to join the protest entered by the other Allied ministers was due to the fact that it was based on the London agreement against a separate peace, to which America is not a signatory.

The chief of the American military mission here has informed the general staff that while no official information has reached the American embassy with regard to the prohibition on vessels about to sail for Russia, as reported in the press, and the detention of goods to the value of $225,000,000 ready for shipment, pending the formation of a firmly established government, such a report is in his opinion and that of the ambassador representative exactly the point of view of the American Government.

General Berthelot, chief of the French military mission to Rumania, has informed General Steinerbach, that he has received a communication from Clemenceau stating that France does not recognize the present Government commissioners and that the French public opinion is the expression of the patriotism of the Russian people.

The chief command trusts he will categorically reject all criminal overtures and maintain the Russian army face to face with the common foe. France will decline to recognize a Government capable of making terms with an enemy.

The Russian parliamentarians decided to discuss the peace with the Russian representatives will be conducted by the German commander. The time appointed is midday on November 15 (Russian calendar), or December 2, new calendar.

Ensign Krylenko has issued an order to the army and fleet, saying that armistice negotiations would open on December 3. Threatening dissent with a revolutionary court-martial, ordering all firing to cease and fraternization begun on all fronts to stop. The order says: "Great vigilance is necessary regarding the enemy. No military operations should be undertaken except in reply to those of the enemy."

DUELLI DI ARTIGLIERIA ALLA FRONTE ITALIANA

Gli Austro-Tedeschi Tentano con l'Artiglieria di Spezzare le Linee Italiane

ROMA, 3 dicembre.

Disparci giunti dalla linea di battaglia recano che lungo quasi tutta la fronte si verifica un violento "duello di artiglierie e specialmente sull'altipiano di Asiago e lungo il basso corso della Piave.

Numerosi contingenti di fanteria austro-tedesca, con mitragliatrici, si sforzano per poter prendere posizione in qualche punto del triangolo fondato tra il Piave ed il vecchio Piave. Questa regione e' al lat' intersecata da parecchie strade che terminano appunto vicino le acque e gli austro-tedeschi se ne sono avvantaggiati per far avanzare le loro forze e dare considerevole molestia ai difensori.

Un ultimo dispaccio giunto stamane dalla fronte di battaglia reca che gli austro-tedeschi hanno tentato (e tentati) compiuti dalle loro fanterie per cercare di tagliare le linee italiane sull'altipiano di Asiago e lungo il Piave. Il dispaccio dice pure che i bersaglieri hanno conseguito del successo nel settore di Monte Pertica occupando nuove posizioni, le quali sono state posate violentamente abbandonate perché sarebbe stato pericoloso mantenerle essendo soggette ai fuochi incrociati delle artiglierie nemiche.

Gli aviatori italiani hanno rapportato che gli austro-tedeschi stanno nevamente concentrando truppe lungo il basso corso della Piave nel punto ove le loro linee giacciono piu' vicino a Venezia.

BESHLIN TAKES SEAT AS CONGRESS MEETS

By a Staff Correspondent WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.—There was some delay shortly after the meeting of Congress today in seating Mr. Beshlin, of Warren, the new Democratic member of Congress from the Twenty-second Pennsylvania District.

Mr. Beshlin, who resigned immediately after his election a year ago. When Congressman Sterling, of Uniontown, introduced Mr. Beshlin to the House and asked unanimous consent that he be sworn in, in the absence of a certificate of election from the Secretary of State of Pennsylvania, Congressman Madden, of Illinois, objected.

Mr. Beshlin held a certificate from the canvassing board; that there was no doubt of his election and that no member, either Republican or Democrat, from Pennsylvania would object.

Mr. Beshlin then withdrew his objection and Beshlin was led to the well in front of the Speaker's desk, where the oath was administered. He received a generous clapping of hands when the ceremony was ended.

parts it could instantly take a few rush orders from anywhere or any front.

It was Colonel House, according to members of the two councils, who devised the plan of businesslike dispatch of problems before the Pan-Allies. House discovered in advance of the meetings that there were numerous major and minor participants who were named and ready with speeches.

House believes a fast-working, quickly deciding board should appear in the war council and the Inter-Allied meeting. He wanted to model its sessions along the lines of a board of directors' meeting of an American business corporation.

He consulted Premier Clemenceau and pointed out that after all one single speech really meant just as much as a lot of addresses which could reasonably be expected to last several days.

Clemenceau caught the idea. He prepared a typewritten statement of one single paragraph, concluding with the terse phrase, "Let's work."

The council did. In three days political and military leaders arranged a new "business" organization. Today most of them had departed for home. There was not a single speech or banquet during the time the leaders were meeting. It was business from the word go.

Except for standardization of airplanes, it was not made known what decision had been reached by the meeting. The Italian and Russian situation, it was certain, played an important part in the discussions.

The final meeting of Allied statesmen and war experts still here for an afternoon session of the Inter-Allied Council took place at the French Foreign Office this afternoon. Colonel House presided and made a very brief speech.

Nearly all the American delegates have gone or are going today to the front.

Colonel House announced he would remain in Paris for a few days.

Will Prosecute in Election Fight

Henry Blumhewig, clerk of this board, said the mistake was merely a clerical error. Judges Philletter and Martin ordered the vote recounted under supervision of watchers.

Emphatic irregularities in the ninth division of the Thirteenth Ward, of which John R. K. Scott is the dominant power, were disclosed. There were 139 votes returned from the division and only 124 ballots in the box.

William Ashton, judge of election, said the mistake was due to the fact that fourteen Roosevelt Progressive votes were counted for Kendrick, but the count showed there were no Roosevelt Progressive votes.

When asked how such a mistake could have been made Ashton shifted uneasily and said "they just slipped by them somehow."

Isaac Hardley, election judge, sixth division of the Thirty-seventh ward, said the mistake was due to the fact that fourteen Roosevelt Progressive votes were counted for Kendrick, but the count showed there were no Roosevelt Progressive votes.
