JUST GOSSIP ABOUT PEOPLE

Nancy Wynne Comments on Various Matters-Lieutenant Farre Picturesque Figure. She Orders Coal

THE spring weather this week has ! started a whole lot of people out of town to their country houses, and many that were closed on the Main Line because of the intense cold and lack of coal are opened up. Then, too, spring makes one think of out-doors affairs, of garden tetes, carnivals, horse shows and such things that are yearly gotten up for sweet charity. On Saturday of this week Mrs. Robert Daniels has asked a number of friends for a tea and a sale of the Mountain Arta and Crafts at her home in Rosemont, from 3 until half after 5 o'clock. The tea is to be given under the auspices of the Philadelphia Auxiliary of the Southern Industrial Association.

You know these mountain arts and crafts consist of the most wonderful baskets and rugs and bedspreads made of patchwork. They are the most beautiful things. All the brides-to-be are crazy about them for their trousseaux.

Mrs. E. Waring Wilson, Mrs. Cyrus S. Radford and Mrs. Paxson Deeter will preside at the tea tables, and there are a number of patronesses, so there is little doubt that the sale will be a success.

LEON DOWNING is home on a fursteadily at sea. And wasn't it dandy to think that his furlough came just the week of the Mask and Wig, and there he was on Monday night, everybody greeting him and banging him on the back.

"Why, there's old Leon!" every one was saying, and from the time he was first spled I believe he shared the pight's attention with the actors themselves. He looks awfully well. Somehow it makes you proud to know these men who were among the first to answer the country's call, doesn't it?

THOUGH the news of Doctor Hodge, Doctor Dillard and Miss Stambaugh is reassuring, their familles cannot help feeling anxious.

Indeed, every one is anxious now, for proud though we are to know that our men were offered and accepted by the French we dread the first news of casualties. Base hospital No. 10, to which Dr. Edward Hodge and Dr. Harry Dillard are attached, was the first base hospital unit to leave Philadelphia after war was declared by the United States. And those twenty-five doctors, most of whom we all know well, and their assistants and nurses and orderlies have been in the thick of it all for nearly a year, though we have not been just sure of where the hospital is. Now we know it is near the present battlefront, and our hearts go up in prayer for our "brave men and true" who are working day and night to save the shattered lives of the men, whether French, British or American. Thank God the dispatches say the wounds are only slight and that Doctor Hodge will soon be back on duty. The reports say that Miss Stambaugh's wounds were slight, too. Slight or not, the anxiety is great for those of us who cannot be there to see just how things

And meanwhile our men are marching on to the battlefront 100,000 strong, fresh, brave, fine American men. I'll warrant there are few of us who can think of this and keep down the lump that rises in the throat.

God bless them! God bless them!

AM really looking forward to the private view of Lieutenant Farre's paintings tomorrow night with the greatest pleasure. I saw him at the opera on Tuesday. He was Miss Nina Lea's guest, but through some mistake was directed upstairs to the grand tier, I found out afterward, for the poor gentleman had rather a bad time, as he cannot speak English. Fortunately he reached the Stotesbury box, and Mrs. Mitchell, who was doing the honors with her father, Mrs. Stotesbury being unable to be present, came to the rescue by conversing with him in French, finding out he was Miss Lea's guest and conducting him to the box herself. He is quite stunning looking in his blue uniform, with his splendidly shaped head and long beard.

OF COURSE, you know that you must let the coal dealers know how much you need for next year and can now have your bins filled with the proper amount, but no more than that.

Well, a certain girl you know and I know, who, though not the head of the house, does the ordering for the househald, ordered her quota of tons, and beheld when the first arrived she found that it was not the proper size for the grate. What to do? She did not know what name to give the kind she wanted, so she went down to the cellar and picked out a plece the proper size. This she carried down to the coal dealer's office as a sample to show him "just the right size." NANCY WYNNE.

BELGIAN SENATOR ASKS AID FOR NATION'S ARMY

Stricken Country's Remaining Fighters Grateful to America, Says La Fontaine's Appeal

American aid to encourage the remnant of the Belgian army was invoked today by Senator Henri La Fontaine, of Belgium, president of the executive committee in America of gifts for Belgian soldiers, for which the Guaranty Trust Company is the deositary of funds. Senator La Fontaine authorized the folwing appeal: 'The great conflict now waging in France is every day adding to the work we must do for our men at the front. I wish, therefore, make an especial appeal to the American public at this time to help us to sustain the courage of our remaining soldiers who have been fighting the German invaders ever nce the war opened nearly four years ago

"All the Aliled countries have more than they can do, and only the assistance of our friends in America, has enabled our men to keep on fighting. Their gratitude knows no bounds. The following from a letter just received from a Belgian boy at the front, who was only seventeen years old when the war opened, is typical of many

"I was delighted to learn that your call for help has met with such generous reom gifts for Belgian soldiers are certainly great relief and encouragement, for the est majority of my comrades have no other help or moral support, their friends and (amilies being in the hands of the enemy." Hunting a Husband By MARY DOUGLAS

CHAPTER NXIX

The Bitter Decision THIS note come this morning:

Pear-I must see you. Can it be to night? Wire me.
When I saw Jim I was startled. His face was drawn, haggard. He looked at ree out of sunken eyes. I felt so badly that I could only say, "My dear, my dear."

Jim looked at me with the pathetic expression that a beaten dog gives its master.
"Sara, you know all," he said.
I nodded.

Sara, you know all, he said.

I nodded.

I have been weak before. But you are strong. I know you will belp me. When I first met you I saw that hidden strength. With you I felt I could conquer—

"Jim." I said softly, "It cannot be."

"But, Sarah," he said, grapping my hunds, "I thought you leved me."

"I do." I said again, very low.

"If you love me you cannot leave me now. This is the time I need you.

"I will try to help you, Jim. But I cannot marry you."

"Then you are ruining me. You on whom I have depended. You have descreted me. Marry me and I will give up drinking. I swear I will:"

"But how often have you sworn before?"
I asked.

"I did not have you then, Sara. You can save me if you will." His voice with that wonderful timbre was almost too hard to "Don't make me go all through it, Jim." I said. "It is not you alone. I would marry you if there was only you to think of. But it is more than that. It is those that come after us-the children."

after us—the children."

Jim rose. He looked at me once with a tired look. He turned aside his head.

"Can't we part friends?" I asked. He said nothing. When I looked up the room was empty. I heard the click of the door as it closed after him. I had only one longing to rush after him. To cry. "Nothing matters but our love." To hear again that deep heautiful voice. To see the look in those dear even.

beautiful voice. To see the look in those dear eyes.

But I am alone. I have done what I thought right. But oh, how hard, how bitter. I looked around at the room. I looked old, dingy, pretentions. I felt I could not stand it nor the four walls that shut me in. I opened the door softly. I walked swiftly up the dark street. I walked so fast that soon I had outstripped the last house. I am returned new. I am peaceful. Whether It is peace or only the numbing of my feelings I do not know. I do not care.
