

HENRY PECK IS OFFERING A REWARD FOR THE RETURN OF MR. HENRY PECK DEAD OR ALIVE

CARGOES OF CUBAN SUGAR TO RELIEVE SERIOUS SHORTAGE HERE

LAST WEDNESDAY HE KNOCKED DOWN THE FURNACE SMOKE PIPE WHEN THE WEEK'S WASH WAS DRYING OUT IN THE BASEMENT.

By FONTAINE FOX

(Copyright)

A PENURIOUS HUSBAND

"And her mean husband thinks she's extravagant."
"Why?"
"Because she insists on having Fido's monogram stamped on his dog biscuits."

Camouflage

bashful, lover (2 a. m.)—You father is coming in; what shall do?
Clever Maiden—Sh! stand stiff in the corner, put your hat on, hold your coat and look like a clothes tree.—Pennsylvania Punch Bowl

The Anniversary Feast

"This fine old bottle of wine which we now propose to open was put aside on our wedding day twenty-five years ago."
"And this fine old chicken asked the grouchy guest, 'was hatched at the same time?'"
Judge.

Monopoly

"The Shah of Persia has 50 cooks."
"There you are! That's the reason the rest of us can't get one."
Judge.

above is the Bayamo, one of two freight steamships to arrive here this week from Cuba with immense cargoes of raw sugar. In the hold of the Bayamo were 28,000 bags of sugar, many of which already have been unloaded at the wharf of the Franklin Sugar Refining Company, as illustrated by the picture to the right. Each of these bags contains 320 pounds of sugar.

One of the Pennsylvania State College Ambulance Units drawn up in retreat formation prior to leaving the campus of the institution for the Ambulance Training Camp at Allentown

Twice in the Same Place

Officer (as his car bumps over pedestrian's leg)—Hey, there! look out!
Tommy (picking himself out of the mud)—Wot yuh goin to do? Back up?—Gargoyle.

Cheap Skate

He—I would like to propose a little toast.
She—Nothin' doin', kid. I want a regular meal.—Cornell Widow.

DEMORALIZING

Sergeant (one of the old school): It's the war that's ruinin' the army—us havin' to enlist all these 'tre civilians!"

The Retort Courteous

"You're double-faced," shouted the interrupter at the political meeting; "you're double-faced, that's what you are."
"It's quite evident," remarked the candidate, "that my friend is not double-faced, or he would not have come out tonight with the face he has on him."—Tit-Bits.

The Young Lady Across the Way

The young lady across the way says she saw in the paper that they're giving the boys in the camps vocational training now, and she supposes it will be quite a comfort to them to be able to sing nicely.

THE CHEERFUL CHERUB

My Christmas presents came out wrong—I overlooked some friends. I'll send them shame-faced New Year's cards to try to make amends.

SCHOOL DAYS

—yes, and this mornin' I baked a jar full of cinnamon cookies, but I hid them down cellar with the preserves so's Ben can't get at them. I just can't keep a cookie in the house!

A Good Idea

Fellow—May I kiss you?
Girl—Don't you know that kissing affects the mind?
Fellow—Does it? Let's go easy.—Melley.

The Silhouettes Are Those of American Soldiers in France Who Are Marching Across the Roof of the Comfortable Nissen Hut, in Which They Are Housed During Their Course of Training Behind the Battle Lines.

Little "Bud" Castle, Who Is Proud of Being Mascot of Truck Company No. 3, of the City's Fire Department

Governor Pennypacker and His Staff as They Appeared at Gettysburg During the Latter Part of July, 1903. The Photo Was Taken During the Governor's Swing Around the State, the Closing Incident of Which He Narrates in His Autobiography, Now Appearing on the Editorial Page of the EVENING PUBLIC LEDGER.