This was the statement of Arno B.

King, of 308 North Thirty-seventh street. Camden, an American oftigen of German birth, when told that the mayy collier Cyclops, on which his son was a sailor, had probably been lost with all on board.

"He wanted to get on a destroyer," added the father, "so he could get a try at a submarine. I am glad he served his country." Six Philadelphia boys are known to have been on board the Cyclops, and in the families of all of them the great-est anxiety is feit today. The Philadelphians include: Samuel Goldstein, Stil Jackson streat
