

Evening Public Ledger

Philadelphia, Tuesday, April 2, 1918

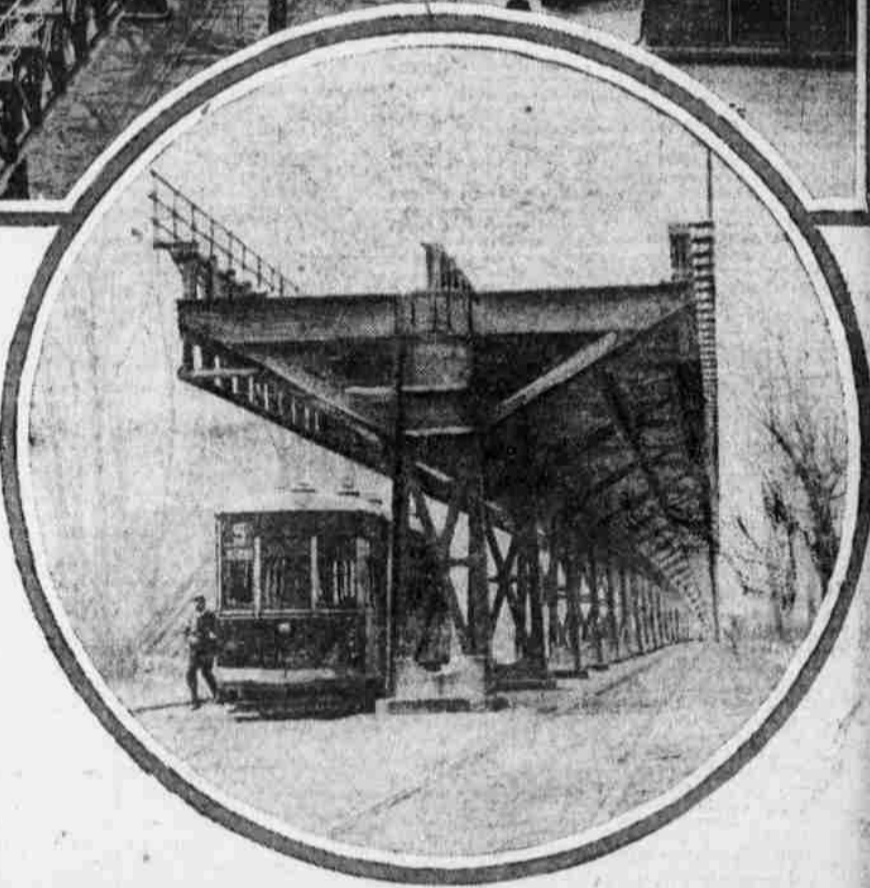

ODDS AND ENDS OF THE DAY'S NEWS CAUGHT BY THE CAMERA FOR THE LEDGER PICTURE PAGE

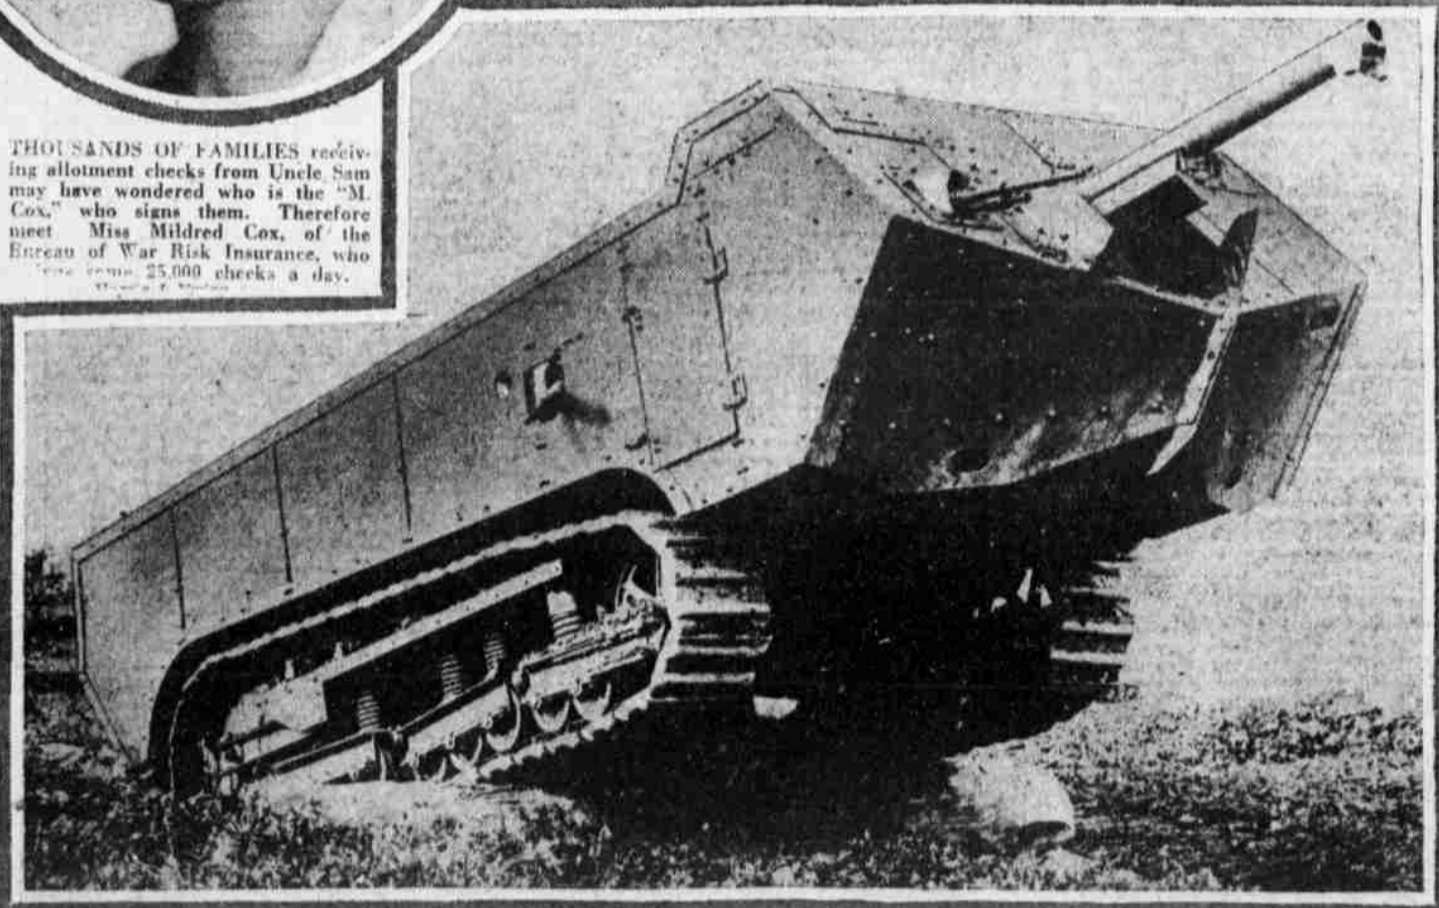

SPEAKING OF CAMARADERIE, here's an object lesson in that delightful spirit of "all for one and one for all" which has grown out of America's new alliance with La belle France. So it happens that when Francois, of the sister republic's navy, pays his first visit to New York, Sammee, one of Secretary Daniels's young white hopes, takes him in tow and explains the whys and wherefores of a great metropolis, even to the extent of a stroll along Fifth avenue.

TAKE A TRIP TO FRANKFORD, out along the "L." Wonder when we'll get it? Uncle Sam can tell. This little jingle recalls Mayor Smith's trip to Washington the other day in quest of permission to rush the line to completion. Accompanying are two views of the new road. The one above looks south from St. Mark's Church along Frankford avenue. To the right is the jumping-off place at Eye street.

THOUSANDS OF FAMILIES receiving allotment checks from Uncle Sam may have wondered who is the "M. Cox" who signs them. Therefore meet Miss Mildred Cox, of the Bureau of War Risk Insurance, who signs some 25,000 checks a day.

TWO SOCKS at one and the same time is being done by Mrs. Isobel Hill, of Washington, who got the idea from a newspaper story about an English woman who could "double knit." Mrs. Hill says the trick is easy enough. Just use two sets of needles and knit one sock inside the other.

THERE ARE STYLES IN TANKS just as in everything else and the very latest vogue is that introduced by the French. This newest thing in all tankdom is the St. Chamond model, so strikingly different from the types in use by the British, who originated this weapon.

Underwood & Underwood

GENERAL FERESHING'S FAITHFULS are on the march, comes the word from France, where all of America's armed forces in the field have been offered without reservation to our French Allies. They're on their way to the battlefield, these Americans, there to help shake the hold of the Hun on the throat of democracy's allied legions. And right above, in illustration of the proud news, you have American artillerymen as they actually appear on the march across the countryside of France.

Committee on Public Information

YOU'VE READ ABOUT the helmet hat and perhaps wondered a bit how you would appear in one; so here is one of these new domes, or hats (how appropriate is the slang appellation), worn by no less a personage than Mrs. Richard Harding Davis, better known to theatregoers as Bonnie McCay.

Underwood & Underwood