Mrs. Edward Troth's Dancing Class Holds Masked Meeting at Manheim-Children's Party. Little Betty Learns a Lesson

IN THE evening there was a meeting of Mrs. Bullock will be remembered as Miss Mrs. Troib's dancing class out at Man- Helen Millepaugh, of West Philade'phia, heim, and it was a fancy dress affair; in fact, so fancy was it that not a mortal soul, be he man, woman or child, was able to enter the sacred precincts of the hallroom with uncovered face. Every one HAD to go masked. It was great fun, too, for it's been so long since we've had any such "goings on," and you know the Bat Masque has been called off for this year. too, so great was the joy of those who subscribe to Mrs. Troth's, when it was decided positively to have a masked meeting. Mrs. Troth believes in the men and girls having fun, but she does not believe in extravagance, so she has put a ban on the wearing of flowers at her parties; she wishes her dances to be conducted as simply as possible during these wartimes, and flowers that will and die in one evening are considered extravagances. It's good for the men's pocketbooks, too, incidentally, ten't it?

The party began carly and the unmasking took place at supper time, shortly before 11 o'clock.

THE Billie Drayton Granges had a lovely children's party on Saturday night at their home, 1901 Spruce street, for their children, Banning-who is a girl, by the way-and Herman Grange. Nearly all the younger set one knows in town were there and it was voted a "dandy" party. Among the guests were Constance Binney, Mar garet Prichard, Eleanor Hart, Jessie Da Costa, Sophie Yarnall, Lucy Grey, Lysbeth Boyd, Ellen Lloyd, Anne Ashton, Adelaide Newlin, Mabel Reid, Fiff Widener, Margaretta Harrison, Nancy Dunning, Elizabeth Norris, Peggy Rosengarten, Mona Crozer, Alberta Reath, Ellen Glendinning, Cath erine Coxe, Anita Eyans, Helen Sewell. EVEN when one thinks one is perfectly sure of one's subject and expounds on that subject one may make a mistake. So Nancy had a grand time yesterday talking about Gorgorza's voice at the Monday Morning Musicale; that is, she talked more about the shifting of planos, and programs. Well, you see, she got there at 11.25, to be exact, just as it was explained that Mr. Levitsky could not play on frozen keys, and did not hear that Corgorza had been taken ill and that Horatio' Connell had, taken his place, and though it seemed passing strange to her that Gorgorza was so young and tall and rather thin and changed the whole program. Also that his voice, though very beautiful, was not so powerful as she had been led to believe was Gorgorza's, she did not suspect the autouttution and was therefore calmiy appreciating Connell, who was to be appreciated, as Gorgorza. What is more, every one who came in after the concert started thought the same thing, for I heard loads of people commenting on Gorgorza's voice. So now you know! It wasn't he'

Little Girls of New York Hospital Dressed in Snowy White at Annual Party

Troop after troop of dear little girls, dainty and aweet in pretty white dresses, with flaring bows of silk ribbons atop their carefully curled hair, their eyes dancing with happiness, their round little faces all smiles, whirled hither and thither last Friday afternoon about a great, glittering Christmas tree in a big room filled with toys. They were the little girl foundlings of the New York Foundling Hospital, Sixty-eighth street and Lexington avenue, and with them were tiny boys, also in snowy white, immaculately clean and mirabile dictu?—unrestrainedly joyful.

her some pathetic tales, of the fatherless little ones in France, she decided promptly to send a pile of clothing and toys to these children. After much hustling and bustling the box was "just ready" to have its lid nailed down, when the sound of bitter weeping fell upon her ears. Running upstairs to the nursery, whence the sounds proceeded. the kind-hearted mother found small Betty. aged five, crying as if her little heart would break. Thinking that something terrible had happened, the mother gathered the little one into her arms and tried to comfort her, "Oh, Muvvy," sobbed Betty, "I love my babies so much, please don't send them away to France!"

And what do you think that mother did? She carefully unpacked that whole box until each doll was once more in the possession of its fond little owner.

Then the child's mother told her a simple atory about this great war and how other little girls, just like her, had lost, not only their dolls, but their dear fathers and homes as well. "And we should help them in every way we can," she concluded, "even by sending our dearest possessions."

That night before being tucked into bed little Betty kissed each doll with lingering love; and then laid each in turn on top of the big box. "Muvvy," she lisped, "I want to help too; and I'll send my children just as Aunt Alice sent her boys to fight in the war."

It seems to me that tiny Betty had learned a beautiful lesson and in a very beautiful way. What do you think? NANCY WYNNE.

When we hear of all the splendid work of the various Red Cross auxiliaries and groups of Emergency Aid and war relief workers and all of them women, we feel that somehow the women who are so rapidly pushing to the front in all kinds of work will find a way to bring peace to this old world. At the Mutchmore Presbyterian Church. Eighteenth street and Montgomery avenue, the mem-bers of Auxiliary No. 45 of the American Red Cross are turning out quantities of sur-gical dressings, hospital garments and everystical dressings, nospital garments and every-thing needed for the comfort of the wounded soldiers and sailors. They have a splendid aniting section and recently turned in $100 to the society. The meetings are held on Tuesday from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m., under the direction of Mrs. Herbert R. thely try young to go to the party. Some are only a few weeks old. Only on Christ-mas night twins were found on the doorstep of the hospital, and they were very tiny ba-bles indeed. Those who were at the party had been just as wee mites when the sisters had been just as wee mites when the sisters first took them in, but they had grown and been transformed into the little ladies and gentlemen whose manners at that gathering were those of children of the best people of the land-or better.

Refore they went into the big Christmas tree room and received their multitude of toys the children gave a performance on a stage at the end of a great meeting hall which was crowded with many women and a few men who had been invited by the sisters.

President Celebrated

Sixty-first Birthday

President Wilson celebrated his sixty-firs birthday on Saturday. There was no spe-cial ceremony at the Whits House in the course of the day, as the wartime rush of work made impossible any deviation from work made impossible any deviation from the President's daily routine. In the evening, however, Mr. and Mrz. Wilson had a few additional guests at dim-ner. Edward Eillott, of California, a brother-in-law of the President, arrived that day to join Mrz. Eillott, who is passing the Christmas holidays at the White House. Other members of the house party who ar-rived Saturday were Miss Lucy Maurey and Miss Anne Maurey, of Roanoke, Va., nieces of Mrs. Wilson. of Mrs. Wilson.

Congratulatory letters and messages morning the President played golf with Mrs. Wilson and later worked on the railroad address which he will deliver to Congress the weat this week.
