of British Labor for Conferences With the Enemy

London, April 19. Herr Emil Bruck is a Prussian Socialis',-a genuine Sociality of the old school which flourished before the leaders of the German proletariat sold their democratic birthright for a mess of autocratic pottage. He was a member of the first "International" founded by Marx and Engels and a friend of August Bebei. Further, he was the editor of the social democratic newspaper in Germany, in which capacity he incurred the wrath of the bureaucracy and was imprisoned for twenty-one months and exited as a penalty for expressing his convictions the now dwells in England, but has re-mained in close touch with his old cult and was in correspondence with Bern-stein even after the outbreak of war, Altogether, Herr Bruck knows much of German social democracy, and he has expressed some striking comments on the British labor craving for conferences

"The growing tendency in the Beltish labor movement directed to forcing the hands of the Government in certain respects contains." he said, "an element of real danger, against which a warning is necessary. Like some of the abso-lutely honest leaders of the German Soof those billed in action. The list the destructive tendencies of the German rulers. I cannot believe that if any British labor leader could appreciate at its true value the depth of infamy of which the ruling classes of Germany are capable he would maintain the pacifist attitude which he has adopted since the commencement of the war.

Criticizes British Labor

"British labor leaders prossed the Government for details of the allied war aims, and when the Prime Minister stated the minimum they continued to advertise their grievances. Instead of advertise their grievances. Instead of the attention of the masses from the masses from the masses from the minimum conference they might be able to make the military operations. Their

As for German bourgeois 'or-gunized' democracy,' it did not exist be-fore the war. German Socialists them-selves having bitterly lamented that since 1870 it has completely disappeared.

"There remains the group of Minority Socialists. The leaders of this party are Liebknecht, Mehring, Bernstein, Hanse, Kautsky and Ledebour, While Hanse, Kautsky and Ledebour. While admiring the personal courage of Lieb-knecht, it must be remarked that even he regarded this war as a capitalist war, and for that reason alone voted against it. His idea was that the Eng-lish armament manufacturers had os nuch to do with the outbreak as the German Government or Krupps! As for Bernstein and Haase, they not only voted for the war credits, but Haase lowered if to such a degree that he actually us declaration of the the Reichstag on the 4th of August, 1914.
