ADVERTISING MEN AT PINEHURST ESCHEW PLATE AND GIVE MONEY INSTEAD TO AMERICAN RED CROSS

Grim Weather Releases Its Cold Grip in Sunny South—Stay-at-Home Golfers Curing Their Faults in Indoor Golf Schools

THE men who write, buy or sell advertising have been having a wonderful time at Pinehurst. That marvelous place in western North Carolina shows in itself the possibilities of advertising. There was nothing to it when Leonard Tufts first went there but sand and pine trees and scrub oak. Today there are three first-class eighteen-hole courses and a pine-hole links. one tremendous hotel and several smaller ones and scores of big cottages. And It is all the result of advertising. Mr. Tufts had the marvelous climate and he was wise enough at that time to realize that to get busy men to ie there it was necessary to offer them something besides a first-class hotel and pure air. The average busy American is too active to be content to alt on a broad porch and inhale pine-laden air. He wants action. There were a few golf courses in the South at that time, most of them in Florida, But most of them were sad affairs.

Mr. Tufts decided the only way to get the men was to have a golf course. And advertising and golf have been his handmandens. Pinchurst today is the best advertised winter resort in the South. Every year the big advertising men hold an annual tournament t ere. This year there was an innovation in prizes. Instead of giving a tot of eliver cups and plate the winners of the various divisions received checks, and these have been turned over to the Red Cross. W. H. Follett, who led the large qualifying field with an $3, never saw sand greens before he played there and his ore is exceptionally good, for it is not every one who can putt on those

THE weather down South was exceptionally cold for a period of a week or ten days, but since that cold spell it has been delightful, and many who stayed away because of the fright weather are there basking again under summer sides, and the mon in particular are getting a lot of health and recreation playing the oldest

Indoor Golf Schools Here to Stay

THE cold weather that it has been our lot to endure since long before Christmas has a sile golf more or less impossible on the local golf. courses. Too misch snow or too fright weather has proved too much for the hardy band which ordinarily gets out on the course once or twice a week during the winter months. The general closing down of the locker houses in response to the request of the fuel administrator has been an other factor in keeping the players off the courses. Those who can afford the time and the money have gone South. Those who have stayed at bome have gone in for indeer golf. Three of our big department stores have opened indoor golf schools.

There are those who contend that indoor golf does little good for the player's game. But in many ways the best plan of correcting faults that have bothered players is to go to one of these schools and get under the tutelage of one of the professionals in charge. The men who are instruct-Ing in the local department stores are all excellent teachers. The lessons are not long-a half-hour period-and golfers really get more bounds there in a few lessons than they can possibly get out of doors. They are not distracted by blue skies and the song of birds; there is not the same temptation to watch the flight of the ball and there is none of the long delay waiting for the cuddles to retrieve the buil.

THE indoor schools have demonstrated their worth and they are here to stay. If that old slice bothers you, if you can't keep your eye on the ball and if you have other golf faults in your game you will be surprised how readily they can be corrected by one of these professionals in the indoor schools

Another Cobb Found; Tyrus Now League Nestor

THE search for "another Cobb" finally has been rewarded and no other than Detroit is the team to land the long-sought prize. And it is not little brother Paul, either, who has flivvered about in various minors by reason of the reputation reflected from his celebrated family mate. This time it is Joe Cobb, a catcher, who, according to Detroit papers, is a native Pennsylvanian, is twenty-one years old, five feet nine inches high, weighs ere pounds and played last season with Cumberland, Md. Speaking of the original and only Terus Raymond, it seems strange indeed to reflect upon the fact that the game's greatest player now be the velerap performer in point of continuous service in the American League. Nap Lajole held the nestor crown until shunted to the miners, and Walney Crawford and Terry Turner have passed, the former as a major league player, while the latter has been relegated to the sub role. There are, of course, many players in the American League older than the Georgian. but the Dixle Peach now is the only regular player with more than cleven seasons to his credit. It will be recalled that Cobb landed in the majors in 1905, when he was not yet nineteen, and in consequence he now is only a few weeks above the thirty-one-year mark and just getting going good, If he hasn't ten years more of hig league basebull in his system signs are Many do not realize that Dode Paskert is the oldest regular in the two hig lengues. Paskert good late start, however, and began his minor league "secord only when Ty Cobb was getting into the majors. He is five years the senior of the Tiger whirlwind,

The old soldier of the National League is none other than the venerable Red Ames. He has played in the National a year longer than Ty Cobb has played in the American and is thirty-five years of age. He is young enough, however, to announce his readiness to take his regular turn on the hill

TY COBB has been criticized by some for not enlisting, but one thing is certain—the Georgian has some dependencies, including a wife, three kiddies and the Detroit baseball team.

Jim Thorpe May Become Oklahoma Oil Magnate

THE report that Jim Thorpe will retire from baseball next meason is re-enforced by rumor that the Sac and Fox all-around athletic performer has extensive oil holdings in Oklahoma and will devote his entire time hereafter to coaxing the valuable natural product from the soil of the old home reservation.

Thorpe's career on the diamond has been fitful and decidedly unsuccessful, and it is not unlikely that chagrin alone might influence a determination to quit. The big brave never has had a really regular berth under the big tent. Signed by McGraw in 1913 following his Olympic record at Stockholm and largely as a drawing card, he was allowed to hang around in uniform and then was shunted to the minors. His best and only good season was with Milwaukee in the American Association in 1916. He batted only .274, however, that season. Christy Mathewson had sufficient faith in him to give him another big league chance last year, but gave up the experiment and turned him back to McGraw. His term contract with the Glants expired last October.

The great athlete's career has been doubtless the most checkered of any in the annals of sport in this country. The records show that he was a professional ball player before he entered Carlisis. They show also that he played bush league ball for money every summer during his stay at Carlisle. The sensation yet is fresh in mind of these facts, developing nearly a year after his participation in the Olympiad, resulting in the recall of his various trophies won in the international games.

* * * FIME reason originally assigned for Thorpe's failure as a big I league player was inability to hit a curve ball. Perhaps it was due more to the fact that he was an Indian, for it is more and more demonstrated all the while that the American aborigine, while a great football player, was not cut out by nature for the diamond

Patsey Flaherty Will Build Up on One Pitcher

DATSEY FLAHERTY, the original drum fire boxman, who used to harl the pill with such rapidity that not even the umpires could keep their eyes on it, has transferred his managerial talents from the defunct South thatle to the Southern League and will pilot, the Mobile Guils through he coming season. And just to show that he was there with the old-time and the surprise stuff, not to mention nerve, after coming through with conventional announcement that he proposed to give the fans a fine and fancy aggregation, he proceeded to fire every player owned by the club h the exception of one pitcher.

cement suggests that while the boxman in question, Frank ett by name, should feel complimented, yet the responsibility entailed being the nucleus for a winning outfit is a grievous one. The burden liarly aggravating when the records plainly indicate that Flaherty's it assignment has been the goat berth in that circuit for many moons. It is better to be managing some team than being at large, and no the old Philly moundsman figures that he is taking a long chance ay and might as well go the limit. Looking at it in another light, tehns is nometimes a whole team. The said Frank Bennett may souther Walter Johnson.
