Blue, Green and Silver Are This Frock's Colors

Some of the most fascinating of the season's evening frocks, particularly those designed for the debutante or young matron, are fashioned from the softest of two-toned or changeable silk. The charming little frock in the sketch is developed in pale changeable blue-and-green satin. This material makes the tunic, which is bound with silver ribbon and embellished with wreaths of velvet flowers and leaves in the softest of pastel shades. The foundation skirt is of pale-green tulle over a slip of white georgette. The shoulder straps are of silver ribbon, and below the band of silver lace the little changeable satin bodice is caught in with a quaint girdle of the ribbon.
