

NATION-WIDE DRIVE AGAINST ARMY BOOZE

Seeks to Rescind Order Allowing Soldiers to Drink Socially

TO GO TO WASHINGTON

A movement to have rescinded the recent Federal order allowing men in the national uniform to drink intoxicants "socially" is under way here today as part of a nation-wide movement.

A resolution declaring that the efficiency of the nation's fighters is at stake by being signed by prominent men and women and will be taken to Washington some time this week by Mrs. Joseph M. Gazzam, chairman of the executive committee of the Pennsylvania branch of the National Prohibition League.

"We are doing this for the sake of the young soldier or sailor who is away from home," said Mrs. Gazzam. "It is not right for women to offer intoxicating drinks to the nation's defenders. Any one who will not for a moment doubt the strength of our army and the present critical condition must realize that our efficiency must be at its best if we are to win the war."

The organization does not oppose men using intoxicants to stimulate them when they are in similar trying situations, Mrs. Gazzam said, but it opposes drinking in homes as "senseless" and menacing the efficiency of the army and navy. Quoting Bishop Lawrence, she said:

"What is criminal for my boy to use in the army is not fit for me to have in my house."

Prominent persons are back of the movement to keep "booze" away from the "boys." At a recent meeting of the executive committee in Philadelphia, George Burroughs, Jr., of the Philadelphia branch of the national organization became the Pennsylvania branch, State-wide in its scope.

A SURVEY OF THE SCHOOLS

The Schools Versus the System—Inefficiency of Double-Headed Arrangement—Professional and Business Departments Uncoordinated—Is Board Undemocratic?

A TANGIBLE DISTINCTION This is why the teachers make the somewhat loose but very tangible and tenable distinction between schools and system, and why they conscientiously and convincingly defend the former.

The school system is legislative, executive and judicial. The schools as represented by the teaching body are simply administrative. The consensus of opinion is that their work is well done and what weaknesses exist are due to the hampering effects of the system.

But the biggest handicap of all is the fact that the professional department is not cohesively related to the business department—that is, the secretarial department—and the collateral superintendencies of buildings and supplies—and is too remote from the source of authority, the Board of Public Education.

The business department exercises a censorship over all orders and requisitions. A professional expert among the associate superintendents will find his requisitions pigeonholed, since this censorship is able to let petty economy supersede very real needs recommended by the professional experts as demanding relief.

Some of the fault for educational deficiencies rests on the citizens, who do not take sufficient personal concern in the subject and leave all the burden on the board. The present writer has found both board members and officials under their willing to answer legitimate questions and to explain policies.

FARMERS SCENT LOSS IN NEW DRAFT CALL

Young Men of Woodbury Section Respond to Summons to Join Colors

WOODBURY, N. J., Feb. 25.—Among the number of drafted men to leave for war service early this morning were scores of more of farmer boys. The average farmer cannot be convinced that his son may be more valuable in France than on the farm, and particularly at this time, when the help that is available will determine just what acreage will be planted. The recent statement from a heavy produce buyer that he can supply any shortage in the farm-help line that may be wanted may be true to some extent, but the average farmer knows that this class of help cannot be compared with that given by a son or one interested in the work.
