TENER MAY QUIT AS LEAGUE HEAD Says He Can Only Be Inactive President if National Re-elects

WILL STAY IF NEEDED

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—Governor Toner may not be president of the National League after today. He has not resigned, nor has he been asked to, but he is to put the question of his remaining as president at the meeting of the league at its meeting today.

Tener May Quit Game

There have been rumors that Toner would declare to the world his intention of leaving baseball unless Harry Thayer, his successor, would be a candidate for re-election, but a short time later the league managers unanimously requested him to again accept the presidency and Toner said he would do so far as is known, that still is his intention.

To Take Up Player Limit

In addition to the personal issue between Toner and Hermann the league was scheduled to take up many matters of importance, providing all club owners were able to reach the city by noon today.

Johnson as a Factor

Ben Johnson, president of the American League, is quoted as saying in Chicago on Sunday that the usual schedule of 141 games would be played, although he favored the shorter one of 140 games.
