VETERANS OF '61 SCORN MOTORCARS TO MARCH

300 Civil War Men on Foot Will Carry Battle-Torn Flags Today

Three hundred veterans who tought for freedom in '61 will be among the informed men who will parade in the "March of Democracy" on Broad street his afternoon.

Old and infirm though some of them ere, they will walk-every last one of them. Canes will be well in evidence as, with heads upright, the Civil War veterans step out proudly to the the air of martial times of their day and the present resent generation.

Back of their desire to march again for freedom is a story of patriotism. For their march means a big sacrible to many of the grand, gray oid men. The parade bureau, through Casper W. Hacker, offered the veterans the use of motorcars, for it was known that the parade bureau, they have been a story of the grand of the veterans the use of motorcars, for it was known that the veterans the use of many were nor as alternative the desired of the veterans the use of motorcars, for it was known that
