EDDIE COLLINS, NEW IRON MAN, EQUALS CRAWFORD'S MARK FOR CONSECUTIVE LEAGUE PLAYING

RIGLER AND MORAN, AFTER MANY ARGUMENTS ON THE BALL FIELD ARE FRIENDS AND UMP. TOGETHER

Ten Years Ago New Umpire and Cy Got Along Like Two Members of a Battle Royal, but Moran Calls Rigler "Mister" Now

By ROBERT W. MAXWELL

O'ME day about ten years age, when St. Louis was playing the Phils here, a Card player questioned the judgment of the umpire on a third strike and a sweet little vocal duet was put on near the home plate. Of course, insuments of this sort always end the same way—the ump is victoriousat while this one lasted it was wonderful to behold.

"You big, lop-eared stiff!" said the player in mild, dulcet tones, "You girt seen that ball yet. You got the home plate mixed up with first base. because the ball was so wide it almost knocked the first baseman down. gow's a guy gonna break into the league with a yeggman like you behind You're nothing but a --- be enough for you," returned the umpire. "Go back to the wach and don't fall in the water bucket. You've had one foot in it all after-

"I mean every word I said, you porch climber!" shouted the player, "I'd "Beat it!" cried his umps. "Beat it now or you won't be with us long.

"As I said, you're nothin' but a-"To the showers, and I hope you drown yourself, you poor catfish," was he polite parting shot delivered by the monarch behind the plate. And that ended the argument. The player was Charley Moran and Hai Chase was somewhat puzzled by the closeness with which a sable citi-zen clung around his leeds at the train-ing camp in Montgonery, Ala. The dark gentleman was first on the ball field each day and stuck closer than three brothers through the practice sessions.

Finally, turning suddenly on the admiring negro, Hal asked him why such devotion. "Goodness me, Marse Chase," the black boy stammered. "Ah Jest can't keep mah eyes offen de way yo scoops up dem grounders and den had throws. What Ah wants, Marse Chose, is to learn de trick. Won't you show me."

"Sure thing, boy," stalled Hat. "You want to learn the trick so you can play first on your ball club." "Noscah, nossah," explained the African. "Dat scoop trick, Marse Chase, would be the grandest thing in de world for to catch chickens as they flutah."
