That would be a lot better. I taink, though, of course, some girls are the limit. After breakfast Rowdy and I rambled out to Jim and Maggle's and on the way

I turned over endways a few times in the road so my mother in heaven could see how well I can do it. I wished my mother had been with me, for then she mother had been with me, for then she could have seen me plainer than by looking down from heaven. When I turn over endways under the trees of course she can't see me very well, but it was ail right in the road, only the road was pretty dusty. When I walked on my hands they picked un a good deal of dust, but It was no trouble to wipe them on my dress. Bowdy even clied over in the dust, which was going some.

RIFLE AND BAYONET WILL WIN, SAYS CLEMENT

General Just Back From War Zone Praises the Spirit of Enlisted Men

CAMP HAN-OCK, Augusta, Ga., Dec. 8.—"The war will be won by the rifle and the bayonet," said Major General Charles M. Clement, commander of the Twenty-eighth division, in an address delivered in Augusta in connection with the national celebration of the Ameri-can Red Cross. General Clement, who has just returned from France, paid a great compliment to the enlisted me and urged the bestowal of medals for their deeds of valor and bravery. He appealed for plenty of warm clothins, including sweaters and woolen socks and helmets.

Whitaker was lying on a table. He was taken home and medical aid summoned.
At the instance of District Attorney Wade, who came to this city to investigate the case, Constable Frymoyer lavought complaint against Howe, Carter and May, charging them with felonious assault and battery, doing him bodily harm and endangering the life of H. A. Whitaker.
Warrants were issued by Alderman Myers, of this city, and forwarded to Captain Tate, of Philadelphia, Cartering Howe had their offices in the Widener Building, Philadelphia.

Asked for a statement, Chief of Po-lice Howe said:

tice Hove said:

I deny most emphatically that I laid my hands on Mr. Whitaker. I came up from Philadelphia to Coatesville to have a conference with Mr. Whitaker relative to the discharge of Thomas May, captain of police! I entered Mr. Whitaker's office accompanied by John Carter and Thomas May. I desired to know for what nurnose Mr. May was discharged. That I had a right to know.

Mr. Whitaker ordered me out of his office. Previous to my going out, F. A. Shook came in the office with Mr. May's time. I left the office and later heard reports of what had happened. Tagre was no one in the office when we entered except Mr. Whitaker. Mr. Whitaker has no jurisdiction in discharging the officers. This comes under my department.

Mr. Whitaker had some trouble with Captain Taylor, who recently left the employ of the firm. Then I sent Mr. May up to take the position.
