members of the 1916 eleven at the Quaker university, but the 1917 team accomplished more than last year's squad could do. In the first place, Miller's players went through the year with a string of nine victories and only two defeats, while Mathews's team amassed only seven triumphs, suffered three reverses and played one tie. During the season just closed Penn lost to Georgia Tech and to Pittsburgh, but all the remaining games were won, while a year ago contests were lost to Swarthmore. Pittsburgh and Oregon, while the Dartmouth battle was a tie.

IN THE last two years Penn has won five of its six letter games and the other one was a 7-7 deadlock with Dartmouth in 1916. The Red and Blue could lose every one of its other games and win from Dartmouth, Michigan and Cornell and the season would be a success, but the record of nine victories, six of which came in a row, and only two defeats, will live long as a great one in the history of Penn football.

Election of Bell to Captaincy a Wise Move

BERT BELL, one of the gamest little field generals in the game, has been chosen to lead the Red and Blue through the gridiron campaign of 1918 and the selection of the letter men was a wise and popular one. Times were when Bert was not a very popular young man at Pennsylvania, but right now it would be hard to find one who is respected and idolized more than the game little quarter, with the exception of Howard Berry. There has been a lot of talk about the uselessness of electing Bell in view of the fact that he is not likely to return to college.' Only two things can happen-he will return or he will not returnand Penn is the winner either way.

If Bell returns, the Red and Blue will be fortunate in having a fighting captain, a real leader and a great general to drive the 1918 machine over the rough roads of the schedule, and if Bert does not come back, the Penn players will have the satisfaction of knowing that honor has been bestowed upon their little quarterback and that they did choose the right man for the post. Either way you look at it, it is easy to see that the letter players did right in picking the athlete-son of John C. Bell, former Attorney General.

Never before in his three years of football at the University did Bert play a more masterful game than he did against Cornell yesterday. His choice of plays was always the right one, and his whipping drive that is all over his personality spurred the Quakers on to their best efforts. In the first period the former Haverford player had considerable to do with the defensive work, for young Cross and Carry were breaking through the Red and Blue first defense quite often. No less than three times did Bell catch a Cornellian after he had passed the first and secondary defense.

BELL two years ago was a target for slander from the spectators and today he holds the highest position in Penn football. Such is the turn of fate, but Bert has himself to thank for the twist in the luck, for it has been his gameness, his courage in the face of odds that would make quitters out of some men that has earned for him his place in the football

Penn Not Scored on in Last Half Dozen Games

THE magnificent defense that has been built up by the Quaker coaches this year was in evidence once again against Cornell when, for the sixth consecutive game, the opposition failed to penetrate for a single score. Not since Pittsburgh triumphed over the Red and Blue on October 27 has the Folwell machine been scored upon, and yesterday was the first time since 1906 that a Cornell team has been kept from the Penn goal. Times have been when the rival team was dangerously close to the Red and Blue line, but always the defense stiffened and held the enemy for downs, or else a fumble kept the record clean.

While the defense kept the enemy away from the posts, the offense was not slow in running up points. In the last six games Penn has tallied 136 points. Through the entire season the Red and Blue has amassed a total of 245 points to 71 scored by opponents. The majority of the counters were credited to the versatile Howard Berry, who yesterday made his valedictory to collegiate football with a contribution of nineteen points to the thirty-seven piled up by Folwell's machine.

Two touchdowns, a goal from field and four goals from touchdowns was the harvest reaped by Berry in his last game for Pennsylvania and the last game he ever will play in collegiate ranks. He has completed four years of varsity football, three at Penn and one at Muhlenberg, and, according to the present rules, he is through for good unless he picks out Annapolis or West Point for further achievements. Today Berry leaves to mobilize with Ambulance Unit No. 20, and he leaves behind him a record of athletic accomplishments in three branches of sport that will not be equaled in many years.

BERRY is a wonderful athlete, the most versatile in Red and Blue history since the days of McCracken and Kraenzlein, and made all the more interesting because of his peculiar temperament. In days to come it will be stories of Berry that will drive Penn teams to great efforts, as now the stories of Stevenson spur the players to a better brand of play.

Light and Maynard Heroes Against Cornell Team

PRAISES cannot be heaped too thick on the shoulders of Hobey Light and Eddie Maynard for their remarkable showing against Coach Sharpe's eleven. In previous games this season Light has been the star on the defense, while his offensive play has not stood out with any marked degree of prominence. However, yesterday he was just as good on the attack as he was when the Ithacans had possession of the ball, and those who have watched Light in any one of his games this season knows what the above assertion means.

Several times Hobey got away for long runs, and his crowning success was at the very beginning of the final period, when he slipped off Cornell's right tackle and sprinted thirty yards for a touchdown. When he broke through the first defense he bumped into Cross, the Ithacan halfback, but he squirmed his way to an open field. Next he met Nethercott, the Sharpe quarterback, on his way to a score and he dropped the Ithacan general with as neat a straight arm as has been seen on Franklin Field this year. Once with a clear field ahead, there was no stopping him, and he dashed over the goal line for the touchdown which sent the Quakers away on their twenty-four point period. Maynard was the sensation of the line. He beat the ends down the field under punts, and rarely did he miss a tackle. More than once he broke through and broke up Ithacan plays before they were really started. Once he blocked one of Hoffman's punts and gave Captain Miller a chance to tally the first touchdown of the game. On another occasion he hurled his slim body in front of one of Hoffman's three tries at a field goal, and he prevented a possible Cornell score by blocking the ball.

WITH one hand still in bandages as the result of an injury in the Indian game, Captain Miller played one of the best games of his career. His forty-yard run for a touchdown after Maynard blocked Hoffman's punt was one of the most brilliant open-field dashes seen this season. He was tackled twice on his march toward the Ithacan goal lines, but neverthe-

State Was in Scrappy Mood

But yesterday, although Pitt triumphed y the score of 28 to 6, the champions did ot have an easy time of it. Penn State trotted out on the field an underrater team and proceeded to prove that the advance dope was entirely wrong. Instead of a light, weak, inexperienced eleven it was a well-coached, strappy crowd, and the game they put up made Pitt look foolish in two e four periods.
the second and third quarters State

clearly outplayed her heavier rivals and in that time exposed a new attack which carried the ball down the field for a touch-

This was surprising and worried Pitt considerably, and it was not until the last eight minutes of the game that they re for the new stuff. They would spread out, with one yard between the guards and the backfield men lined up outside of the end. The center stood sideways and passed the ball to one of the bucks. It was a deceptive play and, aided by the high-necktic tuckles perpetrated by the Pitt men. State was able o tear off some good gains.

There were some variations with for vard passes thrown in for good means and one of the aerial heaves, which landed in the arms of Captain Conover, regulied in a touchdown.

This attack is similar to that used by Tufts and also resembles the formation used by C. Harlow Raymond at Lawrenceto stop, but when it gets going, good gains mind, was that the open formation was used in the first half. Had it been saved until the second session romething might have happened to make Pitt feel sad to-

The outstanding feature of the afternoon was the work of Way, the little 135-pound was the work of Way, the little 13a-pound quarterback. Time and again the tore off long runs and his work was as good as any seen on a gridiron this year. This young man comprised more than one-half of State's attack. He carried the ball well, used excellent judgment in his selection of plays, and even went so far as to hurl the forward pass like a veteran. He runs hard, with reckless abandon and never slows up when about to be tackled. He is the sensation of the year, and it is strange that he has not broken into print long before this. He will be one of the stars next year. Last year he was unable to make the freshman team and was a substitute half-

Scraps About Scrappers By BILL BELL

TURKEY DAY boxing now is over and, A taking it all in all, there was no cause for complaint. The writer enjoyed several of the bouts at Olympia and finished up of the bours at Olympia and finished up the day at the National. All the scraps seemed to please, and good crowds were the rule. The Cambria A. C. show ran off like a smooth machine, and this club contributed the only knockout of the day

There were 108 rounds scheduled, and it remained for Young Tierney to cut off four of the scheduled rounds. He stopped Johnny Allen in the second round, and it was remarkable with so many bouts being held that only one contest—this a pre-liminary—was stopped before the final bell. All three clubs put on six bouts, and the fans were well repaid for turning out in such large numbers.

With the holiday attractions written in the books we now can focus our attention On the defense, however, McLaren played on the coming match at Olympia on December 12 between Benny Leonard, lightweight champion, and Irish Patsy Cline. #### "Chief" Muller's Great Work When Tommy Barlow made his first appearance of the season in De Neri's line-up more than a week ago it was rumored that one of the three professionals under contract was to get the "razz" in order to make room for the speedy Trenton youth, but because Tommy feels that he has been unjustly treated by the De Neri manage ment, Barlow has written a letter to Manager Myers informing him that he will no play another game with his team. Barlow was criticized for his poor work in the was criticized for his poor work in the one game he played, but was forced to get out of a sick bed to help out when Joe Dreyfuse was injured. He says he has not been given a fair deal and did not appear for the team's last game. If ar rangements can be made he will likely be traded to some other club.

it was said when Barlow returned the player to be "canned" would be Muller and after watching De Neri for nearly a month we unhesitatingly proclathat he has played the best ball of any man on the club and while there is possibly little likelihood of any professional on De Nerl now being released Muller should b the last and this broad statement includes Joe Dreyfuss.

We have read considerable and then some of the provess of certain youngsters who have just broken into fast society, but the performance of Muller, taking into consideration his many years' service in the game, has been nothing short of phenomenal. In his seven games played he has scored eighteen baskets and held his opponents to con-siderably fewer. He has played every posisiderably fewer. He has played every posi-tion and fits in almost equally well at for-ward, guard or center. When "Chief" was secured by Manager Myers many passed adverse criticism on his judgment in sign-ing an "old man." but Muller's playing has not been surpassed by any one in the East-ern League. His work has been clean-cut and be more cylibias any feedbare. and he never exhibits any tendence to mix it up. His best performance to date was at Trenton on Moniay evening, when he slipped six double-deckers through the net and blanked "Doc" Newman, one of the best in the game.

Never in Trenton has any one given such a scintillating exhibition as that out across by Muller. The fact that he blanked an opponent with the ability of Newman on the home floor would have been a noteworthy feat, but to toss through six goals only added to his prowers.

Has Had Wide Experience

Muller's work has played a prominent part in all of De Neri's victories. He has blocked, ducked and dribbled in wonderful style. Of course, he has had wide experi-ence and time experiently has failed to dim his vision if his work can be accepted as a criterion.

Looking over the Eastern League players there is not a man in harness who was in the Center! League with "Chief," unless Charley O'Donnell can be considered. George Morris was still playing independent ball with Rending when Muller was starring for South Side a ong with Harry Hough. Robby Mayham, Jimmy Kane, Andy Suils King Brady and Jack Featherstone. At that time Muller was considered the best center in the Central League, and that he is able to remain among the top-notche all these years speaks wonders for lability. Muller has played everywhere. every league, all styles and all rules. His
